Tax Boost Coming This Month

WHEN was this picture of Douglas Street taken? If you guessed late afternoon or early evening you failed our weather test. It was at exactly 10:15 this morning. Clouds laden with that famous "liquid British Columbia sunshine" blackened the city before proceeding on to the Mainland. But, don't feel too sad, there is more "sunshine" (not the dry type) predicted late Saturday.

Inflation Check Temporary Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp announced today he will raise taxes temporarily later this month.

He told a surprised House of Commons the "new temporary tax measures" will be part of an integrated program to check the inflation of prices and costs.

He gave no hint of what kind of taxes he will increase, or the amount of it. But there was immediate speculation that he would raise personal income taxes, rather than corporation or sales taxes.

The Commons was in an uproar after the announcement, even bringing John Diefenbaker to his feet for the first time since his defeat in September as Progressive Conservative leader.

Opposition parties demanded a full-dress debate immediately. They said Mr. Sharp's announcement was unsettling to financial markets and the country generally.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled out the request, saying it was apparent there would be a "sufficiently early opportunity" for the matter to be raised in the Commons.

MUST HOLD DOWN COSTS

Mr. Sharp said the government is determined to hold its budgetary expenditures next year to $10,300,000,000. This will be a 4½-per-cent increase from this year's spending, less than half the increase which has been made annually in recent years.

The $10,300,000,000 figure does not include the writing-off of Expo deficits, or any provision for the start of medical care insurance next July 1 in those provinces willing to go ahead.

Mr. Sharp said that "to the extent that medicare proceeds next year," the government will introduce further taxes to meet the cost, or make reductions in other government spending programs.

"We will not increase our borrowings to finance it," he said.

Mr. Sharp also said the government will restrict its demands on the capital market to less than $750,000,000 in the fiscal year starting next April 1. This year, it has had to raise $1,500,000,000 in bond and other borrowing, and buy running

Bomb Blast Injures Promoter

TORONTO (CP) — Police today said Mayer Rush, badly injured in the explosion of a time bomb in his hotel room, was revived in hospital at 11 a.m. after his heart had stopped beating.

Rush, a business man and promoter, was to have appeared in court at 9 a.m. today on $100,000,000 stock fraud charge.

He was reported in poor condition just after noon after undergoing an hours-long operation. Explosion of the bomb beneath his bed in a sixth-floor room of the Sutton Place Hotel left him with extensive injuries to his chest and face.

Seconds after the blast sent glass and debris flying on to downtown Bay Street, firemen responded to alarm bells and broke down the door to Rush's blazing room.

It was the second time in less than a year that mob-like tactics have been used on Rush, 45, an occasional stock promoter.

Last Feb. 20 he was beaten with a baseball bat and needed 80 stitches for cuts.

The time bomb was placed under his mattress just about where his head would fall in sleep, police said. It was set to go off at 3:42 a.m.

●

Arson and bomb squad detectives said it appeared to be an alarm clock type wrapped in masking tape with two feet of wires leading to a detonator cap.

Rush had been living at the hotel, one of the newest and poshest apartment-hotels in Toronto, for several months.

Rush and lawyer Joseph Williams, 43, were charged last June 21 following investigations by the Ontario Securities Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission in the U.S.

Manuel Britstone, 49, of Toronto also was charged as a preliminary hearing into the case came to a close.

Britstone pleaded guilty to the stock fraud charges and was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $10,000.

The charges were laid in connection with activities in British Overseas Mutual Funds Corp. and Darien Co., S.A.

ASSAULT ON POLICE ALLEGED AT SIT-IN

MONTREAL (CP) — Two McGill University students were charged with assaulting police who moved in early today to forcibly evict about 30 demonstrating students from the office of Principal H. Rocke Robertson.

The students had forced their way into the office late Thursday in a continuation of around-the-clock sit-in at the main university administration building.

The sit-in has been in progress since Tuesday night as a protest against a university administration threat to take action against three staffers of the McGill Daily, the student daily newspaper, for printing an obscene article.

Space Program Gets Big Lift

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (Reuters) U.S. spacemen stood a giant step closer to the moon today after the successful test of an unmanned Apollo spacecraft and a perfect lunar landing by Surveyor VI.

The unmanned Surveyor touched down gently on the moon's surface at 8:01 p.m. EST Thursday and within an hour was sending pictures of a cliff which scientists described as "the most rugged feature we have yet seen on the moon."

The Apollo command module, in which Americans will eventually ride to the moon, splashed down in the Pacific eight hours, 36 minutes and 54 seconds after being launched Thursday on the maiden flight of a towering Saturn rocket.

The Apollo flight "clearly demonstrates that this team had the competence to take on a manned lunar landing program . . . and also any other program this country believes is worthwhile," said Robert Seamans, deputy administrator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dr. Werner von Braun, father of the giant Saturn V rocket, said he did not know of a single incident during the space mission that would have endangered astronauts if they had been aboard.

Flight director Glenn Lunney said first information from the recovery ship U.S.S. Bennington showed that the heat shield of the spacecraft was subjected to temperatures even higher than the 4,500 degrees fahrenheit expected on its 25,000-mile-an-hour plunge back into earth.

Officials said the craft landed 18,500 yards from the target area, 600 miles northwest of Hawaii.

RUGGED LAND MASS

Pitted with craters and strewn with rocks, this area apparently has a different structure than the smoother landing areas already explored and experts must know if its surface would bear the weight of a manned craft.

LEADERSHIP BIDS HALTED

'Run Departments,' PM Tells Ministers

PEARSON

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson has told would-be successors in his cabinet to stop their leadership campaigns as long as he is leader of the government, informed sources say.

The prime minister is reported to be greatly annoyed that some of his ministers have apparently been working harder for the Liberal leadership than in running their departments.

Sources said Thursday Mr. Pearson's instructions have resulted in quick cancellation of plans by Finance Minister Sharp, External Affairs Minister Martin and Transport Minister Hellyer to attend the Alberta Liberal convention in Edmonton this weekend.

Registrar-General Turner is understood to have cancelled out Wednesday before Mr. Pearson put his foot down on leadership campaigning by some of his cabinet ministers.

Mr. Pearson's crackdown is understood to apply particularly to Mr. Sharp, Mr. Hellyer and Mr. Martin.

HURRIED TALKS

There were reported to have been hurried talks between Mr. Sharp, Mr. Martin and Mr. Hellyer about what to do concerning

The only Alberta Liberal MP is H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat) who deserted the Social Credit party in September.

Last winter Mr. Sharp, Mr. Martin and Mr. Hellyer prepared to attend a Liberal convention in Quebec City—without invitations—to push their leadership aspirations.

They cancelled out when word of their plans reached Mr. Pearson.

The prime minister is said to feel that attention to government matters must prevail over any leadership activity by cabinet members.

A day or two after the Commons reconvened Sept. 25 he ticked off the cabinet in general for its poor attendance in the house.

EXPECTS 1968 RETIREMENT

No such announcement is expected until after the federal-provincial conference here in late January or early February —and only then if the conference goes well.

An informant said Mr. Pearson's instructions may backfire in that they might give the impression he is trying to hang on to power.

Others said, however, that Mr. Pearson had no intention of staying in office a moment longer than his party wishes.

Mr. Turner was in Vancouver Thursday. Mr. Hellyer left for Prince Edward Island soon after the cabinet meeting. Mr. Sharp and Mr. Martin did not comment on reports about the prime minister's action.

WIRE BRIEFS

Gang Captured

MONTREAL (CP)—Four men today stole an estimated $20,000 payroll from an east-end bottling plant, but were captured moments later in a maze of paper boxes in a nearby factory to which they fled. Police recovered a sack containing all the money.

Four Executed

HONG KONG (UPI) — Four anti-Mao "counter revolutionaries" were tried and put to death at a public trial in the south China city of Canton before a crowd of more than 7,000 persons, Canton radio reported.

Criminal Negligence

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bernhard Ernsteing, 27, was charged with criminal negligence following a two-car collision early today in which an 18-year-old girl was killed. Dead is Susan Campbell of Vancouver, a passenger in the second car.

Contract Extended

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Lions football club announced today that head coach Jim Champion's contract has been extended. The new contract runs until the end of the 1969 season.

Against Manning Idea

EDMONTON (CP) — David McDonald, past-president of the Alberta Liberal Association, said today that an appeal by Alberta Premier E. C. Manning for unity on the political right is undesirable.

EXCHANGE NOT SHAKEN

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock exchange carried a major advance into the eighth day today despite announcement by Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp that taxes would be increased later this month to offset inflation.

The industrial index, main indicator of market performance, was up, continuing an advance that began a week ago Thursday.

Grim 'N' Bare It Types Grounded

Airlines have rules about passengers. They won't accept babies under seven days old, the mentally deranged, anyone with a contagious disease, or drunks.

But someone without shoes? Or someone who needs a bath?

"We don't want to dictate fashion," said an Eastern Airlines spokesman, "but we now require shoes."

An industry journal, Aviation Daily, says "airlines should exercise their right to refuse passage to those, not meeting cleanliness standards."

The American Civil Liberties Union says airlines have no authority to decide cleanliness.

"No right at all," said a spokesman. "To do so is the same kind of reasoning that kept Negroes in the back of the bus."

BORSTAL TO RESCUE

Lonely Parolee Finds a Friend

By KATHRINE THOMAS

The youth didn't know where to turn.

He had just served time at the New Haven Training School, a correctional institute for young offenders, for stealing.

Now he was afraid.

How could he face the problem of making his way anew in society?

He had to find a place to live, a job, and at the moment he didn't have enough money for a decent meal.

How could he hope to go "straight" when he had no one to whom he could turn for advice and encouragement?

Then he remembered a program given by the British Columbia Borstal Association to the young offenders at New Haven.

The speaker had explained the purpose of the association: to help parolees or those on probation find employment and living quarters, to lend funds to help ease the initial financial burden, to provide each boy with a sponsor who would encourage him in his new life and to give guidance counselling where needed.

All these worthwhile projects are made possible in part by public contribution to the united Appeal.

The association, since its inception in 1948, has helped more than 90 Greater Victoria boys.

In November 1966 the Dick Bell-Irving Home was opened to provide a kind of halfway house to help boys making the transition from a penal institute to the outside world.

More than 60 lads passed through the program last year and 85 per cent successfully completed their paroles.

The estimated total local budget for the association during 1967 is $23,204. Last year the appeal raised $2,315 or .6 per cent of the total United Appeal drive.

United Appeal

Put Him Up On Top

Today's official audited figures for the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal stood at $511,050, or about 85 per cent of the appeal target of $600,000.

FAMILIAR RUMBLE

Dief Thunders Over Tax Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Diefenbaker thunder rumbled through the House of Commons again today.

Silent since he lost the Conservative leadership in September, John Diefenbaker rose in the Commons after an unprecedented announcement by the government that will increase taxes later this month.

"The conduct of the government," he said, "would make a speechless member rise in his place."

He could remember no instance anywhere of a government announcing a tax increase during stock-market hours and without giving details.

Speaking to a Conservative motion for an emergency debate on Finance Minister Sharp's statement, Mr. Diefenbaker said the issue could not be left without immediate discussion.

"Something has occurred in the last few hours that has brought the government to its senses, but it refuses to say what.

"Silence now can only lead to uncertainty the like of which has not been seen in this country."

Glaring at a sober Liberal front bench that had applauded him as he stood to speak, Mr. Diefenbaker demanded: "Why don't you come clean? Why don't you give the facts?"

"There must be a debate today or the results will be damaging to the country to a degree unprecedented in proportion."

A wait of four or five days to hear details of Mr. Sharp's tax proposals would put Canada into turmoil, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Outside the Commons, television cameras focused on Mr. Diefenbaker and 13 reporters surrounded him. A few yards away two reporters chatted with his successor, Robert L. Stanfield.

"It's another Black Friday such as we had in 1956—the government running roughshod," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Text of Statement By Finance Minister

I should like to make a brief statement concerning the fiscal position of the government which I will be discussing with the finance ministers of the provinces next week.

The government has decided to introduce new fiscal measures including temporary tax measures later this month. The government proposes that the arrangements for introducing and debating these be the subject of consultation through the usual channels.

These tax measures will be part of an integrated program to chek the inflation of prices and costs now occurring in Canada, and to reduce excessive pressures on our capital markets. Higher taxes in the coming year will be a better and fairer means of covering our expenditures than attempting to increase our borrowings to levels that could only be reached by inflationary methods that would increase prices further. Prices and costs are rising at rates which clearly require some restraint through fiscal policy as well as by other means.

When our proposed tax increases are combined with restrictions on government spending programs, also to be announced later this month, and substantial reductions in our lending programs, the government will be able to hold its over-all net cash requirements and its consequent demands on the capital market to less than $750,000,000 in the next fiscal year, apart from unforeseen changes in our exchange reserves. This is less than half our cash requirements this year. The government has also decided that budgetary expenditures next year, apart from medicare and apart from the writing off in our accounts of Expo deficits, will be held to $10,300,000,000.

This means that we will limit the increase in expenditures to about 4 per cent between this year and next, a rate of increase less than half of those of recent years. To the extent that medicare proceeds next year, we will as already indicated introduce further taxes to meet the costs or make offsetting reductions in existing expenditure programs. We will not increase our borrowings to finance it.

...TAXES

down the government's cash balances.

The finance minister was peppered with opposition questions, asking why he made the announcement while financial markets were open. He said the government wanted to make clear its intentions and objectives before the federal-provincial meeting of finance ministers here Nov. 16.

Outside the House, an informant said Mr. Sharp did not believe his announcement would affect stock markets.

It was also learned the minister's statement was carefully examined by the whole cabinet Thursday and again Friday morning before the Commons met. But neither the minister nor the cabinet decided what taxes are to be raised, or by how much.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said Mr. Sharp's statement gave emphasis to the "very serious situation" in which the country found itself.

The proposed tax increase bore out the fear of opposition MPs and financial writers.

Mr. Lambert said the finance minister should have announced that a budget would be brought down at a certain date. Mr. Sharp asked him whether it would not be preferable to make such announcement after discussion among the House leaders.

HITS SHARP'S ACTION

The request for an emergency Commons debate on the development was moved by Michael Starr, interim Opposition leader. He said the minister's action in making the statement while the stock markets were open and without giving details could cause chaos.

"Is it that the government has got this country into bankruptcy?" he asked.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who has sat silent in the House ever since losing the Conservative leadership, said the government's action would "make a speechless member rise."

He accused the government of going from blunder to blunder.

Mr. Starr's motion was immediately seconded by New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas, who said the finance minister "has either said too much or too little."

The country is entitled to "a much fuller explanation," Mr. Douglas said.

The proposal also won Social Credit support. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke) said:

"The business before the House cannot compare in importance with the financial crisis suggested by the minister this morning."

DEBATE IMPLICIT

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste-Chapleau) said it is common knowledge that there is "nothing more permanent than temporary tax increases."

Solicitor-General Pennell said that an opportunity for debate is "clearly implicit" in Mr. Sharp's statement that the government intends to introduce measures later this month.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) immediately contested Mr. Pennell's contention. Mr. Knowles said the finance minister has actually "made it clear that he does not want the House, with Mr. Speaker in the chair, to debate this at all."

The finance minister's hope is that since the committee on ways and means is already in session, the matter will stay there, Mr. Knowles claimed.

Gilles Gregoire (Ind—Lapointe) said the prime minister requested all cabinet ministers to stay in Ottawa this weekend and this illustrated the urgency of the situation.

"What can we expect over the weekend?" the separatist Quebec MP asked. "The cabinet is going to sit over the weekend. Obviously some catastrophe is impending."

DETAILS LATER

To repeated questions by Mr. Douglas, the finance minister would only say he planned to announce details of the tax changes "later this month."

However, if House leaders of the opposition parties preferred to have the measures introduced by means of a full budget debate, he was agreeable.

The government was reluctant to propose this course "in view of other urgent business before the House. . . ." Opposition jeers drowned him out at this point.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary North) asked whether the minister would announce the results of the most recent Canada savings bond drive. Mr. Sharp said all figures are not yet available.

He said he planned to give a "complete account of the financial position of the government" when he introduces the tax measures.

Another indirect purpose behind his statement was to make mortgage money available for prospective home buyers at lower interest rates.

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Friday the government has further shaken the confidence of Canadians.

He made the comment to reporters after Finance Minister Sharp's announcement that taxes will be raised by an unspecified amount.

Mr. Stanfield said means must be taken to meet inflation but that it is "most regrettable to do this at the cost of the taxpayer."

Mr. Stanfield said the most charitable thing which could be said for the government was that it was most regrettable that it had allowed things "to get to this stage."

MINISTER WELCOMES AMENDMENTS

Pennell Flexible on Death Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Pennell pleaded with MPs Thursday to abolish at least partially the death penalty and authorize its use only for murderers of prison guards and police officers for a five-year trial period.

He directed a special plea to those who would do away with hanging in all cases:

"I believe that this bill will only be defeated in principle if there is an unhappy coalition between those who feel that the bill has not gone far enough and those who feel that it has gone too far."

He spoke as the Commons opened debate on his bill to limit the death penalty. Voting on the measure is to be free of party lines.

CONSIDER CHANGES

After second reading—approval in principle—Mr. Pennell said he would listen with "great interest and deep respect" to any amendments that might be moved.

An attentive Commons listened to 10 speeches—five favoring the bill, four against it and one undecided. The debate continues today with Prime Minister Pearson expected to be one of the speakers.

"There is an ancient expression . . . that half a loaf is better than no bread," said the Toronto lawyer. "It might be said by those who favor abolition that the present bill provides for 99-100 of the loaf and that it would be wrong to reject it."

Those who spoke against the bill laid heavy emphasis on the fact that Parliament, only 18 months ago, voted to retain hanging for all convicted murderers.

They also drew attention to the 27 commutations ordered by the cabinet since the Liberals took office in 1963. There have been no hangings in Canada since 1962 and so the country in effect already had done away with the death penalty, they argued.

Two speakers called on the cabinet to obey the will of Parliament and to hang those sentenced by the courts.

Mr. Pennell pointed too results of a study by a British royal commission that led to a U.S. bill ending hanging for a trial period.

He said most murderers are either insane, in the throes of violent passion or emotion or else calculating planners. In each case, the death penalty would not be a deterrent.

He quoted the British case of Timothy Evans, executed in 1950 for a killing later found to be the work of a prosecution witness, to point out possible miscarriages of justice.

He promised there would be no automatic parole of convicts given life imprisonment in lieu of the death penalty.

SOCIETY'S GUILLOTINE

Mr. Matheson said hanging is "cowardly" and while the bill is not perfect, it was a step in the right direction.

Mr. Stafford said society could be protected just as well by imposing life sentences on convicted murderers.

Philatelist Sought

BURNABY (CP)—RCMP are looking for the owner of an 1873 three-cent Canadian stamp, valued at $30. It was turned over to them by a stamp dealer who said three girls asked him to value it, then fled when he said he would have to check with police to see if it was stolen.

Not Quite Perfect

EDMONTON (CP)—A police cruiser, looking for a perfect driver to receive the Edmonton safety council's daily $10 award, pulled a car to the curb and congratulated the woman behind the wheel.

The driver burst into tears.

She was unable to produce a licence. In fact, she had never taken a driver's test.

The $10 went to another motorist.

Ontario Talks Seen as Crucial

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Quebec Bureau

NEW YORK — Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson made a favorable impression on influential Americans, both in the financial world and in the shaping of United States foreign policy, at a series of meetings here this week.

Mr. Johnson told them that he believed the "confederation of tomorrow conference," called by Ontario Premier John Robarts to open in Toronto Nov. 27, would lead to a "new Canada" based on the partnership of two cultures.

The Robarts "confederation of tomorrow conference" has emerged as a key point of interest of the visit.

CLOSE WATCH

It was learned that the United States State Department will keep a close eye on the conference as an important clue to Quebec's future and the subject is understood to have been a major point of discussion at the meeting with the council on foreign relations.

Mr. Johnson's visit revealed a keen American interest in Quebec's long-range political future.

But it has shown no evidence that the current political climate in Quebec and the July visit of President Charles de Gaulle have created difficulties for the province in the American money market.

Although the most important meetings attended by Mr. Johnson were closed and strictly confidential, it was learned that he went over well.

"Frankly, we had expected a sort of local political figure," one prominent Wall Street figure said Thursday. "But we found Mr. Johnson very impressive."

Although the official purpose of Mr. Johnson's visit was to meet a long-standing invitation to address the centennial year dinner meeting of the Canadian Society of New York Thursday, the most significant events were two off-the-record question-and-answer sessions that gave some of the most influential men in the United States a chance to size Mr. Johnson up.

FOREIGN RELATIONS

Wednesday Mr. Johnson met the council on foreign relations. Thursday he was the special guest at a meeting of the Calvin Bullock Forum.

The council, which has an important voice in American Foreign policy, includes among its members Secretary of State Dean Rusk and other leading officials of the state department, such leading political figures as Senator Robert Kennedy and New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller, and economic leaders who are concerned with international affairs.

The Calvin Bullock forum is a highly-exclusive group selected from the elite of the New York financial establishment. It meets twice a month after the closing of New York Stock Exchange to hear and question speakers on economic and social questions.

HEAD TABLE

The last item on Mr. Johnson's official schedule was "financial follies 1967," the annual dinner today of the New York Financial Writers Association, attended by some 1,200 business leaders. The premier was to sit at the head table but make no speech.

At the Canadian Society dinner Thursday, the one public appearance of the visit, Mr. Johnson stressed the importance of the "Confederation of Tomorrow Conference," in achieving Quebec's constitutional aims.

UN Council Tries Again For Mideast Private Pact

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United Nations Security Council adjourned its Middle East debate early today amid new hope that private discussions could bring lasting peace to the area.

The council agreed to defer its public debate on the matter until Monday after a protracted session, called at the request of Egypt which began Thursday.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, who formally introduced a resolution to send a special UN representative to the Middle East to try to bring about a climate of reconciliation, said the U.S. would throw its "diplomatic and political influence" behind the efforts of an envoy "to achieve a fair and equitable settlement so that all in the area can live in peace, security and tranquility."

Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov urged the council to make a decision that would guarantee the sovereignty and territorial intregrity of all states, meet the principle of self-determination for the peoples of the area and lead to the establishment of a stable peace.

U.S. TRADING ARMS FOR MEN

BANGKOK (Reuters) — Informed Thai sources said today the United States has agreed to give Thailand ground-to-air missiles and other modern weapons in exchange for an additional 10,000 Thai troops in South Vietnam.

U.S. embassy officials here confirmed that negotiations with Thailand included the supply of ground-to-air missiles and other weapons but could not disclose the exact amount of military aid until talks are complete.

In return, Thailand would send a light infantry division of 10,000 troops, equipped with American weapons, to South Vietnam, they said. Thailand at present has a regiment serving in Vietnam.

The discussions followed President Johnson's recent request for an increase in the Thai troop strength in South Vietnam and his promise to give additional military aid to Thailand.

Twentieth-Century Security

TO READ THE TESTIMONY released from United States congressional hearings on the American-Russian nuclear missile race is to enter cloud-cuckoo land. In a hearing this week as the western world prepared to observe Remembrance Day, the Pentagon and the Central Intelligence Agency reported hitherto classified information which revealed:

—Soviet Russia's present stock of inter-continental ballistic missiles could destroy only about 10 per cent of American land-based missiles if the Russians were to attempt a pre-emptive nuclear strike. The surviving American Minuteman ICBMs, along with Polaris and Poseidon submarine-based missiles, could retaliate by dropping more than 2,000 warheads on the Soviet Union, killing "almost half the population."

—Despite this superiority in weaponry, both in the numbers of missiles and in terms of megatons of nuclear explosive, the United States plans to widen its advantage over the Soviet Union and to offset any increased Soviet production by replacing single missile warheads with multiple ones.

—The big advantage of multiple over single warheads is that by packing ten 50 kiloton bombs into a missile instead of one 10 megaton bomb, it could destroy "10 times as many airfields, 1.2 to 1.7 times as many hard missile silos, and 3.5 times as many cities of 100,000 population."

—Additional superiority will be attained by using the 10 megaton bombs in the form of multiple, independently targetable re-entry vehicles, each capable of being directed to a specific target.

On the other side of the fence, of course, the Soviet Union has tested its new orbital missile launching vehicle and has unveiled the new SS-9 ICBM capable of carrying a 25-megaton warhead. American intelligence agencies do not rate the orbital vehicle as a potent military weapon, but it has a powerful psychological effect since it can theoretically be stationed in space and be relatively immune to attack.

It is ironic that the figures on the awesome current and potential strength of the American nuclear missile force were paraded before the congressional committee in an effort to counter rising demands that the United States step up its missile-building program. The demands seem to be a repetition of the phony "bomber gap" charges of the early 1950s and the equally false "missile gap" of the early 1960s. If the evidence of the Pentagon experts is not accepted by the politicians, however —and the odds that it will be are probably no better than even—another round of major nuclear armaments competition between the United States and Soviet Russia may get under way. The Russians seem no longer to be able to endure a position of nuclear missile inferiority, and the Americans are not likely to accept parity. That leaves the road wipe open to ultimate destruction.

Who Shall Fish?

FISHERIES MINISTER H. J. Robichaud has told the Commons that "consideration is being given to means of restricting entry into the lobster fishery in an equitable manner"—a study by the department inspired by the fact that "a majority of lobster fishermen in all districts favor some limitation of the number permitted to engage in the fishery."

This raises again a question long familiar to commercial fishermen. It asks, in brief, if anyone has the right to permit some Canadians to fish for a living and to refuse the same right to others. At present, fishing licenses are available to any Canadian.

Federal authorities take precautions to preserve stocks from over-fishing by regulating gear, the periods during which boats can fish, and the size of catches. They do not regulate the numbers of fishermen who may share the catch any more than they deny the right of any Canadian to pursue the work for which he is qualified. In consequence the number trying to make a living is frequently too large in various fisheries to assure a full return to each man. The argument is made that fewer fishermen than are now engaged could harvest all the fish available under orthodox conservation measures, and their individual earnings would be more substantial.

Two problems are involved. One is the perpetuation of the natural resource—in this case lobsters. That can be done by existing measures restricting the periods of legal fishing or the size of the catches. The other is the protection of the right of any citizen to engage in fishing if he believes he has the skill and the equipment to do so. Denial of that right by law or monopoly merely on the grounds of restraining numbers is not acceptable to Canadian custom, and if imposed in one field of enterprise could not logically be withheld from others. Mr. Robichaud should not establish arbitrary categories of Canadians—some who can work at this trade or that, and some who are banned.

State Secret

DEFENCE MINISTER LEO Cadieux, replying to a question in the Commons Wednesday, stated that it was not the intention of the department of national defence to make public a report on unidentified flying objects compiled from investigations by the department and the RCMP of a purported sighting near Falcon Lake, Manitoba.

Why on earth — or in space — not? The defence department report presumedly says (a) the objects sighted were flying saucers, (b) they were not flying saucers but explainable natural phenomena, or (c) their nature is still unknown. If it is a case of (b) or (c) there can be no reason for not saying so. And if it were a case of (a) then, surely, this would not be something to be kept from the people.

An aura of obsessive secrecy on the subject of unidentified flying objects has afflicted official quarters, not just in Canada but also in the United States and other parts of the world including Russia. Such reticence has served to excite public speculation on a good many implausible reports and a few which still await answers. This is one enticing field in which the credulous ignore top scientists in favor of amateur observers and titillating rumor. If Mr. Cadieux remains silent because he believes the whole thing to be unworthy of serious participation by government, he should say that too.

What Kind of Mistake?

SOME QUESTION IS LEFT BY the confession of King Hussein of Jordan that the Arab statement implicating the United States and Britain with direct involvement in the Arab-Israeli war was "a mistake."

"We have regretted this mistake," he says. "We have admitted it to be a mistake." And he adds that the Arab people knew Britain and the United States were not involved.

The question that arises, of course, concerns the exact nature of the mistake for which an apology has been given. Was it an honest mistake of temporary belief which later was corrected by the facts? Or does King Hussein mean that it was a mistake to embark on a deliberately false accusation which could so quickly be refuted, placing the accusers in an embarrassing position?

POISED TO LEAP FOR LIFE — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

After Belly-Crawling to de Gaulle

IN a certain Midlands city I met a successful businessman who, in his youth, had been rescued with his companions from the heroic disaster of Dunkirk. This man said to me: "When they took us off the beach that day I never thought I'd see Britain crawling on her belly in front of de Gaulle to get back into Europe. But what else can we do?"

Hutchison

His bitterness and humiliation were echoed by countless other men, high and low, all over the island. Yet only a few surviving Little Englanders seem to think that their nation has any real alternative to membership in the European Common Market. Certainly the government, with one or two dissenting ministers, sees none.

In Canada, however, we have yet to realize the magnitude, and the courage, of Britain's decision or to grasp its effects on us.

Tragic Admission

To begin with, it means that Britain at last has admitted a tragic mistake in its proud refusal to enter the Common Market at the beginning when the chance was freely offered. It also means that Britain, the victor of two world wars, has learned, after long and vain denial, to accept a new and reduced place in the world as a nation no more powerful or rich than its defeated enemies.

History holds no parallel to this voluntary, peaceful readjustment of power, of business and, much more difficult, of mind. And I would doubt that any nation except Britain could make such an adjustment to the monstrous irony of things without a violent revolution and a completely changed system of government, as happened in Germany and Japan.

But can the adjustment be made through the chosen medium of the Common Market and beyond it, an ultimate political union of Europe? For the moment only President de Gaulle can answer that question and as a leading British statesman says, "the general will never forgive us for rescuing France twice in his lifetime."

Contempt for De Gaulle

It is bootless, of course, to rail against General de Gaulle's deepening megalomania and impossible to exaggerate the ordinary Briton's contempt for him. The practical question is, first, whether Britain can ever get into Europe and, second, what will happen if it does.

Despite all the discouraging news from Paris these days, it can be said with certainty that the British government is as sure in private as in public about the final result of the present ugly wrangle.

So is the government of the United States. Both governments have built their basic foreign policies on this assumption but both know, and have always known, that the European door may not be unlocked so long as Gen. de Gaulle rules France and resists the logic of our times. As the Americans put it, "until after the funeral." And its date is unknown.

Assuming that entry to Europe is only a matter of time and that the post-Gaullist forces of history will ensure it in the end, how will it affect Britain's power and its economy; or, as George Brown prefers to say, its whole "destiny."

Historic Decision

The plain fact is that no one can foresee these consequences in advance. Britain's decision to bridge the English Channel is no more than an act of faith and possibly the largest conscious decision since William of Normandy crossed the Channel.

Other decisions have been just as momentous, the decisions of 1914 and 1939 for example, but they were simple, instinctive, inevitable, and were taken without question in the subconscious of the British race. Today's decision, on the contrary, is complex and conscious, it runs straight against all British instincts and it is by no means inevitable. Thus Britain has decided, by a rational process of argument and counter-argument stretching over some five years, to take a step from which there can be no return.

Two separate calculations underlie this resolve and they are supported on both sides of politics. The economic calculation is the most obvious and most compelling, though the political calculation (to be discussed later) is more inportant.

In 1960 Prime Minister Harold Macmillan told a friend that the distortions of the British economy, the weakness of some industries and the ingrained, insular habits of his people could never be changed by any government or internal policy. Only "the cold douche" of unrestricted European competition, he said, would cure these economic diseases and only the broad, total market of Europe could buy Britain's essential exports.

Macmillan Remedy Accepted

Many things, most of them bad, have happened since Gen. de Gaulle arrogantly slammed the door in Mr. Macmillan's face but Prime Minister Harold Wilson, completely reversing his earlier convictions, has been forced to accept Mr. Macmillan's remedy. The effective managers of British industry have done the same.

As perhaps the most powerful among them told me: "We've built some of the biggest and best industries in the world, and some damned sloppy ones as well. If you doubt it, look at the figures. Over a third of our exports are going to the Common Market, even over its tariffs. Actually we're installed deep in the Market already. But if there were no tariff our good industries wouldn't just grow. They'd explode."

These industries are too big, too sophisticated in their science and too efficient in their production to live successfully in any environment smaller than the whole world market. There alone can they win the full rewards of size and technology.

To Avoid Isolation

Hence if Britain believed that it was joining a European market which would then be closed, as far as possible, to the world it would remain outside and take its chances. It believes that as a member of the Common Market it, and probably it alone, can prevent Europe's return to protectionism, isolation and xenophobia.

It also believes that a European market including Britain and its trading partners of EFTA will quickly generate so much new wealth, becoming by far the largest market ever known, that its total imports must vastly swell the exports of North America and nourish the entire world economy.

No one pretends, however, that entry into Europe will provide a sudden, painless cure for Britain's ills. No one denies that for the first five years or so the British economy on balance may be somewhat worse off than it is now before the original investment pays its dividends.

As Britain's tariffs are removed and it feels the fierce competiton of European imports even the balance-of-payments problem is likely to worsen, temporarily at least. Some of the smaller, softer industries will suffer grave damage and some of their managers are naturally opposed to the European adventure.

Farm Fears

So are most farmers, as I judge from taking to some of them from Scotland to Cornwall. They would lose their present state subsidies and though their selling prices would rise under the European agricultural system (at the cost of an angry British housewife) they fear a net loss.

"It's all bloody crazy," said a gnarled old dairyman in Wales as he ordered a pint of bitter in the pub and produced a bun and a slab of cold tongue from his pocket to make a sandwich for his lunch. "Crazy, sure, but they'll do it. And then watch all them foreigners pourin' in to take over our jobs from us."

This appears to be the mood of the country — the adventure is doubtful, dangerous and unavoidable. But there is much more to it than economic calculation, as the next article will try to show.

Confusing

One who follows the press reports closely cannot help but become somewhat confused as some news creates doubts. For instance in November 3 issue our premier, when elaborating on Social Credit legislation prospects for next year, said the budget will likely be "tens of millions of dollars" ahead of this year's records. Next to that statement another: "Bennett urges volunteer action to avoid controls."

The future does not look too bright, chiefly because of the multiplicity of strikers demanding more. I, in my humble way, as a retired farmer with a little over 65 years of experience in Canada, have wondered if our pension for old age could be based on need rather than age, where many do not require it.—Harry Wyer, 234 Vancouver.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Wander around the roads and trails at Goldstream campsite and see the many changes that have taken place as the rains have given new life to the trees and shrubs.

There are many places where the ground is covered with the yellow maple leaves so that it looks like a beautiful golden carpet. In many places the cedars have shed their quota of needles and they look like fascinating ferns.

In some of the camping sites the green grass has grown. What a change from the dusty, bedraggled site during the summer! As the sunlight strikes through the trees it seems to reveal a beautiful green gem in a setting.

Hike along the stream trail where there are many dogwoods. You will see that almost every individual tree has a different color. Some are almost red, some tinged with a delicate pink, while others are a pale yellow. Each clump will be of one rootstock and therefore of the same shade.

As you walk around a bend there is a different color pattern provided by the dogwoods, maples, some willows and the conifers.

At the top of the grounds by the water tower there is a grove of trees that are entirely different from the rest of the whole park area. Here is a "new" forest in the making. Many years ago when the railway was built, a section was cleared off to make a campsite for the construction crew. It is apparent that a spur was run along the side of the clearing, and some of the bank cut away, as one can see by the different strata of the soil.

Now a new growth of trees is established. Among them are some lodge pole pines, which shows that the pines were a part of the "nurse" trees. Go, see and enjoy nature's ever-changing pattern.

Disarmament Lost Cause?

By RICHARD PURSER
From Washington

A LARGE and worried group of diplomatic and press observers gathered in a Senate hearing room Monday to seek an answer to a question suddenly thrust into renewed prominence: Can the arms race be stopped short of disaster? Recent developments in war technology, and mysterious sets of initials like FOBS, MIRV and PAR, have again raised fears that disarmament is a lost cause.

Purser

First there was Defence Secretary Robert McNamara's announcement that the United States would build a $5 billion defence system against Chinese missiles. Then, last week, came the news from the Pentagon that it believes the Soviet Union is developing a nuclear bomb that can orbit the earth, and be fired from orbit on to any target below.

No one in Congress is more disturbed by these ominous events than Senator Henry Jackson (Democrat-Washington), who is chairman of the subcommittee in military applications of the joint Senate-House atomic energy committee. His subcommittee's guests Monday were Deputy Defence Secretary Paul Nitze and Defence Research Director Dr. John Foster, who were invited to explain just what is going on and what it means.

Myth Dispelled

Sen. Jackson felt that the major implication of the Soviet orbital bomb was that the U.S. would have to build an anti-satellite defence and greatly extend its radar surveillance. He also said the Soviet move should dispel the myth that if the U.S. refrained from pursuing a certain line (the Pentagon rejected orbital bomb development four years ago), then the Soviet Union would also refrain.

Mr. Nitze was hard put to answer the latter point, but the ensuing discussion revealed an intriguing problem in defence semantics. Sen. Jackson was distressed that revelation of the Soviet move followed on the heels of the Oct. 10 ratification by both the Soviet Union and the U.S. of a treaty banning the placing of nuclear weapons in orbit. Did this mean the Soviets were breaking the treaty, or at least shattering the supposition of "good faith" behind it?

The Pentagon has the beginnings of its reply in the name it has chosen to give the Soviet bomb-to-be: Fractional Orbital Bombardment System (FOBS). The satellite carrying the nuclear weapon (or several nuclear weapons if the strategic system called Multiple Independent Re-Entry Vehicles, or MIRV, were used), would only go through part of its first orbit before firing its warheads. The weapon would not, strictly speaking, be "placed in orbit" and thus would not violate the outer space treaty.

Orbiting Banned

Mr. Nitze added that the treaty does not ban research and development of an FOBS system, nor does it prohibit the system from reaching the "in being" stage — that is, with the satellite launchers poised on their pads. It only prohibits the system from being placed in orbit.

But Sen. Jackson and his colleagues asked, is there anything to prevent the Soviets from delaying firing of the warheads until after the satellites carrying them have gone through one or more orbits?

The answer was no.

Then why hold in advance that FOBS would not break the treaty?

The underlying answer is that Mr. McNamara does not want to be pressured by Congress into building an incredibly costly anti-satellite defence, as he is now being pressured to extend the anti-Chinese missile defence system to cover Soviet earth-based missiles — an impossible task, he claims.

The rationalization presented by Mr. Nitze and Dr. Foster was that there would be no use in the Soviets letting the missile-carrying satellites go through a full orbit: all hope of surprise would be gone.

Evidence of Attack

It can't — but several dozen such satellites would have to be sent up to launch a successful attack. Anything less would merely set off the U.S. deterrent and wipe out the Soviet Union. The sudden appearance of several satellites coming over the horizon would be taken as evidence of an attack. (For the new U.S. Perimeter Acquisition Radar, or PAR, will be able to detect the satellites at their 100-mile altitude as effectively as the present BMEWS radar system detects ballistic missiles at their 800-mile altitude.)

To Mr. McNamara, the Soviet Union is simply not going to achieve any strategic gain from FOBS, which is why he professed not to be concerned by the development when he announced it.

But legislators wonder why the Soviets continually pursue courses other than those Mr. McNamara recommends as best for them. Can they know something he doesn't?

Did the Columbia Deal Teach Us Our Lesson?

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

(Mr Crowe is associate professor of history at Atkinson College, York University. Mr. Fisher, a former NDP MP, lectures in Canadian government at Carleton University.)

In our Columbia River dealings with the shrewd American horse traders it now seems fairly clear that we sold ourselves along with the horse. It is too late to do anything insofar as the Columbia goes.

Fisher

Bennett of British Columbia and a Conservative and a Liberal government at Ottawa have tied us to an arrangement which is not in our interests, for 60 years in some respects (the minimum life of the treaty), 80 years in others and forever in still others.

Toronto business economist Larratt Higgins, who has specialized in the economics of energy, particularly hydro-electric energy, now finds he has much more support for this opposition to the Columbia deal on the grounds of Canadian interests than he had a few years ago.

There is increasing support for his protest that the Diefenbaker and Pearson governments "compromised forever the right to divert waters from the Columbia Basin to other parts of Canada where they may be needed desperately within a few years."

Crowe

What is the kernel of the Columbia arrangement, and what is wrong with it?

The payments to Canada are supposed to be based on specified physical benefits which occur in the United States. These benefits are called the downstream benefits, and are of two types.

The first is the downstream electrical benefit. The storages in Canada will be operated to hold back the high summer flows. This reduces the damage caused by floods in the United States, and permits the development of large tracts of American land.

The water held back by the Canadian dams will be released during the winter months of low flows and additional electric power from existing generators will be produced in the United States.

In addition the United States will be given an opportunity to build a great deal of additional generating capacity.

Canada gets no direct benefit from this, but the existence of this new cheap power is used to justify a reduction of the "calculated benefits" and consequently Canada's "half share" of them.

Mr. Higgins says: "The notion that the usefulness of a storage reservoir declines as development proceeds is a ridiculous one which one might think too obvious to require any explanation.

"But the Canadian negotiators apparently swallowed the proposition without difficulty, and I would think much to the astonishment of the Americans."

Also, we know from an article written by Dr. H. L. Keenleyside, co-chairman of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, and one of the participants in the negotiations, that these calculations were put to one side anyway, and that Canada really sought only to recover its costs as then estimated, so long as these costs were not more than "the value to the United States of the regulatory service" which we were providing them.

Of course, these costs represent only the smallest fraction of the value of the service to the United States.

Mr. Higgins claims: "In order to make this fiasco palatable to Canadians, the Government of Canada resorted to actuarial trickery which made it appear that Canada was to receive half a billion dollars cash from the United States. This trickery overstated the relevant amount by about 55 per cent."

He concludes: "The one thing we can do about the Columbia is to learn the lesson it has to teach us.

★ ★ ★

"Goodness only knows the tuition has been expensive enough. One can hardly blame our American friends for interpreting the Columbia River Treaty as a signal that all Canadian water is for sale cheap."

The most notorious response to the signal has been the Parsons Plan which also goes by the initials NAWAPA—North American Water and Power Alliance.

This is essentially a proposal to suck us dry so that Nevada and Mexico will bloom. Compared to the bald description the details of the plan of this Los Angeles engineering firm are really inconsequential.

The Parsons Plan, which has been dubbed "an exercise in sophomore civil engineering," actually originated a number of years ago in publications of Technocracy Inc., an authoritarian, semi-political, semi-religious, semi-scientific crusade of the 1930s, led by a New Yorker named Howard Scott.

Scott, an engineer, ran a floor wax business in Greenwich Village. He knew the economist Thorstein Veblen. In 1933 he wrote:

"No political structure or political legerdemain has any use whatever in an energy state. In a technological administration controlling the continent; etc . . ."

There you have the key elements of continentalism, continental energy, and the denial of Canadian sovereignty.

Absurd? Preposterous? Unworthy of serious consideration?

A sub-committee of the United States Senate under Senator Moss of Utah in 1965 began to study the plan and to churn out reports. Prime Minister Pearson played the jolly game.

In the 1965 election he said: "We will be discussing this with the United States who are very anxious to work out arrangements by which some of our water resources are moved down south.

"This can be one of the most important developments in our history. This can be as important as exporting wheat or oil or anything else—exporting water."

The welcome mat is out and when the Americans complete their studies they will be sure to bring along their computer.

French Canadians Now Find a Warm Welcome in Paris

By BERNARD KAPLAN

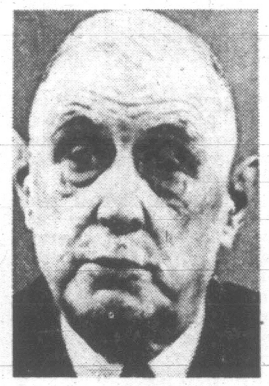

PARIS — Thanks to General de Gaulle, French Canadians are being lionized here these days as much as the Russians were last year and the Chinese the year before that.

As an expatriate Montrealer said the other day, "It's really something to be a French Canadian in Paris now."

It may not last, but the French Canadians living here are relishing every minute while it does. After long being looked on as country cousins by the French of the metropole, they suddenly find themselves a la mode.

So fast has this happened that some French Canadians here can be excused for their bewilderment. The Quebec accent, for instance, used to bring tears to the eyes of compassionate Frenchmen and produce peals of mocking laughter from the other kind.

Now it is declared charmant by delighted hostesses who've

GEN. DE GAULLE
. . . he started it all

spent the previous two days telephoning around to their friends to see how many Quebecois can be rounded up for the soiree.

Whether or not they cared for de Gaulle's performance in Quebec, Frenchmen who previously had probably never given French Canada a conscious thought have since found it next-to-impossible to avoid it. Their eyes and ears have been subject to an overpowering, at times almost terrifying, assault by newspaper articles, TV documentaries and publicity (or propaganda) of every description.

In the Press

It is impossible to pick up a newspaper here without reading that another Quebec cabinet minister has come to town or that a French minister is about to wing off to Quebec City. At least one mention of French Canada is regarded as virtually obligatory in the communiques which follow weekly cabinet sessions here.

But the straight news dispatches are nothing compared to the flood of "background" stories on the Canadian dilemma.

In a single week, Paris' two most prestigious newspapers, Le Monde and Figaro, each carried a lengthy series of articles on Canada, with special reference, of course, to the French Canadian problem.

"Can Canada survive?" was the title of Le Monde's series. More soberly, Raymond Aron in Figaro simply called his, "Canada, Quebec and France." Neither came to any startling conclusions, but both took up a lot of space.

Many Surveys

Weighty surveys of the same kind are also de rigueur in all the magazines from the Nouvel Observateur to Candide. French TV late this month will carry a three-and-a-half hour program, half documentary, half debate, on the French Canadian outlook —the longest single program ever shown here.

The Paris University Press has even taken to advertising a long list of titles on French Canadian history which it published.

The ad is headed by the words, "Vive le Quebec Libre." But the words are clearly placed between quotation marks, just to show that the University Press isn't taking sides. (A French Canadian musical revue, recently staged at the Olympia Music Hall, was called "Vive Quebec.")

French Canadians living here, whether pro-separatist or not, find the new situation pleasurable. As already indicated, it has made for a big change in their social life.

The French are not famous for their hospitality, even among themselves. But one young Quebec businessman, commenting on de Gaulle's visit, said his social life has been transformed.

"My wife and I have more invitations to dine with French friends than we can handle," he said. "Before last July, we hadn't been asked to more than two or three French homes in the three years we've been here. Now we get that many invitations in a week."

The veritable explosion of French Canadians onto the French consciousness has endless ramifications.

Certain canny art dealers here foresee an upsurge of interest in French Canadian painters and are busily signing up virtually anyone who can hold a brush. Previously, save for a handful of artists with international reputations like Riopelle, French Canadian art tended to receive short shrift from the French.

Exhibit Kept In Good Odor

WASHINGTON — On his desk at the Smithsonian's museum of science and technology, exhibits specialist Eugene Behlen has a can labeled "Slum Odor."

Behlen expects to use the contents in his work, which is to create "total environment" for museum visitors. Part of this effort is the attempt to draw visitors by the nose, which Behlen smilingly calls "smellovision."

Museum officials say the smell of slum may be used to embellish a proposed exhibit of an immigrant's railroad flat.

But smellovision is already at work in the museum, unobtrusively, Behlen said.

Are University Heads Afraid of Students?

Fifty Canadian university presidents linked arms last week to form a protective wall around the sacred traditions of university government.

Emerging from a closed session in Montreal, at which the issue of student representation on university boards of governors was discussed, they offered a variety of reasons for their opposition to the idea.

They doubted whether students had either the time or experience to tackle the problems, mainly financial, faced by boards. They felt that students could more profitably participate in the lower levels of university government, up to and including the senate.

One challenged the assumption that students really wanted to contribute to governing boards. Another doubted whether many students were capable of the necessary effort, adding, "They have a hell of a lot to learn."

A common feeling among the presidents was that, if the students were to find their way on to the boards, it would amount to little more than a token advance; that they would not be willing to bear responsibility.

It is curious in some ways that the presidents have seen fit on this occasion to mount such a resolute guard over their boards of governors. They have not always given the impression of unalterable fondness for these bodies, or asked us to believe that they should be left undisturbed.

One is inclined to suspect that they are moved to spring to the defence of the traditional system only when they fear it might be molested by students, who ought to know their place.

In his annual report earlier this year, University of Toronto president Claude Bissell expressed criticism of the two-tiered system of university government, in which academic matters and financial policy were carefully segregated — the former falling within the purview of the senate, and the latter the exclusive concern of the board of governors.

"I would like to see serious consideration given to the possibility of establishing one governing body whose presentation would have to be devised so as to make it authoritative and acceptable to the academic community," he said.

So much for the inviolable status of the boards. The proposed union with senates is particularly interesting in the light of the apparent willingness on the part of the presidents to accept student participation at the senate level.

The presidents found a number of reasons for disqualifying students as prospective governors, leaving us with the implication that the boards, as they are now constituted, suffer from none of these failings.

"Where is the overwhelming evidence that all university governors are equipped with "the time and experience to tackle the problems," that all are "capable of the necessary effort," or, for that matter, that they too do not have "a hell of a lot to learn?"

●

There are, to be sure, many dedicated, hard-working, and well-qualified men directing Canadian universities, but they sit alongside many others whose qualifications are gravely in doubt.

We find it hard to believe that any Canadian university would suffer by adding the thrust of a young, inquiring student mind to its board of governors.

Founders of B.C.

Father Coccola bared his chest to a rifle in the hands of a maddened Kootenay Indian. "I am waiting," he said. "See I have bared my heart to your bullet. Surely it is not you who is afraid?"

His bravery won the respect of his would-be assassin and led to a peace treaty when Indian wars threatened in 1887. And it was just one of many adventures in the life of the famous priest.

Nicholas Coccola was born in Corsica in 1854. He spurned a family tradition of army careers to be a missionary. Ordained as deacon and a member of the Order of Oblates, he sailed for British Columbia, arriving at Victoria in 1880.

He was first sent to Spence's Bridge where he was ordained as a priest. Then he served in the mission at Kamloops, farming, cooking and teaching white and Indian children under the trees.

His willingness to travel into the wilderness by horse or canoe to aid the Indians soon won their respect. He started a new mission on Nicola Lake despite the antagonism of medicine men who once tried to ride him down—until he shamed them, standing unarmed before them.

In 1883 he was ordered into the camps of the trans-Canada railway builders, which were rampant with vice and cruel in their hardships. In 1855 it was his intervention with the contractors that averted a revolt of the workers and improved their conditions.

In 1887, after the murder of two white prospectors and the arrest of two Indian suspects brought the Kootenays to the brink of a bloody war, it was Father Coccola who went there from Golden, part of the way on foot, to intercede.

It was then he had the brush with death with the Indian Pierre. Winning respect of both sides, he arranged a land grant which led to a treaty.

Then he founded an Indian school and a hospital near Cranbrook and aroused the interest of the Indians in mining and brought them prosperity. He led a battle at Ottawa to protect their fishing rights and won it.

He died in Smithers in 1943, one of the most respected of all the missionaries in the history of B.C.

Judy Would Be Terrific As New Boss of the CBC

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — In case it needed to be proved again, which it didn't, the feud between the secretary of state and the president of the CBC proves that Judy LaMarsh isn't the diplomatic type.

Lots of people aren't. So usually they do something more compatible with their temperaments than career politics. And that's what Judy was planning to do long before this new flap over the CBC arose: she has her hopes set on retirement from politics by the end of this year.

Waring

Meanwhile she displayed her anger at Indian Affairs Minister Laing by refusing to sit beside him in the Commons. Reason: he had not carried out what she considered was a promise to put a federal park in Niagara Falls.

Now she's involved in an even more clamorous hassle with Alphonse Ouimet, snapping that he was "arrogant" in requesting specifics to back up her observation that there is "rotten management" in the CBC. But then Mr. Ouimet may have thought she was not exactly humble herself when she told reporters that "This guy works for us; I don't work for him."

★ ★ ★

The whole flap started almost innocently, when Pierre Berton interviewed her on CBC TV. They were discussing the government's new broadcasting bill, and Berton was critical of the CBC because, he said, the CBC show "Front Page Challenge" had to wait a year after it went color before the CBC would provide it with a color TV set.

"Well, quite frankly," Judy responded, "I think there is some rotten management in many places in the CBC, and with a little better management there will be money at least for the necessary things."

Egged on by Berton, she agreed that the CBC is over-staffed with executives, and she seemed to go along with his comment that there are "too many separatists" in the CBC's French language section.

To her this was common knowledge, based on press reports and on criticism of the CBC by various committees and commissions. But in addition, she told reporters, confidential sources had informed her of "absolutely appalling things" in the CBC. What? Well, she won't tell anyone but the new head of the CBC — who hasn't been appointed yet.

These comments precipitated Mr. Ouimet's letter requesting Judy to substantiate her charges, and criticizing her for not having volunteered the information.

"Arrogant," she replied.

Then the retaliatory who-works-for-whom insult. Fact is, Ouimet is responsible only to Parliament, not to Judy or the government. The secretary of state is merely the messenger between the CBC and Parliament.

As with an iceberg, there more here than you can see: like Judy's resentment of the short shrift Ouimet has long given her, such as by-passing her and going directly to Prime Minister Pearson, and the fact that Pearson, who was formerly her idol, has cooled towards her, and her frustration in trying to get him to approve a successor for Ouimet, who tendered his resignation more than a year ago, or even to see her to talk about the problem.

To opposition MPs Judy is guilty of a "smear" attack on the CBC. Some news commentators and editorial writers have called on Pearson to fire her.

That suggestion has one merit: she'd make a terrific head of the CBC.

That 'Pornographic' Boy Doll Draws Wrath of Church

(A news item and added commentary from The National Catholic Reporter of Kansas City.)

Protests mount against "Little Brother Doll," a French import which is an authentic reproduction of a four-month-old baby who is unmistakably a boy.

From the parish bulletin of St. Augustine church, Chicago: "We are confident that there are many good Americans who are shocked and outraged by the thought of this flagrant display of sex on a child's toy, who want to do something because they are aware of the danger today and perceptive of what we can expect tomorrow if the line is not drawn now to protect our children.

Good or bad, the education of the leaders of tomorrow rests in the hands of our citizens today!

Therefore, we must rise to the occasion and vigorously protest even the idea of such a 'toy' being placed out in the open in our stores. The power of protest gains strength only in numbers and many thousands of voices are needed to ring out in objection until the noise can be heard across the land that we will not support, will not permit the sale of this pornography in our great nation.

Please take the time to write to one of these expressing your concern: President, Governor, State Senators, State Representatives, Mayor, John Cardinal Cody . . ."

The NCR comment: And after the boy doll crusade is won, let us unite to do something about boy babies, who are also somewhat pornographic as received from the manufacturer.

TOYNBEE SHOWS STYLE

ACQUAINTANCES, by Arnold J. Toynbee, Oxford University Press, $7.00.

S. W. JACKMAN

Pollsters often discover amazing things when they investigate the opinions of the so-called "common man" but knowledge about scholars, and particularly historians, rarely seems to be part of the mental baggage of most people.

However, if the name of Toynbee were mentioned it is quite probable that a not insignificant number of people would at least recognize it.

Toynbee's multi-volumed A Study of History has brought him fame, if not actual approbation, and a vast reputation as a pundit everywhere.

Toynbee is a first-rate scholar and a writer of great style and charm.

●

His ideas on "challenge and response" may not have universal validity but they are stimulating. If A Study of History be a great mural, then Acquaintances may illustrate Toynbee's talents in another genre, namely, the miniature.

The art of the biographical sketch to serve as a vehicle to convey impressions is a difficult one to master.

Toynbee has chosen to portray his contemporaries, many of them figures of prime importance but some virtually unknown, and in doing so he has written a kind of autobiography.

He begins with his own family; Uncle Harry who played a prominent role in Toynbee's childhood — this uncle was a sort of substitute grandpapa; Auntie Charlie the widow of an earlier Arnold Toynbee who had made his fame as the author of a study on the industrial revolution.

●

Toynbee's family insisted on his designating himself as Arnold J. Toynbee, not just Arnold Toynbee, "That is not your name; it is your uncle's."

Following his accounts of his family connections he moves into a wider sphere.

Perhaps the greatest task for any person is to describe fairly those who practise one's own profession but not precisely as one does it oneself.

In this instance, Toynbee shows a sense of style and perception. The studies of the Tawneys, the Webbs and the Hammonds — each unique — are delightful.

In the world of politics Toynbee is equally at his ease.

His account of T. E. Lawrence, for example, does much to redress the balance that this one-time folk hero has been subjected to in these post-Freudian days. His views of Jan Smuts, today definitely a "non-hero" to many of his fellow-countrymen and forgotten by the post-1945 generation, serves to remind us of the contributions of that great South African. So it goes with all of the others mentioned in the book. The story of an hilarious interview with Adolf Hitler illustrates the neatness and sardonic nature of Toynbee's humor.

It is the sort of book any of us would have been pleased to write.

Toynbee is a great man, a great scholar and a fine individual. To be one of his "acquaintances" must be agreeable indeed; if one cannot be so in fact then one may have the vicarious pleasure through this book.

Nothing Was 'Impossible' To the Hero of Milan!

The Mouth of the Wolf by John Windsor. Sidney, Gray's Publishing, $4.50.

Grant McOrmond

It is appropriate that John Windsor's new book should make its appearance in November, the month of red poppies and remembrance, when a society that has enjoyed a life made possible by the sacrifices of others pauses for a moment from its getting and spending to think of those who dared and died.

In this work, dedicated to "all those who worked and fought so that Italy might be free," Mr. Windsor recounts the adventures of George Paterson in Italy, where he assisted the partisans in their struggle against the Fascist tyranny of Mussolini and the domination of their land by the German Nazis.

SPECIAL FORCE

Paterson, of Vancouver, was serving with the British forces, when in 1941 he parachuted into Italy as part of a special force whose mission it was to blow up a large aqueduct carrying water to the cities of southern Italy. Following the successful completion of the mission, Paterson and most of his comrades were captured as they were attempting to reach the coast.

In spite of the dirt, cold, and inadequate diet of the prison camps, Paterson's will to resist never dimished. He attempted to escape time after time. His efforts to get free by tunnelling and fleeing from armed guards were both frustrated. Finally, by virtually scratching his way out of a locked boxcar and leaping from the moving train carrying him north, he managed to escape.

Instead of making his way to Switzerland, he decided to throw in his lot with the ill-organized partisans who were then just beginning to make gestures of defiance against Mussolini's regime. Subsequently, with the aid of Italian friends, Paterson became engaged in the hazardous business of locating escaped prisoners of war in northern Italy and assisting them to make their way to freedom in Switzerland.

CONSTANT DANGER

He lived in constant danger, and before long he was recaptured and imprisoned in the dreaded and formidable San Vittore prison in Milan. Here again he managed the impossible, escaping in broad daylight under the very eyes of the guards. This time he found freedom and comfort in Switzerland.

The quiet courage and stubborn determination of Paterson that led him to continue his resistance in the face of overwhelming odds is transformed into heroic bravery when he agrees to return to Italy to assist and guide the growing partisan forces in the north.

He was indeed going back "into the mouth of the wolf." After some initial successes, the partisans were virtually wiped out, and for George Paterson it was a return to San Vittore. By this time, the war in Italy was drawing to a close; the partisans were beginning to take over Milan itself, and Paterson was able to engineer a mass escape from the prison.

GAZED UPON CORPSES

He stayed in Milan long enough to witness the emancipation of the city and to gaze upon the ugly bleeding corpses of Mussolini and his mistress.

For his efforts on behalf of Italian freedom, Paterson received an honor accorded to few foreigners; he was made a Freeman of the City of Milan. For the part he played in assisting nearly three thousand allied servicemen to reach freedom, he was promoted to the rank of Captain and awarded the Military Cross with two bars.

The Mouth of the Wolf is told in a quiet, unassuming way. There is no false posturing, no histrionics, no mouthing of patriotic sentiments. Humorous interludes relieve the intensity of the suspense.

The reasons for actions are given in terms of personal, human motivation rather than as manifestations of high patriotic fervor of lofty courage. When Paterson, against his better judgment, accompanies the partisan leaders "into the mouth of the wolf," it is simply explained: "Any hesitation on his part might be misinterpreted."

If The Mouth of the Wolf is not a great book, it is certainly a very good one. Though John Windsor is blind, the victim of an attack on his tank during the Italian campaign, his readers need make no allowances for the fact. He sees both character and action more vividly than most; with realism and honesty he shows, through the heroism of George Paterson, what it is that drives a man on to victory over seemingly impossible odds.

Field-Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein, K.G., in his introduction to The Mouth of the Wolf, has recognized this rare quality in the work. He describes it as "a tale of human endeavour in war by brave men who refused to give in. ... I commend the book to all who are interested in the human side to warfare, which is so often neglected by the historians."

Tsar 'Sadly Naive!'

NICHOLAS AND ALEXANDRA by Robert K. Massie. McClelland and Stewart, $12.00.

Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins

It is almost incredible that the world of the last Romanovs should belong to the twentieth century.

The huge palaces of crystal and gold, the Faberge jewelry and Easter eggs, the vast territories spreading across millions of acres create a picture of feudal splendour and oppression that jars with the 120 autos in the Tsar's garages and with the locked railway train that brought Lenin and his revolutionaries across Europe to join the revolt that had started without them.

The achievement of this masterful biography is that it reconciles these seeming anachronisms and, in documenting the facts, provides a completely believable account of the events and personalities that surrounded the Tsar's fall.

The magic of fairy-tale castles and the bitter reality of human butchery combine as the background to the portraits of Nicholas and his consort, and these two figures stand out from it all as touchingly human dreamers.

Nicholas, so similar in appearance to his cousin George V, is seen primarily as the Victorian family father, a gentle, bewildered man whose very goodness meant the end of the dynasty.

Abdicating from his myriad titles with very little fuss, he remained firm about only one thing; in order that his invalid son should not be parted from the family, he resigned all claim to the throne in the boy's name too: "I trust you will understand the feelings of a father." As a blind idealist, Nicholas was no monster — only a sadly naive politician.

It was chiefly on Alexandra that contemporaries heaped their scorn. A German princess and devotee of the malevolent Rasputin, she was branded as an agent of the Kaiser's and as an adultress. It was therefore much easier to consider her a monster.

Passionately in love with her husband, she urged him to assert his kingly power. Out of context her letters to him seem like the words of a madwoman or a particularly vicious fool.

Mr. Massie's book provides a context for Alexandra's actions, and it is this which makes his study so important. The author himself has a hemophiliac son, a fact which first drew him to the case of the young Tsarevich whose disease he considers to be the key to the family's fall from power.

It is his own experience which also gives him a compassionate understanding of Alexandra's despair; feelings which led her to believe wildly in Rasputin's curative powers and to champion the crazed and bestial prophet in the face of scandal and gossip.

Alexandra becomes a real person, not the villainous caricature of history. An oddly ordinary woman, she is viewed sewing with her daughters, nursing the wounded during the Great War, caring for her husband and their fragile son, and willing to destroy everything because of that tenacious devotion.

The author's tact is nowhere more apparent than in the chapter which deals with the assassination of the royal family.

He firmly discounts the romantic possibility of any survivors. Anastasia did apparently only faint at the first shots, but reviving she screamed and was battered to death with bayonets and rifle butts.

★ ★ ★

There are no histrionics and no melodramatics.

The plain facts are told and the emotion takes care of itself.

The grand guignol of the cellar at Ekaterinburg becomes all the more horrifying because by the end of the book, we have come to see this family as a group of real Edwardian ladies and gentlemen.

Indeed, the episode ends with a final family detail. Eight days after the murders, the White Russians captured the town to find the Tsarevich's starving spaniel still wandering in search of its master.

Now fifty years after the revolution, this compassionate study does more to illuminate the figures at the centre of the drama than do any surviving flim-clips or browning photographs.

A CRITIC'S PERSONAL DEBATE

Answer to Barbarism?

LANGUAGE AND SILENCE, by George Steiner. New York: Atheneum (McClelland and Stewart). 426 pp. $10.

Michael Warren

It has been said derisively of Robert Graves that he considers no man a poet who did not fight in the First World War; it might with justice be said of George Steiner that he believes no man to be a competent critic who has not seriously contemplated the concentration camps of the Second World War.

●

In this collection of essays written for various journals during the last 10 years, Steiner's discussions of the relations between literature and society frequently return to the function of the critic, who if he is to make of the study of literature a "proper study," must while taking all knowledge for his province especially try to understand and recognize the enormity which occurred in Germany in the thirties and forties.

While the essays on individual authors suggest a confident belief in the value of literature, the theoretical essays present disquieting suspicions which are rarely expressed among literary men.

Language and Silence is one man's personal debate about the purpose of criticism and its role in contemporary education.

A university teacher himself, Steiner recognizes that the foundation of literary studies is the belief that a solid acquaintance with great works of art contributes to the development of good, moral, responsible individuals.

This view, which found its classic formulation in Matthew Arnold's Culture and Anarchy 100 years ago, is still strongly held in most universities, and has for its greatest champion F. R. Leavis, who has asserted that the study of literature is "the central humanity."

Steiner, no less earnest a moralist than Arnold or Leavis, now opens the question of the humanizing power of literature by considering an extraordinary case in recent history: he records that many men who spent their days organizing the mass destruction of their fellow humans returned home in the evenings to read Shakespeare and Goethe, and to listen to Chopin.

From this observation he moves to a larger paradox—that it was in Germany, the centre of what he calls the tradition of Central European Humanism, that the most devastating instance of man's inhumanity to man occurred; and that the universities were no barrier: "in notable instances the high places of humanistic learning and art actually welcomed and aided the new terror.

Barbarism prevailed on the very ground of Christian humanism, of Renaissance culture and classic rationalism."

Such events prove nothing in themselves about literature, but they provoke Steiner to ask two important questions: first, whether the traditional method of studying literature—"the focusing of consciousness on a written text"—does not blunt the immediacy of our response to moral problems in the real world, so that fictive tragedy moves us more than actual distress; and secondly, how literature should be taught so that the original Arnoldian optimism may perhaps be justified.

●

Obviously there is no clear answer to the first question, since the hypothesis is not susceptible of proof, and must remain a worrying speculation.

But the book itself is Steiner's attempt to demonstrate the answer to the second question.

For Steiner the most profitable concern for the student and critic of literature now is the understanding of linguistic processes, so that in a world where mathematical language is rapidly usurping many of the traditional functions of words, we may grasp more firmly the principles of how language works.

With such a study would grow a respect for language as a medium of communication, and a consciousness of its intimate relation to the range of human experience.

In one virulent article on post-war Germany Steiner traces indications of the hollowness of the German national recovery in the "deadness" of the language.

●

This highly evocative metaphor is initially alienating, but the point rapidly becomes clear; when a language has been used for the dissemination of lies and hatred, it may well lose its integrity and become an inefficient vehicle for artistic statements.

After the "final solution," what possibility is there of an accurate expression of humane values?

Or indeed, what forgiveness?

Steiner traces the chief error of earlier literary studies to the nationalistic bias of nineteenth century Europe, when a literary tradition could be seen as a symbol of national identity.

If literary studies are to be truly humane once more, he asserts, they will have to become international and comparative, with multilingual critics embracing a variety of traditions.

And it is this vision that the book represents; lamenting the disappearance of the fluid cosmopolitanism of Central European Humanism, Steiner continues to embody it in essays on Homer, Shakespeare, Thomas Mann, Marshall McLuhan, Sylvia Plath and others, with ample reference to Marxist criticism and contemporary Russian writings.

To each subject he brings a sympathetic intelligence and a comprehensive philosophical background; the whole collection is the honest and disturbing work of a man who, despite his suspicions, sees that the answer to barbarism may still perhaps lie in commitment to the appreciation of cultural diversity.

A last point.

This book gains its immediacy from its frequent references to the fate of European Jewry; criticism is thus closely related to life.

But it cannot fail also to touch other raw nerves.

When the richest country in the world cultivates large universities with immense departments of humanities, while the science departments are financed largely by grants from departments of "defence"; when cities build shrines of culture while riots burst in the slums; when "urban redevelopment" usually means the elimination of low-cost housing, and therefore the dispersal of poor people; when the employment of more troops and the bombing of fresh targets does not mean that the undeclared "war" is being "escalated"; when Vietnamese villages are being "relocated" by Marines engaged in—God help us—"pacification programs"; then perhaps George Steiner's ideas on culture and society, and on the relation of language to moral life deserve our urgent and earnest attention.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

In the arts all that is learned is theory, an objective exercise, until it is put into practise.

A person might read a library full of books on the subject of painting or sculpture, and listen to lectures every day of the week.

But until he dips his brush into pigment or takes up a handful of clay, he has no personal involvement and only an imperfect understanding of the relationship of the artist to his material.

The visual arts are no different. The musician's material is sound; the dancer's, his body and senses; the actor's, words, emotions.

Those who desire a real contact, a more complete understanding, or whose job it becomes to serve as a commentator in some medium of communication, will quickly discover the necessity of first-hand exploration if all they have experienced up to that point is theory.

Successful participation however, is not essential to understanding.

It is often true that a person learns more from his failures than he does from his successes. It is the act of using the materials that matters, not the magnitude of the result.

Smattering Is Often Worse

From first-hand application of aesthetic principles, and techniques, appreciation and discernment is strengthened and clarified.

This is not really an advocacy of knowledge in smatterings however. A smattering is often worse than nothing at all.

What I am trying to convey is that knowledge should be pursued on some practical level by anyone seriously concerned, even though he may consider his talent to be mediocre.

Experience indicates that practise in one of the arts assists appreciation all along the line.

A business woman deciding to enroll in night school art classes as a therapy, after a time may find herself enjoying music to a heightened degree and becoming more discerning with regard to the movies she sees.

The widenging of her horizon means that she is listening, seeing and living more intensely. She is beginning to make her own valuations instead of accepting without question those ready-made by other people.

In the long run one may return to values handed on by a parent or teacher but the important thing is not to accept any ideas without question — without thinking things through and coming to a conclusion via one's own path.

And so far nobody has come up with a better method than by dipping hands into clay, brushes into the paint pot, laying fingers on a keyboard or one's whole self at the feet of Thespis.

Exposed . . . And It Takes!

There are many instances of people who have gone half their lives declaring that they had no interest in the arts. And then by some quirk of fortune they get an exposure — and it takes.

Nor is it unusual for the converts to become every bit as dedicated as life-long protagonists and to spend a little precious time during their ensuing decades wishing they had not wasted so much of it in the first place.

None of us knows for sure whether or not we will like a thing we have never tried, whether it be food, liquor or art.

That's why it seems to many thinking people that opportunitie for sampling in the arts should be widely and easily available to the greatest number of people of all ages, but particularly to the young.

Work hours have been so markedly shortened and electronic invention has reduced — and will continue to reduce — labor to such an extent that most socialogically oriented people are concerned with the use of the enormous amount of leisure time being made available.

Inevitably the arts will play an important part in filling those leisure hours and the doors must be opened now to provide the fullest opportunities for study and practise in all fields at every educational level.

Accordion Artist Here

A most unusual artist will appear on the stage of McPherson Playhouse Sunday afternoon.

He is a Canadian concert accordionist who has made an international name for himself and has reaffirmed for his instrument its right to be considered among recognized virtuoso instruments.

Leo Aquino had been a noted CBC radio and television artist for a number of years before becoming acclaimed in Europe.

He is being presented here by Victoria Musical Art Society.

He is noted not only for his exceptional taste and discernment in translating masterworks for the accordion but for his considerable gifts as a composer for the instrument.

His program on Sunday, which begins at 3 p.m., includes several of his own arrangements including the Sibelius Valse Triste and Mendelssohn's Rondo Capriccioso.

He will also be playing his own original Reflections of Spain and arrangements of works by Mozart, Bach and Khachaturian.

Any Jobs For Yong?

Correspondence is being conducted currently between the Victoria Symphony office and principal string bass player of the Korea Broadcasting System Symphony Orchestra, Yong Bum Hong.

With an impressive professional musical career to his credit, it is Mr. Hong's desire to come to Victoria and become a member of the Victoria Symphony.

It has been pointed out to him that a job with the symphony will not provide a sufficient livelihood and that he would need to have other employment.

In his most recent letter he declares himself ready to "do any sort of job besides my prime profession as string-bass player . . ."

Among categories in which he feels himself able and experienced are bookkeeping or other clerical work, library work—"in the level of elementary knowledge"—and warehouse supervisory work or "similar duties."

The Victoria Symphony would like to have Mr. Hong, so if anyone knows of some place suited to his work specifications, their phone call would be welcome at 384-7154.

Rare Musical Group Coming From Manitoba

Two performing groups from Manitoba which have achieved international touring standards, will have visited Victoria within a week of each other.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet performed its famous full-length Canadian work, Rose Latulippe, Wednesday at the Royal Theatre.

Next Tuesday, the Manitoba University Consort, currently touring California and the West Coast, will give a concert in the Education-Arts Auditorium at University of Victoria.

The Consort is one of the rarest professional musical groups in the world. It performs music from the 11th to the 18th centuries on the instruments for which it was composed: psaltery, viol de gamba, crumhorns, portative organ and many others whose descendents are used by modern symphony orchestras and bands.

Three universities will be visited on the West Coast—Victoria, UBC and Berkeley.

Partly because five of the seven in the consort have academic duties during the winter—four as teachers and one as a student—a projected European tour cannot be made until late May.

So far arrangements have been made for performances in London, Zurich, Frankfurt, Dartington, Manchester, and at the Lake District Festival.

The Consort is directed by Christine Mather, who also plays the recorders, crumhorns, viol, lute, dulzian and psaltery.

Tickets at $1.50 and 75 cents for students are available at the Student Union Building or the Fine Arts office in the Education-Arts building.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

ZSA-ZSA TO CHA-CHA?

Anyone who has ever dreamed of doing the Cha-cha with Zsa-Zsa, will at last have an opportunity of seeing the bewitching sex symbol in living pulchitrude in Victoria.

The blonde screen and television star is to make a personal appearance at the Royal Theatre Nov. 23.

Under the title, An Evening in Budapest, La Gabor will be surrounded by a group of performers, at least one of whom has visited Victoria before.

Mezzo soprano Sari Gencsy was one of two artists who appeared here last season as "Stars of the Budapest Opera."

The program will also feature Eva Kozmari, dramatic soprano, Sandor Puskas, tenor, Dr. Imre Magyari and his orchestra and a group of dancers.

"Oak Bay has seen the light," said the man from Foul Bay. "This year we'll have two polling stations. Saanich and Esquimalt have had neighborhood voting places for years," he added.

The man from Dallas Road noted that in Victoria's December elections all voters are still required to drive downtown. "There's no place to park and the crush is oppressive," he complained.

"In a town where there are so many elderly voters, it's a needless humbug, isn't it?" he asked our Maitre d', Leslie.

AT THE MOVIES

With

NORMAN CRIBBENS

GRAND PRIX
Victoria Premiere
Royal Theatre

Is it worth it?

The racing car drivers who brave death in the hope of becoming world champions apparently think so, and their daredevilry provides entertainment for millions of enthusiasts who share the thrills of the track from a comfortable distance.

Viewed from a theatre seat, Grand Prix is a screen spectacular which offers just about everything in the way of second-hand excitement. The action is in high gear most of the way and the story is backed by full-range color photography and capable acting.

Better to die than to fail.

This seems to be moving spirit within the drivers as they battle their way through a series of nine races in various parts of Europe and at Watkins Glen in the United States.

The cast is fully international. James Garner is the American contender for racing honors; Brian Bedford, the indomitable Britisher; Yves Montand, the gay Frenchman; Antonio Sabato, the temperamental Italian.

★ ★ ★

Behind them are such glamorous females as Jessica Walter, married to Bedford and unable to stand the tension built up by the races; Eva Marie Saint, an American fashion magazine editor, in love with Montand; and Francoise Hardy, a young adventuress who lives with Italian driver Sabato between races.

During the Monaco race, Bedford tries to pass Garner, but his gearbox freezes and the two cars crash. Garner winds up in the harbor unhurt, but Bedford crashes into a rock wall and is seriously injured. It seems unlikely he will ever race again.

Director John Frankenheimer uses the wide screen for a number of unusual camera angles which emphasize the panoramic spectacle of the race track. Some of his multiple images and flashbacks tend to be confusing but, overall, the story is presented with a maximum of dramatic effect.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

At 8:30 Saturday night, when Roy Orbison steps on the stage at the Memorial Arena, Victorians will be hosting one of those few artists who, while amassing a huge following in the U.S., can enjoy an almost equally large following abroad.

In the 11 years since he made his first record, he has had 10 gold records in addition to drawing SRO audiences at public appearances in every state of the U.S. and Canada.

During the last couple of years alone he made three tours of the British Isles, Ireland and the continent, plus a week-long performing trek through Australia and a similar one on New Zealand.

Orbison grew up in the oil town of Wink, Texas (population 1,500). His dad taught him the rudiments of the guitar at the age of six. Scarcely in his teens, Orbison was leading "The Wink Westerners" and conducting a radio show over KVWC in Vernon, Texas. His first big time appearance as at the age of 16 when he represented the talent of the Lone Star state at the International Lions Club convention in Chicago.

Orbison was a geology student at North Texas State College when a fellow student, Pat Boone, had his first record success with "Two Hearts." Bang, went Orbison's dream of becoming a Texas millionaire by prospecting for oil, and it its place lying much closer to his heart, arose the prospect of a career in music.

In April, 1956, Roy was signed by Sam Phillips, Sun Records prexy, who discovered Elvis Presley, Johnny Cash and other greats. Orbison's Sun record, "Oooby Dooby" was his first hit. In 1958 he wrote a song titled "Claudette," his wife's first name, and this resulted in another hit record for the Everly Broth

Orbison's facility and originality at song writing, recognized in his "Uptown," "Only the Lonely"and Blue Angel," drew the attention of record companies all over the states.

Next came Orbisons "Crying" and "Candy Man" which astonished the trade with their meteoric rise in the national charts.

The release, a two-sided smash, became the sixth and seventh consecutive hits for Roy. Other Orbison sales breakers included "In Dreams," "Blue Bayou," "Mean Woman Blues" and "Falling.

His songs have been recorded by such artists as the Everlys, Buddy Knox, Jerry Le Lewis and the late Buddy Holly. His own Monument Records have been almost constantly in the national charts with the help of the Orbison stylings.

All of which is doing pretty well for an oil-driller's son who chose collecting gold discs in preference to prospecting for the liquid "black gold" which seeps under much of the Texas sub-strata.

There's Gold for Someone In Those TV Commercials

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—A Kansas farmer, in financial trouble after a crop failure, recently was picked to star, anonymously, in a U.S. cigarette company's series of commercials.

The unexpected thousands of dollars saved him from disaster.

A well-known comedian who makes occasional guest-star appearances recently was offered $75,000 to make a series of commercials—and turned it down. His previous lucrative experience in commercials, he found, interfered with professional bookings.

Two unknown young dancers were cast in a series of automobile commercials and found their original pay plus residuals brought each of them $60,000.

For the performers there is gold in the $250,000,000-a-year subdivision of U.S. television concerned with turning out 100,000 or so sales messages annually.

There are established stars in this special world of commercials, including professional actors like Herschel Bernardi, Mason Adams and Mel Blanc, who specialize in providing the persuasive voices that do the selling. Although their faces are rarely if ever seen, their annual incomes often run into six figures—compared with a production cost ranging from $1,000, for a quickie for local use, to $80,000.

Most commercials, however, are "cast" like entertainment shows. Performers are members of either the Screen Actors' Guild or the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, for taped commercials. Usually they are interviewed and tested on camera. About one-third of the guild membership's total income comes from commercials — about $30,000,000 a year.

Under the guild scale, "principals" in a commercial —anyone who is in any way identifiable with the selling of the product—receive a minimum of an eight-hour day $120 for working on camera. If only the voice is used, the price is $90.

That, however, is just the beginning, since there is an incredibly complicated schedule of—residual payments based on the number of times a commercial is used, the number of markets in which it is used and the size of the marketing area and audience.

Stock in Dazzling Debut

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Dazzling new equity issues must shed a lot of light to outshine the one that made its debut, sold out and doubled in value within three hours of its birth Thursday.

Unfortunately for B.C. growth speculators, the issue was restricted to Ontario, and was of such limited amount that, according to a Victoria broker, "one salesman could have placed the whole issue."

This debutante of the glamour stocks was a 110,000 share issue to net $607,500 for General Impact Extrusions Ltd., a Canadian holding company whose subsidiaries manufacture metal tubing, cartridge cases, electronic, radio and telephone parts, thin-walled and collapsible tubing, defence and automotive components and injection-moulded plastics.

Kent

The issue was underwritten by Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co. Ltd., which it had been anticipated in brokerage circles would make allotments to its various regional offices across the country.

Instead, the issue was confined to the one province where application had been made for its distribution.

Not only that, of the original 110,000 shares there was a commitment to offer existing shareholders 45,000 shares, leaving only 65,000 for distribution at the issue price of $5.75.

The local office of Pitfield, Mackay said the after-market quickly bid the price to 11-11½.

This sort of bidding clearly puts General Impact in the category of a junior exotic, of which Canada seems to be getting its share.

Within the last year there was considerable interest in ITL Industries Ltd., after it came out with "palm-n-turn" medicine bottle caps, and in the last two years the unlisted market has had Velok, now Velcro, to broach the trading troposphere.

General Impact was incorporated in 1955 and in 1962 sold all its assets to General Impact Extrusions (Manufacturing) Ltd., in order to become a holding company only.

The latter, as operating company, has in the last eight years devoted 44-74 per cent of its effort in terms of sales to defence work.

With large, sophisticated machinery, the company is able to make extruded products from aluminum, for example, which have precise form, waste little metal and require little machining.

The method of manufacture employs high pressure and dies through which metal is squeezed.

The main plant is located in Metro Toronto and includes premises of Xyno Plastics Ltd., a subsidiary. Another subsidiary, G. I. E. Corporation, formed last June, has an industrial building in Buffalo, N.Y., which in its first year of operation will make industrial and defence products already established in Toronto.

Selkirk Holdings Ltd. president J. S. MacKay reports significant increases in revenue and earnings for the first nine months of 1967. Dividends payable remain the same as for the period last year.

He also revealed that the company had agreed to pay the Southam Company $667,396 cash over three years, in addition to giving 135,344 "A" shares in return for Calgary television station CHCT.

The deal was consummated Oct. 20 and included part of the cash settlement at that time.

Up to Sept. 30, $158,689 had been spent on acquiring a subsidiary interest, $250,622 additional amount spent on investments, and fixed assets increased by just over $55,000.

Revenue $3.735 million ($2,122 million); operating expense $3.101 million ($2.285 million); depreciation $79,605 ($54,591); investment income $54,710 ($19,938); net income $328,729 ($264,719); per share income .456 cents (.409 cents); dividends .225 cents.

Air Carriers Set All-Time Record

MONTREAL (CP)—The International Air Transport Association said Thursday airline traffic across the North Atlantic last summer rose to a record high with a 19.1-per-cent gain over 1966 in pasengers carried and a 12-per-cent increase in cargo.

The Montreal-based organization of international air carriers said that in the six months April 1-Sept. 30 its member airlines carried 3,366,536 revenue passengers on North Atlantic routes.

During the period a total of 101,976 short tons of cargo were carried. Mail transport increased by 13.7 per cent to 14,446 short tons.

In the same period, IATA members operated a total of 40,412 scheduled flights across the North Atlantic. This was 23.6 per cent more than in the 1966 season.

Note to Boxing Refs: Watch Out for Mama!

Ducking under the ropes she staggered the referee, Naas Botes, with a crisp textbook right hook.

Her boxing son fights under the name of Peet Steyn and was named boxer of the year in South Africa. He has won the South African school title two years in a row.

Now mother and son have been banned from attending any further boxing matches under the control of the South African Boxing Association.

"I was so angry I just couldn't control myself," said the mother. "I jumped from my seat after the referee disqualified my son and gave the official a good right hook."

Mrs. Viljoen maintains she knows a thing or two about the sport—her four sons are all widely-known South African boxers.

Kings Clip Leafs; Edwards in Nets As Wings Win

By The Canadian Press

A talented array of minor leaguers staged one of the National Hockey League's early season upsets Thursday night while Detroit Red Wings, supported by rookie goalie Roy Edwards' net-minding and with venerable Gordie Howe setting them up, snapped a three-game losing streak.

Los Angeles Kings, whose only established NHLer in the June draft was goalie Terry Sawchuk, smothered Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1 at Los Angeles to hand the defending Stanley Cup champions their first loss in five games.

And at Detroit, Edwards allowed only a first-period goal to get by him while Howe took over the league scoring leadership with two assists as the Wings romped to a 5-1 win over Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Leafs-Kings encounter was billed as a meeting of the division leaders with Toronto holding first place in the established Eastern Division and the Kings atop the expanded Western Division.

SWEET REVENGE

And the victory must have been sweet revenge for two former Leaf chattels—coach Red Kelly and centre Ed Joyal—who were on the losing end of a 4-2 score in Toronto earlier in the season.

Kelly, a Simcoe, Ont. native, last year was one of those instrumental in Toronto's winning the Stanley Cup. The 20-year NHL veteran, spent most of his career with Detroit before moving to Toronto for the 1959-60 season.

Joyal, who spent last season with Rochester Americans of the American League after a 1965-66 stint with the Leafs, scored two goals to pace the Kings.

The St. Albert, Alta., native had 32 goals and 51 assists last year for Rochester, the Leafs top farm team.

PENGUIN DISCARD

Edwards was taken by Pittsburgh in last year's expansion draft, but was traded to Detroit in the off season and then shuttled to Fort Worth of the Central League.

He was recalled early this week as a replacement for Roger Crozier before Crozier Monday stunned the Wings by announcing his retirement from hockey.

The 30-year-old native of Seneca, Ont., spent last season with Buffalo Bisons of the AHL where he had a miserable 5.07 goals-against average in 37 1-3 games.

COUTTS TO RETIRE

Bout With Bucs Last at Home For Burly Bob

By DOUG PEDEN

Bob Coutts played his first football game in Victoria 14 years ago. Saturday night at Royal Athletic Park burly Bob expects to collect bruises and bumps on a city field for the last time.

As an offensive guard for Victoria Tyees in the Continental Football League's Western Division, burly Bob has accumulated a full share of aches and pains during the current campaign.

Now he feels he has proved a point and has reluctantly decided to end safaris into gridiron wars, partly because he wants more time for business. It will be a happier finish if Coutts helps the Tyees finish fifth in the Western Division and if he sees an indication that the Tyees will remain active in the Continental circuit.

BOB COUTTS

Victory over the Sacramento Buccaneers would almost ensure that the Tyees will remain in front of the Bucs. A reasonably good crowd might ensure a solid foundation for the Tyees of next season because a National Football League representative, Jim Garrett, will be in town Saturday to assess Victoria's potential as a football town and to look for players worthy of NFL tryouts. With him will be John Anderson, a scout for Los Angeles Rams, one of two NFL clubs considering the Tyees as a future farm club.

Helping promote football in the Victoria area has become an important mission for the 33-year-old Coutts, whose excursions into other sports included seasons with the lacrosse Shamrocks and the appearances with the city's representative rugby side.

"I believe in the football program and appreciate what it has done for me," said the 245-pounder Thursday over a cup of coffee during a pause in his work as Vancouver Island sales representative with a national heating products firm.

"Football has given me more satisfaction and more personal gain in life than any other sport I've played. I'd like to see more Canadians in the game."

Bob got his introduction to pigskin madness at 18 when he turned out for a junior club and ended up playing with a senior team. He competed with Victoria Vampires and Victoria Drakes before starting a seven-year stint as coach of juvenile squads.

He turned out last season with Victoria Steelers, "against my better judgement," and was a two-way performer during the Pacific League season. He didn't expect to make the club when the Steelers stepped into the new Western Division of the Continental circuit this year, but Coutts fooled himself and a lot of other people.

●

"When I saw how many good and experienced players had been brought in for tryouts, I didn't think I'd stay around.

"Later, when the team moved to Seattle for workouts (after coach Don McKeta took over the team and changed the name to Tyees), I thought of quitting. But I wanted to prove a Victorian could make it and it became a matter of personal pride to finish the season and perhaps help establish the team in Victoria.

"The way I look at it," Coutts continued, "the Tyees, the way McKeta is trying to set things up for a community-owned club, are in the same situation the British Columbia Lions were when they started. They went out and sold shares to Vancouver people before they had a team. But we already have a team.

"What have the Lions done for football? For one thing they have promoted minor football throughout the province. And they now have seven Vancouver high schools playing football.

"I feel the Tyees can form the groundwork for a bigger football program in Victoria. This can help a lot of people because, to me, football is a highly inspirational game that demands teamwork and gets more people involved than any other team sport."

Two of the young men coached previously by Coutts have benefitted from football through athletic scholarships. Harvey Stephenson, a 250-pound guard is now at Webber College in Utah and is rated a future Webber star. Linebacker and place-kicker Dave Cutler is currently captain of the Simon Fraser University team that is making history by beating American schools.

Bob has been continually impressed by the calibre of players in the Continental League.

"We have run into some great players," he said, "like Adolphus McGee (fullback and coach of the Sacramento club that will be here Saturday night), who is a tremendous athlete. And on our team alone there are many players who are continuing higher educational programs or on their way to good business careers.

●

"It's probably been the greatest experience of my life playing with this club."

Bob won't be leaving without lasting impressions of some players he faced in head-to-head battles along the line.

"He knows more about physical control than any man I've ever known," said Coutts. "By the end of the game my forehead was swollen by an inch and a half. He beat me right into the ground."

Or the "biggest one"—Ron Berger, an Orange County Rambler who stepped in against Bob at six-eight and 275 pounds. "A big, big, mean boy, recalls Coutts.

Now that the gridiron madness is almost over, Bob is planning a return to coaching minor clubs.

Although the Tyees still have a couple of road games remaining on their schedule, Robert Coutts makes his last start before the home folks Saturday against the Bucs. He'd like to finish on a winning note and he'd like to see an enthusiastic crowd at what could be quite a ball game.

'Shaky' Balding Cracks Par in Opening Round

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, fighting to keep the World Cup golf team championship for the United States, held a one-point lead over Argentina today as the second round started.

Palmer came out of the first nine two under par, shaved off two more strokes on the back nine, and finished with a 68 that tied him with Argentina's Florentino Molina for low individual score.

Nicklaus fired a steady 72 to give Palmer the backing he needed. Molina's team-mate, Fidel de Luca, came in at 73.

South Africa's Gary Player carded a 69. He finished with a flourish, sinking a 30-foot putt on the 17th and a 10-footer on the 18th for two birdies.

"Harold finished with a 74," Player said Thursday, "but he had some impossible shots. He didn't play that badly, more like a 71."

BALDING FIRES 70

In at 70 were Toronto's Al Balding with 37-33, Spain's Ramon Sota, and Jose Maria Gonzalez of Brazil. George Knudson of Toronto, defending his individual championship won at Tokyo, shot a 37-36—73.

Balding said later: "George will be the individual star before this thing is over."

Balding said the altitude was affecting him, as did Palmer.

"I've never felt so shaky," said Balding.

Balding and Knudson were tied in the team event at 143 in third place with the South African twosome and Donald Swaelen and Flory Van Donck of Belgium.

Both Nicklaus, who said the altitude hasn't bothered him at all, and Palmer cite one benefit of the city's 7,347-foot altitude—the ball goes farther.

EXACTING DRIVES

The 7,250-yard course demands exacting placement of shots, and all golfers here who talk about the greens summed them up in one word: "Difficult."

Slow play drew complaints from some, including Balding and Palmer.

"We went around in 5½ hours and on four holes it took us an hour and a half," Balding commented. "When you're tired and standing around, you just get more tired."

He went one over par on the front nine, but had birdies on the 12th, 13th and 17th holes, including a 15-foot putt on the 12th.

"We thought we really had a good start on that first hole," Balding said. "But George missed the 1½-foot putt that would have given him a par and I missed a five-footer for a birdie."

Smoothie's Trainer Predicts Third Spot

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — The $150,000 Washington International will be run for the 16th time at Laurel Saturday with Damascus, the uncrowned king of United States thoroughbreds, the strong favorite even though he never has competed in a grass course race.

The 1½-mile race over the finely-cropped turf, one of the world's horse racing classics despite its youth, has a strong American flavor with five of the nine entries from seven countries—one of them Canada—either bred in the United States, owned by an American or tracing their ancestry back to U.S. breeding farms.

First prize of $90,000 will be at stake when the nine get the word from starter Eddie Blind at 3:45 p.m. EST.

He's A Smoothie, Canadian champion owned by Bill Beasley of Toronto and trained by his son, Warren, was bred in Canada but his roots are in Kentucky. His sire, Round Table, stands in the Blue Grass country and his dam, Ratine, was a one-time resident of the same area.

Smoothie, in a work-out Thursday went over a half-mile in 48 seconds.

Irish-born Sam McComb will make his third appearance this year atop He's A Smoothie, who has been assigned opening odds of 15 to 1 along with In Command.

Beasley said Smoothie, who has done all his racing in Canada so far, "has speed and he will do anything that's asked of him."

But he said every race the Canadian has taken part in this year has been "in deep, soft heaving going."

"The fact is we don't know how good He's A Smoothie is."

Damascus has been made the 4 to 5 choice. The son of Sword Dancer-Kerala has won 12 of his 15 starts this season and never been worse than third—in the Kentucky Derby—in compiling a one-year money winning record of $792,941.

Ribocco, who cost his owner $35,000 as a yearling, was made the second choice at 3 to 1.

Fort Marcy is next in line at 8 to 1. Then follow Tobin Bronze 10 to 1, Chateaubriand and Casaque Grise, 12 to 1, He's A Smoothie and In Command at 15 to 1 and Speed Symboli, 20 to 1.

Passing Star Picked As Best in the West

CALGARY (CP) — Peter Liske, record-breaking quarterback with Calgary Stampeders, has been awarded the Jeff Nicklin trophy as most valuable player in the Western Football Conference.

Pat Mahoney, conference president, said Liske had an "overwhelming plurality" in voting by WFC players. The vote was not given and the second- and third-placed players were not named.

Liske led Stampeders to first place in the WFC this season with all-pro records of 508 pass attempts, 303 completions, 40 touchdown passes and a WFC single season record of 4,479 yards gained in the air.

Liske, 25, is a former Penn State star who went to New York Jets in 1964 and was with the AFL Buffalo Bills before going to Toronto Argonauts in 1965. Toronto traded him to Calgary after the 1965 season.

OVER WEATHER . . . . . FOR EAST PLAYOFF

Clair Stops Fretting

OTTAWA (CP)—Coach Frank Clair has given up wondering about the weather for Sunday's Eastern Football Conference semi-final against Toronto Argonauts.

"I can't do anything about it anyway," the Ottawa Rough Rider coach said Thursday as his players were dressing for a light workout on their snow-covered practice field.

Clair, as was everyone else, was caught by surprise when he woke up Thursday to see two inches of snow on the ground. The long-range weather forecast is for more snow—or rain—Saturday, but it probably will be light, if it comes.

It should be overcast Sunday with temperatures in the low 30s for the sudden-death playoff, but there is little chance of any snow or rain.

While the Riders were working out, the field crew at Lansdowne Park was clearing snow from the newly sodded field and putting the finishing touches to the 5,000 square yards of new turf laid last week. They expect to wash the mud off the new grass today and mark the field Saturday or Sunday morning.

TACKLE ROUGHIES

Esks Finished On Hot Streak

REGINA (CP)—Edmonton Eskimos have a precedent going for them Saturday in their Western Football Conference semi-final against the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

But if they follow the precedent, they'll set another.

The Eskimos and Roughriders have met nine times in playoff games with the Eskimos winning six, including all three of the semi-finals.

There has never been an all-Alberta final.

The winner of Saturday's game will meet Calgary Stampeders in a best-of-three series to decide the West's representative in the Grey Cup game Dec. 2 at Ottawa.

The Eskimos have more going than the precedent. For the last half of the season they were the hottest club in Canada, winning seven and tying one in their last nine games. They are unbeaten since Sept. 30, when they lost to the Stampeders. They won their last five, including victories over the Stampeders and the Roughriders.

ESKS WELL RESTED

Another plus for the Eskimos is a rest that has lasted since November 1, four days longer than the Roughies.

This has enabled Edmonton's injured to recuperate.

Halfback Don Lisbon's leg injury should be healed; quarterback Terry Baker's pulled groin muscle should be back to normal, and flanker Randy Kerbow's ailing back should improve.

If Lisbon's leg has healed, his presence will add balance to the Eskimo attack.

He joins fleet Jim Thomas and big Art Perkins in the backfield, and will add another running threat.

But the Roughriders have George Reed, whose 1,471 yards rushing this season was more than half the team's total.

The Riders also have Ed Buchanan, a running and pass-catching threat, plus the ever-present weapon of the Ron Lancaster-to-Hugh Campbell pass. And coach Eagle Keys said Thursday his team is healthier than any time this season.

The pass could be a major factor if the weather forecast holds up. The weatherman has predicted 40-degree temperatures with no rain.

Sledge Gets Draft Delay

VANCOUVER (CP) — Leroy Sledge of the British Columbia Lions has received a deferment of at least six months from his U.S. army draft board.

General Manager Denny Veitch of the Western Football Conference club said Thursday the backfielder received the deferment from his draft board at Richmond, Va.

Sledge, a U.S. junior college dropout and one of the finds of the Canadian Football League season, was to report to the board on Nov. 22.

"They believed it is the best interest of all concerned that Leroy be deferred for the time being," Veitch said.

Celtic Image Damaged; Club Fines All Players

GLASGOW (CP)—Glasgow Celtic has taken the unprecedented step of fining every player on the soccer team who participated in the Battle of Montevideo last weekend.

The battle was the World Cup championship playoff against Racing Club of Argentina when Celtic, European champion, fell 1-0.

By the time the match ended Celtic had only seven men on the field, four of their team and two Argentines having been ordered off after the match degenerated into a fight that could hardly be called soccer.

"It was a shock that the team which had established such a wonderful reputation for discipline should fall so badly from grace on this occasion," Kelly said.

REASON NEEDED

Celtic defeated Racing Club 1-0 in Glasgow. Then the Scots lost 2-1 in Buenos Aires, making necessary the playoff—a match that will go down in soccer history as the Battle of Montevideo.

Kelly said he thought he must put forward some reason for a "most unfortunate match" and added:

"Let me assure you that this club from the directors to the players, take responsibility for what happened on this day.

"A reason for our players forgetting themselves and losing their tempers so badly was the fact that winger Jimmy Johnstone, who had been so badly abused in all three games was most unfairly dismissed from the field by the referee.

"We do not want to individualize on the players, and are taking the unprecedented step in football by fining the whole team £250 ($750) per player."

Farmers Fail; Colony Climbs

Farmer Construction couldn't continue the upset pattern at Lansdowne Junior High School Thursday night and Independents marched to a four-point lead in the Victoria Senior Basketball League race.

Independents, who perhaps owed Farmers a favor for the upset win the construction crew scored over Labatts last weekend, declined to show gratitude and thumped Farmers 79-48.

Points were collected early as Independents jumped into a 33-17 half-time lead and kept up the bombing after the intermission. Darrell Lorimer fired 19 points for the winners while Rick Williamson and Ken Gregory each contributed 18.

In another contest, Colony Inn gave Labatts their second straight loss. The 79-55 score put Colony into a second-place tie with the brewers, four points behind the leaders.

Jim Cunningham staged a 23-point performance for Colony, dropping 13 of 16 free throws and adding five baskets. Ellery Littleton added authority to the Inn's scoring with 14. Labatt pacers were Ed Kowalyk with 19 and Joe Patterson with 13 points.

The Owl Night rally of the Victoria Motor Sports Club, one of nine B.C. regional championship events of the year and one of two on Vancouver Island, will be run this Saturday and Sunday.

The 12-hour test of driving and navigating skill will send 30 cars over a 220-mile course winding through the southern half of the Island. Directions and route instructions are secret until 30 seconds before the starting time.

First car gets under way at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Town and Country shopping centre, following technical inspection at 5:30. The rally ends Sunday morning.

School Teams Tie In Two Matches

Four teams who met Thursday to fight it out in exhibition rugby couldn't win—the matches ended in draws for Claremont and Shawnigan Lake high school clubs.

In the games played at North Saanich Junior High School, Claremont's first team came from behind to draw 3-3 with their Shawnigan Lake opposition. Claremont and Shawnigan Lake second teams fought to a scoreless tie.

An unconverted try by Pat Goodwill gave Shawnigan Lake an early lead as they took over in most of the loose scrums. But Claremont weight saved the day when Ted Clark beat his man and dove over for the tying try in the second half.

In the second contest both teams played an evenly matched game. Claremont had the only major scoring threat when Wayne Ruffle missed a penalty kick in the second half.

Seventh Shutout

Goalkeeper Fern Barker earned her seventh shutout in eight games Thursday as Oak Bay defeated Mount View 1-0, in the final game of the Inter-High girls' grass hockey league. Oak Bay wins the Tally Shield with eight straight wins during which Miss Barker allowed only one goal.

Morris Keeps Coaching Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions will retain Ron Morris as assistant coach but may release assistants Tony Knap and Al Evans, head coach Jim Champion indicated Wednesday.

"Morris will be here next year," he said in an interview.

Asked about the status of Knap and Evans, Champion replied:

"I prefer to say there will be some changes. I am not firing anyone because I did not hire them."

Morris Knap and Evans were hired before the start of the 1967 season

Mount Douglas Wins

Variety Is Offered On Holiday Program

It hubby is one who likes to see and be seen at sports events, it's possible the harassed housewife won't see him until Monday morning, or thereabouts.

For instance:

● Football; Victoria Tyees close out the city's professional campaign with Saturday night's date against Sacramento Buccaneers at Royal Athletic Park.

● Golf; For the "doer," the annual Remembrance Day tournament at Uplands may be the ticket.

● Soccer; Victoria O'Keefes, switching to Macdonald Park in hopes of better footing and success, meet Vancouver Firemen in Pacific Coast League play Saturday; Sunday will be chock-full of District League games.

● Hockey; Vancouver Island's weekly doubleheader at Esquimalt's Sports Centre tonight will be followed by a Sunday intercollegiate how-de-do between Victoria's Vikings and Notre Dame of Nelson. Also, Victoria's junior Cougars have a Monday night date at Memorial Arena with Kamloops.

● Bowling; Another participating event, with the B.C. tenpin championships at Mayfair Lanes Saturday and Sunday.

● Basketball; Victoria Chinooks strive for Inter-City Junior Men's League leadership with Saturday and Sunday setos against tough CYO Saints of Vancouver.

● Rugby; Oak Bay's seven-a-side tournament has been postponed until the spring, but the Victoria Union's first-division lead will be at stake on the Gordon Head campus Sunday when Vikings tackle Castaways.

Briefly, that's it. The fine details, such as where and when, may be found in the Sports Menu on the right.

And if that's not enough to upset the good lady, maybe television will . . . with the usual run of football and hockey offerings.

Soviet Splasher Cracks Old Mark

LENINGRAD (AP)—Russia's Vladimir Kosinsky, 22, broke one of the oldest world records in the swimming book Wednesday when he was clocked in 1:06.7 seconds for the 100-metre breaststroke.

BERLIN (AP)—East Germany's 16-year-old Roland Matthes Wednesday swam the 200-metre backstroke in the world-record time of 2:07.9.

He sliced 1.5 seconds from the mark held by Charles Hickox of the United States set Aug. 29 last year.

EDUCATION SYSTEM RAPPED

Pupils 'Should Discuss Everything and Anything'

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

The education system was the target at Saseenos elementary school Thursday night.

But the six-man panel and the 150 persons who came to hear it mauled everything from children, parents, teachers, businessmen, computers, the hungry '30s to the size of school lockers.

"What we're trying to do is exchange ideas," said moderator Mrs. Kay Maughan, veteran English teacher and girls counsellor at Edward Milne Senior Secondary School.

Panel members were Howard Elder, Sooke area representative on the capital district regional planning board; research chemist Frank Jirik; principal, and Saanich councillor Alan Newberry; David McClimon, teacher and boys' counsellor at Edward Milne; university student John Bartanus and radio moderator Victor Williams.

Dr. Jirik said he sent his children to school to be "happy," happiness lies in establishing a relationship with others in the community.

And it can come to a child at school when he learns the joy of achievement, he said.

The function of education is to teach the student to examine himself, said Mr. Bartanus. Then he can best judge where he can contribute most in society.

High schools should be freer, he said, with discussions "on anything and everything." Two taboo topics which should be dealt with—religion and sex.

"We're not here to train people for the industrialists," said Coun. Newberry. The teacher's function should be to lead the child to think for himself.

"It's difficult to operate in that context in our school system."

The first thing children should learn is to question, said a man in the crowd.

"We have a right to challenge anything."

But we are moving into an age of computers operating computers, said a minister, "where there's no more need to think, to make meaningful decisions."

Mr. Elder said children must be moved to a hunger for learning by their parents before they get to school.

And they must acquire a sense of values, said trustee Mrs. Isabelle Reader from the crowd.

"Perhaps that's what we're seeking — a sense of values," said the moderator.

Lack of freedom and too many rules were among chief criticisms listed by 50 boys in a survey he took, said Mr. McClimon.

Asked to list their 10 major criticisms of the school, they said classes were boring, there was too much memory work and homework.

Those surveyed also said teacher's didn't spend enough time with bright students, that teachers were kept "too busy."

If student defiance and indifference stemmed from a lack of realism in courses, said Mr. Elder, sex education is a chance for schools to come to grip with reality for their students.

Teachers have jealously guarded the classroom, said Coun. Newberry, suggesting people from the community could help teach their specialities under a teacher's supervision.

Exams 'Inadequate' To Test Languages

The examination, traditional measure of student progress, is inadequate because "much of what teachers are trying to get at can't be tested in a paper-and-pencil way."

"And in some cases there is no single answer," teacher and principal Robert Buzza said Thursday.

The president of the 18,200-member B.C. Teachers' Federation was in Victoria conferring with local educators.

The inadequacy of the written test is all too apparent in the field of foreign languages, he suggested. After the usual classroom instruction in French he can read and write it fairly well.

"But I can't speak it."

VALUE LOST

Much of value in the testing process is lost because the student never gets to see where he went wrong on an exam, said Mr. Buzza.

He suggested greater use of tape recordings in language instruction and more laboratory-style instruction help meet the shortages of the exam system.

There are other ways parents could be apprised of their children's progress at school besides the usual report card.

And there is no reason why report cards should go out at the same time.

Various numbers of reports could be sent, depending on the pupil, the federation president suggested. Or parents could be advised in face-to-face interviews with teachers or even by telephone talks with teachers.

Mr. Buzza said he could see three trends developing in the general education picture. One is a healthy decentralizing under way at the local level which leaves teachers with much more classroom freedom.

Then there is a centralizing situation developing at the provincial level because it is apparent some secondary schools are incapable of doing the job through staff and facility shortages.

It may be a consolidation of school districts is needed but such a move should be only on the basis of educational need, he said.

Finally, out of the current educational ferment will come a clearer and better definition of the teacher's job.

This may mean some day teachers will work in teams, with a highly qualified professional assisted by one or two student teachers and possibly other auxiliary help.

TWO STUDENTS WIN 'NATIONALISM' AWARDS

Two $500 scholarships "to encourage Canadian political and economic independence" were donated by a Victoria auto dealer Thursday.

Recipients are William Sparks, of 651 Falkland Road, a second-year economics student at the University of Victoria, and Geoffrey Thornburn, of 500 Gore, taking post-graduate studies in political science and economics.

It is the second year Peter Pollen has donated the scholarships.

"I'm a bit of a flag-waving nationalist," was the way he described his views on Canadian economics.

U.S. Support Drops In U.K. Viet Poll

LONDON (Reuters) — British public support for American policy in Vietnam dropped sharply in the last four months, says a national opinion poll survey published in The Daily Mail today.

Of 1,755 voters questioned, 66 per cent said Britain should not support the U.S. while only 21 per cent said it should. This compared with 45 per cent opposed in July and 43 per cent in favor.

Bible Group, Men Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four men, a Bible society and an Alberta funeral chapel company have been charged with conspiracy under the terms of the funeral act of British Columbia.

Frank Richardson of Penticton, a director of Roselawn Funeral Chapel, was remanded in court Thursday and released on $1,000 bail in connection with the charge.

Police said Roselawn was not connected with the charge.

Lawrence Albrecht, 50, of Penticton and Donald R. Callaghan and Kenneth Schmelke, both of Red Deer, are also charged. The Alberta men were arrested Wednesday in Red Deer and were expected to be brought to Penticton for trial.

Also charged are the Western Bible Society of Penticton and Eventide Funeral Chapels Ltd. of Sylvan Lake, Alta., about 20 miles west of Red Deer.

The defendants are charged with conspiring to unlawfully promote a pre-arranged funeral plan contrary to the funeral act.

Police said the charges arise from sales to older persons of pre-paid funeral plans costing between $300 and $500. A total of $1,000 was involved in the transactions, they said.

MACCAGNO
. . . disappointed

Alberta Reaction

'Bad Effect On Party Everywhere'

EDMONTON (CP) — Bitterly disappointed, Alberta Liberal Leader Mike Maccagno said Thursday Prime Minister Pearson's refusal to allow four cabinet ministers to attend the Alberta Liberal convention "can't help but have a bad effect on the party."

"This has got to hurt the Liberal party in Alberta, in Saskatchewan, in Manitoba, or anywhere else you can name," he said in an interview. "I'm bitterly disappointed."

Mr. Maccagno's reaction generally reflected the reaction of senior Alberta Liberals to the announcement that External Affairs Minister Martin, Finance Minister Sharp, Transport Minister Hellyer and Registrar-General Turner will be unable to attend the convention which opened today.

All were to speak Saturday.

All sent telegrams expressing their regret, and saying that the prime minister had asked them to remain in Ottawa.

REMAIN HOPEFUL

The convention was to go ahead as planned, with the possibility that Ottawa representatives might be present to read the absent ministers' speeches.

David McDonald, a past president of the Alberta Association and program organizer for the convention, said another possibility was that other speakers might be invited to speak on the same topics.

Mr. Hellyer's topic was to have been the problems arising out of Canada's increased urbanization. Mr. Sharp was to speak on the economic and fiscal implications of the urban society. Mr. Turner's address was to be on the consumer and investor in the urban society, and Mr. Martin's on Canada in the world.

Another spokesman said the convention had been expected to draw more than 500 delegates, but said the absence of the ministers could reduce attendance.

Leadership of the Alberta party was not expected to be an issue at this convention.

Mr. Maccagno was elected unopposed last January. He was leader of the Opposition during the last legislature—one of three Liberals and one of five opposition members in the Alberta house.

Expansion Set At VMD Plant

Operations Will Be Enlarged To Gain Industrial Contracts

First phase preparations to make Victoria Machinery Depot one of North America's top builders of critical pressure vessels are under way.

Proposed expansion of handling facilities at the company's Bay Street yard will make VMD a leading contender in the manufacture of giant converters, heat exchangers and other large components for the petroleum, petrochemical, pulp, fertilizer and chemical industries.

It is the company's intention to concentrate on this type of manufacture, for which it has gained a reputation by making medium-sized vessels. Its shipbuilding division closes at the end of December because of economic pressures.

ENCOURAGED

On the eve of his departure on a business trip Thursday, VMD president Harold Husband said he was much encouraged by the latest $700,000 contract to make a number of high pressure vessels for Imperial Oil Ltd.

In the face of stiff competition from the East and the U.S., VMD is "very pleased to have won the contract," Mr. Husband said.

Victoria workmen will build seven high pressure heat exchangers and a high pressure separator for the Imperial Oil refinery in Montreal East now undergoing expansion.

Part of the VMD success in making such vessels is due to machinery such as its Krupp press, to techniques and to skill combined with efficiency.

A company spokesman said "VMD is being looked upon as the most successful fabricator in Canada, and the most progressive."

He said the company is getting high marks for such work as completing a critical vessel job for Canadian Industries Ltd. Sarnia plant which had to be done in 12 weeks.

VMD did the job in 10, fully inspected and tested to the satisfaction of CIL.

SEEK BIGGER JOBS

But bigger jobs are to come. The Bay Street operation wants to get into the manufacture of "monstrous" size vessels in the range of 300 and 400 tons, compared with the 250-ton maximum built to date.

These vessels are in great demand for the manufacture of urea, which in turn is used for fertilizer, plastics and resins.

So far there are only three fabricators in North America capable of building such vessels, the VMD engineer said.

Pressure vessels require the shaping and welding of special steel alloys including chrome and molybdenum, capbale of operating at 3,000 pounds per square inch pressure, or better, and at high temperatures such as 800 degrees F.

No other Canadian firm is engaged in this specific type of manufacture, Mr. Husband said.

He was careful to note that VMD is competitive with U.S. builders even though it must ship stock steel across the continent, then send the finished product back east.

POLLUTION BLAMED IN HERON DEATHS

Three others were nursed back to health by Mr. Oyen.

"Normally the birds would have had plenty to eat but something in the water at Crofton made them sick," he said. "One of them even walked into the kitchen of a Crofton residence."

He said the birds were a pitiful sight.

Two of them died, but three others soon gained strength after being fed upon a diet of fish and meat.

Great Galloping Galapagos Goats!

By JOHN MANNING

Wild goats are like gangsters. They move about in groups, wary, nimble footed, ready to flee at the first sign of danger. They dislike strangers.

In the Galapagos Islands, off the West Coast of South America, goats have been flourishing since they were first introduced during the eighteenth century.

Today they are threatening the balance of nature and the Charles Darwin Foundation is doing its best to have them eradicated.

●

As Powindah's canned sea stores had become depleted in the overlong passage from Panama we decided to salt down meat and fish for our crossing to the Marquesan Islands near Tahiti.

Salt was no problem. It can be had for the taking on Santa Cruz Island, where there is a large salt bed. The problem was how to catch the goats, as I had no gun.

"Nip out into the bush and run 'em down," said Gus Angermeyer, a settler of over thirty years residence in the islands. "A good man can run down the fastest goat alive. There's just one trick to it . . ."

"What's that?" asked Powindah's Mate, as though she were the one who was going to do the running.

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife, Pat, are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 48th in a series on their adventures.

"Start your run on soft ground. Sand's the best. If you get 'em on the beach they'll run into the sea and then you've got 'em." A devilish gleam appeared in his eyes. Gus had the countenance and mannerisms of a jovial pirate. "Once in the water out with the knife and snick—it's all over."

"Oh . . ." said the Mate. "You have to use a knife?"

"Depends on your sensibilities!" His laughter shook the cabin. "You can use a stick if you want."

"I'll have a go at them in the morning," I said. "We'll start salting in the afternoon."

Again Gus convulsed with laughter. Had I been more aware of the situation and less concerned with obtaining fresh meat I might have given more thought to his mirth. However, it had been many weeks since our galley had given forth the odor of roasting meat.

●

"There are wild donkeys up in the hills," continued Gus, "But that would be too far for you to go, even for such a man as you. And then you would have to catch the donkey and ride him down to the beach before you finished him. Yes . . . donkeys are very good. Almost like beef."

"Well, I might see one tomorrow. I'll take a lasso."

"Yes, take a lasso," said Gus. "You have a bush compass?"

"No."

"That's a pity."

"Why?"

"People get lost easily around here. Some have disappeared without a trace, just walking to their outhouse in the dark."

"I'll keep an eye on the sun," I said, still thinking of the meat.

"You'd better stay around sea level. At this time of the year the sun is hard to see when you get higher up. There's more mist up there than frosting on a wedding cake."

"But I hear there are wild pigs in the hills."

"Difficult without a gun," said Gus, fingering his pirate mustache. "You'd have to corner 'em and then go in with a machete. Knife's too short. Machete's just the trick. Watch out for the old tuskers though. They get frisky."

"Let me know, how you make out."

'Sure," I said. "I'll be back around three or so in time to let Pat start salting. I'll drop over and see you."

"Do that."

The first light appeared in the sky just after 5 a.m. the next morning. By then I was already on shore. To my belt was strapped a two-foot machete, as well as a water canteen and a razor sharp seaman's dirk; over my right shoulder was a coil of nylon rope, strong enough to hold a dozen donkeys; while over the left dangled the ship's binoculars. No Cuban guerrilla fighter could have been better armed.

It was the first time I had experienced travelling through inland Galapagos terrain.

On this particular island, Santa Cruz, the ground is festooned with cactii, lava rock boulders and various prickly bushes designed to discourage even the most voracious of goat-sprinters. I lost track of the sun after leaving the beach but so keen was I for sight of a meat-bearing animal that I gave it little thought.

●

A full three hours passed before I saw my first goat. He, and three others, were peering at me over the top of a cliff. They did not move, not even when I began climbing the cliff. They observed me with almost scientific interest.

The energy expended in scaling a forty-foot lava cliff is not conducive to running down even the smallest of goats—especially when the runner-down is bedecked with more gear than a Fuller Brush man.

I looked wildly about for soft ground.

There was none.

As I advanced the goats retreated but without haste as if we were engaged in some sort of ritualistic dance. Finally, I charged.

They simply vanished. One minute they were there, the next moment they were gone, leaving an exhausted, cactus scratched yachtsman in their wake. I was also lost.

It was sundown before I stumbled onto a burro trail leading into the village. I skulked through the community, located the dinghy and rowed seaward to the ship. As I drew near I thought I detected the odor of roasting meat.

"Where on earth have you been?" asked Pat. "And your clothes are all torn."

"Did you catch any goats or donkeys?"

"The damn goats are like racehorses . . . what's the smell?"

"A roast," replied Pat. "Gus came along with two goats for us. He went out and shot them. He said he wasn't entirely certain that you would have any luck."

Waves and Weather Chewing Away U.S. Coasts

In Florida alone, a recent survey showed, annual losses have been running at a rate of $10,600,000.

The multi-colored "painted cliffs" which bring thousands of tourists to Martha's Vineyard off Massachusetts are being slowly chewed away.

The Montauk Point lighthouse on the southern tip of Long Island, whose beacon has guided mariners since 1797, stands on a cliff which has been eroded almost away. The coast guard plans eventually to replace the lighthouse with another on a more stable site.

In Cape May, N.J., two convents, two lighthouses, a coast guard radar station and nearly a fourth of the community's land area have been claimed by the Atlantic Ocean.

NEW BILL INTRODUCED

Senator Joseph D. Tydings (Dem. Md.) recently introduced in Congress a bill which would provide for a three-year, million-dollar study by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to the 93,000 miles of tidal and Great Lakes shoreline.

A study of Maine's winding coast by the federal Soil Conservation Service found that 500 miles of property, most of it privately owned, was suffering from serious erosion damage.

The study said about half of this shoreline, with a $250,000,000 value as real estate, could be stabilized by planting vegetation and building revetments at a cost of $83,000,000. The other half would require even more expensive treatment, including breakwaters.

Beach erosion is a problem along much of California's lengthy coastline, forcing the construction of seawalls and the dredging of sand for replacement purposes.

City Travellers Meet Old Pen Pal

MRS. BRYDEN
. . . in New Zealand

A Victoria woman, following the sun in the South Seas, met her pen pal of 15 years when she and her husband visited New Zealand last month.

Mrs. K. F. Bryden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. G. Wiper, 4655 Cordova Bay Road, is on a two-year world tour with her husband.

Mrs. Bryden and L. W. Jury of New Plymouth, New Zealand, started corresponding when both were in school. The correspondence was allowed to lapse until last year when Mrs. Jury came across some of the letters and "she thought we'd better check up" said Mr. Jury.

The Brydens have visited Tahiti and Fiji and are going to Australia this month, then to Japan where they hope to work before returning home via Europe.

The travellers were most impressed with Fiji and the friendliness of the Islanders.

They found many youngsters were anxious to have Canadian pen pals.

FIREMEN, SPCA SAVE GULL

The combined efforts of the Victoria fire department and SPCA Thursday saved a seagull from hanging.

In response to a deluge of telephone calls from people who spotted the gull's plight, the fire department sent 10 men and a ladder truck. The SPCA sent a man and truck.

The gull was removed from the wires, taken to SPCA headquarters and later released by SPCA official D. H. Beeching.

Let's Take a Stroll Through Bastion Square

By R. H. GROOMS

Because there are no new art shows in Victoria, lets take a walk through the spaces and buildings of Bastion Square.

As a recent arrival to Victoria, Bastion Square was new to me. As older Victoria residents and citizens know, it represents a new concept in urban design. It is not unlike many other North American attempts to revitalize the commercial shopping core.

Grooms

I feel it is a great success and should be supported. Naturally as a designer and a planner myself there are many things I would have done otherwise, but this is not under discussion.

Let me take you on a walking tour as if we were visiting an art gallery. Arriving and parking the car in the garage off Yates Street, we enter the north side of the square on the second level, or come down the spiral stairs from the third level.

PROTECTED BY CANOPY

The first impression is good. If it is raining, we are protected by a canopy overhead. The stairs and the canopy underneath are interesting structures in gay colors.

We note the Village Fair building on the right. It is a handsome brick edifice of the late 19th century. The Maritime Museum is ahead. Note the movable concrete planters on the pavement and the nice old gas lamps. The planters are like little birdbaths with small metal legs.

The paving of the "floor" of the square is attractive. A circular pattern of bricks set in concrete, with a stone aggregate for texture, makes a good composition. It is not in any way hindering the pedestrian in high heels or ordinary shoes. This crisp textural accent is complimented by the vertical forms of the old fashioned gas lamps, illuminated with a natural gas, not cute bulbs.

The lamps are metal stands with yard arms below the lantern, all painted in battleship gray. One old "hook" or anchor is placed to form a sculpture that contrasts with the smooth walls of the Maritime Museum.

TRIVIAL, BUT FUN

The museum is unfortunately painted in a rather insipid creamy tan to hide its true materials. The horizontal level trim is in a rather watered-down Indian red. White paint does enhance the handsome windows and give a good nautical touch. The arched windows of the top floor are elegant and beautifully proportioned. The playful cupola or turret is fun, if trivial.

I am struck with the good design and graphics of the signs for the whole square. Especially good are the lettering and form of those for the Village Fair shops and the indications of office locations.

The little Cafe Le Coq Au Vin (Cafe Chicken in Wine) is not open for business, but I look forward to enjoying it soon.

As we swing around the Maritime Museum to the right and head down into the main promenade, we see a large sculpture setting. It is on a strong gray granite plinth made of separated cobble stones to form the platform.

It supports a sculpture group consisting of two large "hooks" from ships, resting on their sides. For an accent, Second World War torpedo. The big torp belying its deadly function is painted in gay colors. The body is basic black, with its head a bright yellow and the fuse tip cap in a bright red.

VIGOROUS OLD BUILDING

Straight ahead of us is the vigorous old Board of Trade building of 1892. It is one of those amazing Victorian era composite designs in gray limestone on the ground floor. These stones massively support the upper stories of red brick. This is no wishy-washy office block. It comes on very strong. It has yellow painted wood trim around its handsome deep windows. It is empty at the moment, but should not remain so for long.

Back on the promenade of the square we see it slopes slightly toward Wharf Street. The brick patterns and concrete varied sections lead to two stairs and a platform of "bridge" as on a ship.

From the "bridge" the viewer sees a large ship mast acting as a flag pole. This area overlooks some quite undistinguished dock clutter across the water.

(RELIEVE DULL FINISH

The supporting wall for all this is designed as a textured "canted" wall, that is, it slopes back at the top. It is concrete with recessed bas relief shapes in rectangular abstract patterns. These serve to relieve the dull finish of exposed structural concrete.

The two stairs both lead to the lower level where we enter on to Wharf Street. Wood benches and more planters are supplemented by a group of small trees and one promising little oak. These lend an intimate scale to the space and give a needed human referrent for visual comfort.

Attractive metal blue lettering for "Bastion Square" is mounted on the canted wall as seen from Wharf Street. Black and white bollards keep out vehicles, and there are more good changes of level and "floor" textures.

The fountain wall is a mere tricle of water and is in too cramped a position to be seen properly. It should be set parallel to Wharf Street and perhaps on the same wall with the lettering which could then be illuminated at night. Too big a feature is made of the north stairs, which would be just as serviceable without draping itself across the front of the bas relief wall.

Next time we will take a look at the inside of some of the buildings such as the Village Fair and its boutiques and shops, and perhaps the Maritime Museum.

Diamond In the Groove

As orders for Christmas recordings specially imported from Europe are now being despatched, this seems a good time to examine some of the records for the Christmas season which are pouring into the stores each day.

There are dozens of recordings of traditional carols sung by church choirs, children's choirs, family groups and Hollywood stars; but, among the more sophisticated records, two sung by the Elizabethan Singers conducted by Louis Halsey and accompanied by Simon Preston are of particular interest to those who are tired of amplified carols and Jingle Bells.

"Sing Nowell, Carols for Christmas and Other Festivals," (Argo ZRG 5399 Stereo, RG 399 Mono) contains many unusual, interesting carols sung with beautiful precision and enlivened by a variety of soloists.

Some carols whose tunes and lyrics are familiar to many people are included but these are arranged and sung in so exceptional a way that they provide a new musical experience.

Equally well-recorded and unusual in its execution is "Sir Cristemas, Carols Newly Composed and Arranged by Louis Halsey." Argo ZRG 5446 Stereo, RG 446 Mono.

This record derives its title from a book of Secular Carols published by Novello; four of the secular carols are included on the record.

Both records include a pamphlet of the words to add to the understanding and enjoyment of the listener.

Perhaps the most joyful, restful music by which to decorate a tree or stir a pudding is Ralph Vaughan William's "Fantasia on a Christmas Theme" now recorded on "Music from Guildford Cathedral" CSD 3580 Stereo, CLP 3580 Mono.

"Family Carols" SCX 3562 Stereo, 33 SX 1749 Mono combines the undeniable skills of the Bach Choir, the Jacques Orchestra and David Willcocks in a full selection of familiar carols.

Of particular value to the gift-giver with a limited budget is the selection of highlights from the long-playing record issued as a 45' "Family Carols" SEG 8512.

Two more of these small discs, reductions from longer, more expensive recordings, are worthy of mention at this season.

From "Carols sung by King's College Choir", is derived "Carols" SEG 7739, directed by Boris Ord; and from "A Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols" comes "The Three Kings" EAF 123, directed by David Willcocks.

Gregoire Won't Run

MONTREAL (CP) — Gilles Gregoire says he has no intention of seeking another term as a member of Parliament.

The independent member for Lapointe, who is leader of a separatist party, le Ralliement national, said on his arrival here from Paris Wednesday night that he has learned enough since he was elected to Parliament as a Creditiste in 1962.

Communist Ousted

PORTLAND (AP) — Voters knocked an admitted Communist out of office Tuesday. Donald Hamerquist, 28, a Democratic district committeeman on the city's Southeast Side, was recalled by a vote of 60 to 9. The Multnomah County Democratic central committee began circulating recall petitions against Hamerquist after Hamerquist admitted he is a Communist.

Man Sentenced 20 Years Later

AUGSBURG, West Germany (AP)—Manfred Jung, 40, broke into tears Thursday as a court sentenced him to seven years in jail for a double slaying 20 years ago.

And in the courtroom an 85-year-old pensioner who had spent 18 years behind bars on a false conviction in the case murmured: "At last."

White-haired Johann Lettenbauer had walked out of prison only two years ago after a new investigation of the case cleared him in the 1947 murder of his daughter, Maria, 25, and her two-year-old son, Arthur.

FERGUS and JANIS
. . . married this afternoon

Young Symphony Pair Make Music Together

Two young Victoria musicians who attended the same high school—five years apart—but never met until the Victoria Symphony Orchestra brought them together, were married this afternoon at First United Church.

Tympanist Fergus Heywood and cellist Janis Lee are not the first couple whose romance budded and bloomed within the symphony ranks, but they are almost certainly the youngest.

Fergus is 23. His bride is a dark-eyed charming teen-ager of 18.

Janis is starting her fourth season with the Symphony Orchestra—she was initiated in the summer of 1963 in the ensemble that played for Otto-Werner Mueller's conducting class.

Her previous experience was gained with the Greater Victoria Schools Symphony and with the Schools Junior Orchestra under Thomas Tucker.

As for Fergus, he is a youthful veteran of eight years in the symphony ranks.

Victoria-born, he "had rhythm" from the earliest days, expressing it as a child in tap and song routines in Velda Wille dance revues.

His mother, Mrs. F. Heywood, McRae Avenue, says she tried him with piano but it didn't take. "It was always the drums that interested him. But I never thought of it as leading anywhere."

At the age of 14, with a friend who played sax, Keith Donaldson (who, incidentally, was one of his ushers at today's wedding), and another who played piano, Fergus formed his first dance combo.

They practised in the Heywood rumpus room and it was not long before they got their first professional engagement—a New Year's Eve dance on Salt Spring Island.

He has continued to play with dance groups through the years and is at the moment the rhythm man with a freelance group, the Midnight Ramblers.

While at Victoria Secondary School he was tympanist with the Greater Victoria Schools Symphony under Dorothy Evans and was a member of the percussion section of the National Youth Orchestra for four years.

At an NYO concert in Toronto, Fergus was singled out for special mention by John Beckwith, a former Victorian who is a noted composer, music critic and writer in Eastern Canada.

Fergus attended the universities of Victoria and British Columbia and is now on the staff of the B.C. Forestry Research Laboratory.

In what spare time he has between the lab, symphony rehearsals and dance band engagements, he teaches a few pupils the fine art of the tympanist.

Say, What Ever Became of . . .?

By GENE HANDSHAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Remember sob singer Johnnie Ray and his Little White Cloud That Cried? Farley Granger, Dennis Morgan, Edgar Bergen and a television sleuth Roger Smith?

A canny producer, counting on their fan loyalty at the box-office, has rounded up all five after a combined absence from the big screen of nearly 65 years.

For added flavoring he has thrown in two other names well remembered from the past: Brian Donlevy, who film-acted last year in Hong Kong, and Mala Powers, the lovely Roxanne in Jose Ferrer's film of Cyrano de Bergerac in 1950. Her last screen role was as a Russian army scientist in a science-fiction film earlier this year.

MIXING 'EM UP

Says producer A. C. Lyles: "I like to mix 'em up—veteran names, present-day names, new names."

Ray, an Oregon farm boy with a hearing aid, burst upon the show-business scene in 1952 after writing and recording The Little White Cloud That Cried.

He says:

His only movie until now was in 1954 when he played a singing priest, the son of vaudevillians Ethel Merman and Dan Dailey, in There's No Business Like Show Business.

At 38, Ray is skinny and tanned from beach life at Malibou. In Rogue's Gallery he co-stars as a uniformed policeman and sings not a note.

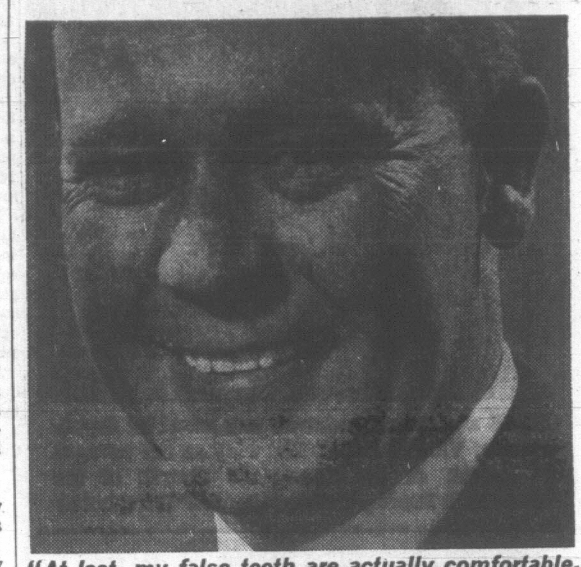

"More than anything," he said, "I want to be a movie actor.

"I never want to give up singing. But you have to put something new into your life or you start going stale."

BRITISH-RHODESIAN DIFFERENCES

'Now Know Where We Stand'

SALISBURY (CP) — British Commonwealth Secretary George Thomson said today his two-day talks here with Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith showed that many important points of difference still stand in the way of a settlement of the Rhodesian independence issue.

Thomson's comments came shortly after a statement by Smith that the talks might have moved the dispute nearer settlement.

Thomson declined to say exactly what these points of difference are.

Smith, asked whether he thought the talks had brought a settlement nearer, said: "It is possible. We have honestly analysed the position and we now know where we are."

But he apparently scotched London reports of a speedy meeting with Harold Wilson by replying "What for?" when reporters asked if he planned to meet the British prime minister again. Then he paused and added: "I don't think so."

Smith, who ended talks Thursday with Commonwealth Secretary Thomson, told reporters it is possible the talks had brought the two sides closer together.

Britain had refused to grant independence to the African colony because Smith's white-minority government had refused to agree to eventual black-majority rule.

"But there is little hope of us moving back," he said, after the publication of the regime's Rhodesian constitutional commission report, scheduled for early 1968.

The report is expected to lay the foundation for a national constitution which could possibly lead to a republic.

New Party Formed To Support Levesque

SEPT-ILES, Que. (CP) — A group of former officials of Liberal and Conservative organizations say they have formed a new association to support and promote the ideas of Rene Levesque.

At a press conference Dr. Roch Bainville of Sept-Iles, a former vice-president of the North Shore section of the Quebec Liberal Federation, said the new association will be named l'Association Levesque-Nouveau-Quebec—the Levesque New Quebec Association.

He also said it has been formed by officials who have resigned from their respective political associations.

The 45-year-old former provincial minister of resources and welfare resigned when the federation rejected his proposal for a sovereign Quebec linked to Canada in an economic union.

He continues to sit in the legislature as an independent.

Mr. Ouellet said the new association is not one of extremists.

"The movement is not anti-English, nor anti-American. It aims only at supporting the Levesque thesis and to ensure that it is well explained.

Hanoi Won't Release U.S. Pilots

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk has disclosed he told Mrs. John F. Kennedy that North Vietnam could not release the American flyers it holds prisoner "because it would be an encouragement to continue the bombing."

"They also consider the pilots as war criminals," Cambodia's ruling prince told a press conference after Mrs. Kennedy flew to Thailand.

The prince, whose government maintains close ties with North Vietnam and the Viet Cong, said Mrs. Kennedy had brought up the subject of American prisoners and inquired particularly about American airmen held in North Vietnam and about Donald Ramsey, a U.S. official captured in South Vietnam almost two years ago. Several Americans taken by the Viet Cong have been released through Cambodia in the past.

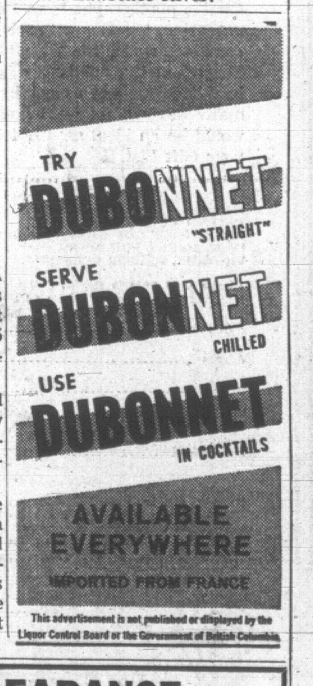

Mrs. Kennedy, looking a bit tired after her six-day stay in Cambodia, returned to Bangkok aboard a U.S. Air Force plane escorted to the Thai border by two Soviet-built Cambodian MiGs. She and her party leave for home early Saturday.

TB Drug Developed

OMAHA, Neb. (Reuters) — A newly-developed drug was hailed Thursday as the first breakthrough in more than 25 years for the control or eradication of tuberculosis.

The drug, called myambutol ethambutol, was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for use under strict supervision of a doctor.

Dr. Irving Kass, head of the pulmonary section at Nebraska University medical centre, said the drug, when properly controlled seems to be what doctors have been seeking for more than 25 years in the fight against TB.

Famed International Horse Race on Air Saturday at 12:30

Michael O'Hehir, Ireland's famous sportscaster, will be a guest commentator on the NBC television network's color coverage of the $150,000 Washington, D.C., international horse race Saturday, at 12:30, on Channel 5.

Eddie Arcaro and Jim Simpson will be the announcing team at the 16th running of the race, from Laurel (Md.) race track.

O'Hehir, with a heavy background in European thoroughbred racing, will be asked to comment on the many foreign champions who will be racing against the best U.S.-trained horses, including three-year-old champion and horse-of-the-year Damascus.

Latest invitee to accept the challenge of the 1¼-mile turf event is Australian champion Tobin Bronze. The Aussie thoroughbred joins representatives from five countries in this year's lineup. Damascus and Fort Marcy will be bearing U.S. colors while Ribocco and In Command will be representing England; Speed Symboli, Japan; Casaque Grise, France; and He's a Smoothie, Canada.

The NBC colorcast will mark the first time the international has received live network coverage.

Teen-age Pageant

Supervising the wardrobe of one teen-age daughter can be a gruelling experience for the average mother, but dressing 64 nervous teen-aged girls on the most exciting night of their lives adds up to plain bedlam.

Kim Dawson, the young Dallas woman who has the responsibility of selecting the wardrobe for the 64 finalists for the "Miss Teen-Age America Pageant," has learned to take the hectic activity in stride. The pageant will be broadcast Saturday night at 10 in color on Channel 7.

"Even though I start working on plans in May," says Miss Dawson, "everything seems to break loose the very night of the pageant. I'd say my primary function that night is to walk around backstage with a couple of boxes of facial tissues to help stem the torrential flood of emotional tears. The closer we get to pageant time, the greater the flow of tears. The reason doesn't matter. They cry whether they're happy or whether they're sad. I don't even question the reason. I simply distribute the tissues."

Football

The San Diego Chargers, in second place in the AFL's Western Division, play host to the Miami Dolphins in a game to be colorcast on Channel 5 Sunday afternoon at 2.

The colorcast, from San Diego's new stadium, will have Charlie Jones and Kyle Rote in the NBC-TV booth.

At 11 on Channels 2 and 6 the NFL game will be seen between Pittsburgh and St. Louis, while on Channel 5 the Kansas City Chiefs will battle the Boston Patriots.

At 11 on Channel 8 the Toronto Argonauts battle the Ottawa Rough Riders in the Eastern Conference semi-final.

History Recalled

Christian Island, a small, sandy, wooded island on Ontario's Georgian Bay and once the scene of starvation and violence for its Indian residents, is visited by CBC-TV's This Land of Ours, Saturday afternoon at 4 on Channel 2.

Christian Island is about three miles from the mainland and less than a two-hour drive from Toronto. It's the home of 500 Chippewa Indians of the Beausolcil tribe.

The CBC-TV film recalls the history of this picturesque island, shows its inhabitants at work and play, and looks at the island's economy, which up until a few years ago was slipping.

Thirty years ago most Indian families on the island were making a good living . . . raising cattle and pigs, growing their own grain and keeping a garden. However, they were not experienced farmers and soon the light, sandy soil gave out. They turned to the forests and before long had sold all the big timber and there were no resources left.

General Appears

Lt.-Gen. James M. Gavin (ret.) will be the guest on Meet the Press Sunday at 5 on Channel 5.

Gen. Gavin is currently on a trip to Vietnam as a guest of Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam.

He recently resigned as a member of the Massachusetts Democratic Advisory Council, saying that he could not support President Johnson for re-election in 1968.

Gen. Gavin is the former chief of research and development for the Department of the Army and was U.S. ambassador to France under President Kennedy.

JAY NORTH

Hamburgers, Malts Cost TV Star $33

Jay North knows how to ride a horse but he prefers riding an elephant.

"I like elephant riding better," he said, "It's a great sensation."

Except when you fall.

"It's a little farther down," admitted Jay.

Jay, as Terry Bowen, is riding high atop Maya these days, this being the name of the elephant and of the series colorcast on the NBC network.

"It feels good to be back in the U.S.," said Jay, while on furlough from filming in India. "The first thing Sajid (co-star Sajid Khan) and I did was order hamburgers and malts."

There are other things, besides malts and hamburgers, that he's been doing without.

JUST BURN UP

"I gave up Mexican food, sports and TV by going to India," said Jay, listing what he missed most. "My aunt sends me sports clippings all the time. Even though there are English language newspapers in India, there's little news about the U.S. As for the food, I used to think Mexican food was hot. But it's nothing compared with Indian food. You just burn up."

Jay, who achieved fame as TV's Dennis the Menace, has been affected deeply by the contrast of life in India and the U.S.

"It's like stepping through a time machine," said Jay. "life in India is still very primitive. There is great poverty. If the Hippies in America really want to get back in time they should go to India. They'll scream to leave in five minutes. They're living in a dream world in America. They know they can step back into society any time they want to."

The experience has sold Jay on the importance of education.

"Education is the only thing that can help the people," said Jay. "I never realized how important education is until now. If I could shout it from the rooftops I'd say, 'Please stay in school and be educated.' "

It's not just a matter of "do as I say but not as I do" with Jay.

"I'm planning to attend USC." said Jay. "I want to get a law degree. After that I hope to play pro-football and then either go into sports announcing or criminal law."

Beauty Pageant Monday

Miss Victoria Among Contestants Bidding For Coveted Crown

Featured by the appearance of Miss Victoria, Margaret Vickers, the 21st annual Miss Canada pageant will be televised in color Monday evening at 6:30 over Channel 8.

The 26 contestants will be introduced followed by the presentation of the five finalists. The winner will be crowned by outgoing queen Barbara Lynne Kelly of Vancouver.

Singers Doug Crosley and the Lloyd Edwards orchestra will provide the musical setting. Jim Perry will be host.

Sinatra Special

"I'd like to have my own television show someday," admitted Ella Fitzgerald, winging it with a reporter during taping of Frank Sinatra's third major television special, "A Man and His Music."

The special, starring Sinatra, Miss Fitzgerald and Brazilian bossa nova guitarist Antonio Carlos Jobim, will be colorcast on Channel 5 Monday night at 9.

"'Just Plain Ella' would be the format," she continued, dipping her head for emphasis. "I'd just be there doing what I do . . . singing. I'd just be a person."

Ella, sometimes called America's "First Lady of Song," went on.

"I'd want it informal. I'd like to start off by saying right into the camera, 'Hi, there. Welcome to my place. Come on in, relax, and I'll sing some songs for you.' I'd sing a song or two, and then maybe bring on a friend along with me, like Duke (Ellington) or (Antonio Carlos) Jobim.

Ella says that while she enjoys her occasional TV guest appearances, including those she has made with Dean Martin, Perry Como and Andy Williams as well as the Sinatra special, having her own show is just one of the entertaining activities she has in mind.

School Telecasts

Darwin and The Galapagos, CBC-TV's outstanding color science series about the Galapagos Islands which inspired Charles Darwin's theory of evolution, will be a special presentation on Canadian school telecasts.

The film series will be telecast on five consecutive Tuesday mornings, beginning at 10 next week on Channels 2 and 6.

Darwin and the Galapagos was originally telecast in the fall of 1966 on The Nature of Things. The first program in the series, a documentary on the life and work of Charles Darwin, was written and narrated by Lister Sinclair. The remaining four programs, which concentrate on the islands themselves, were written and narrated by John Livingston. The series was produced by James Murray.

In 1835, young Darwin, a divinity student with a passion for scientific research, visited the remote and weirdly beautiful Pacific archipelago of Galapagos, which lies astride the equator, 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador.

Gould to Appear

Famed Canadian pianist Glenn Gould headlines the third and final concert in the color series Centennial Performance, to be telecast on Wednesday night at 9:30 on Channels 2 and 6.

Sharing the spotlight with him are two young winners of the International Nickel Company scholarships in the performing arts, Vancouver mezzo-soprano Audrey Glass and operatic bass Claude Corbell from Rimouski, Que..

The scholarships and the three-concert series were centennial year projects of INCO.

U.S. conductor Vladimir Golschmann occupies the podium for this final centennial performance, as guest conductor of the Toronto Symphony. The hour color concert is produced and directed by Mario Prizek.

Riot Control

To those not involved in police work, instant banana peel and the curdler may sound like new food products.

They're not.

The instant banana peel is a fine white powder that makes streets too slippery to stand on and the curdler emits sound waves intense enough to stop people in their tracks.

Both are among several products developed recently to assist police in controlling civil riots—an increasingly significant task in the United States where rioters cut a destructive swath through many major cities the past summer.

The Tuesday-night public affairs series The Public Eye presents a two-part study of riot control Tuesday night, Nov. 21, at 10:30 on Channels 2 and 6.

LATEST ICE SHOW production will be seen Monday at 8 on Channel 5 with the presentation of the Shipstad and Johnson Ice Follies of 1967. Ed Ames, who will appear as singing host, is seen with five lovelies of the Ice Folliettes.

Shaw Musical

How do you go about rewriting George Bernard Shaw, or just Bernard Shaw, as he preferred to be called? Well, according to Peter Stone, you really don't do quite that.

Stone wrote the book for the new Richard Rodgers musical "Androcles and the Lion" based on the Bernard Shaw play. TV viewers will have a chance to assess his work when the 90-minute musical has its world permiere in color on Channel 5 Wednesday night at 7, starring Noel Coward, Norman Wisdom and Ed Ames.

Stone says he first took the play and divided it into six sections to conform to the practice of television drama for a 90-minute production. After this reforming of the play, he proceeded to cut out about one-third of Shaw's dialogue. No characters or action were eliminated. Lines were often combined and about a quarter of the dialogue in the musical book is Stone's own.

"I did a good deal of paraphrasing, and of course I had to add lines to lead up to songs," Stone says. "I picked about 14 places in the play where I felt a song could be inserted and submitted these to Dick Rodgers. He selected eight of them and we then went ahead." Rodgers also wrote the lyrics to the songs for which he had composed the tunes.

Art Gallery Tour

Cutting across the centuries of art is the individual's own taste. Even the director of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., John Walker, has his preferences.

Walker personally conducts the viewer on a tour of "ladies I have loved" in "American Profile: The Natinal Gallery of Art," and NBC news special to be colorcast Friday night at 10 on Channel 5.

It is an amusing and informative sequence of some of the great paintings of women: Neroccio's "Portrait of a Lady," Clouet's "Diane de Poitiers," Murillo's "A Girl and Her Duenna," Ingres' "Madame de Moitessier" and Fragonard's "Young Girl Reading." Of the latter Mr. Walker says:

"I have been in love with this Fragonard girl for almost 40 years, since I used to have tea with Mrs. Alfred Erickson, who owned her then, and surreptitiously glanced at her while I tried to make polite conversation.

"When the picture was put up for auction the gallery had to bid against another collector. I remember our last bid. The 40 seconds that elapsed until the auctioneer's hammer fell seemed like the 40 years I had been in love."

Summing up, Mr. Walker says: "It is true the ladies I love lack a third dimension. But they never argue, and are never jealous. They never age—never lose their beauty.

NOT SEEKING re-election to House of Commons in next federal election is separatist leader Gilles Gregoire, who talks to reporters after returning from 16-day visit to France. (CP Wirephoto.)

SEPARATIST TO QUIT COMMONS

Ex-Chief Attacks Gregoire

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Thompson (SC—Red Deer) Thursday accused separatist Gilles Gregoire (Ind—Lapointe) in the Commons of breaking his oath of allegiance to the queen and Canada.

Mr. Gregoire demanded that Mr. Thompson withdraw his accusation.

Mr. Thompson, one-time Social Credit associate of Mr. Gregoire, declined to do so and Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said he would make a ruling later.

Mr. Thompson said Mr. Gregoire has defied the oath taken by every MP and asked Prime Minister Pearson what he plans to do about it. Mr. Gregoire was immediately on his feet and, even if Mr. Pearson had wanted to comment, he had no opportunity.

Mr. Gregoire had just returned from France on a fund-raising campaign for an independent Quebec.

He told reporters earlier in Montreal he does not intend to stand for Parliament again.

Transport Minister Hellyer told Mr. Gregoire later that he should have raised money in France to help Canada keep the St. Lawrence River open this winter.

EARLIER TALK

In reply to a question by the Quebec MP, Mr. Hellyer said ice-breaking will be carried out on the St. Lawrence to the extent necessary to prevent flooding.

Mr. Gregoire then asked about winter navigation, but Mr. Lamoureux ruled the question was too general.

Mr. Hellyer rose again however, to say: "I just thought, Mr. Speaker, that if the member had raised enough money in France to build another ice-breaker, we could do a better job."

He sat down to the unfamiliar sound of enthusiastic desk-thumping on both sides of the House.

Wilson To Lose Adviser

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson soon may lose his closest political adviser just as he needs him most in quelling a bitter revolt within the Labor party.

Informants said Thursday Paymaster-General George Wigg soon will leave the government and Parliament to become chairman of the Horserace Betting Levy Board, supervisor of a $2,000,000,000 annual business.

It will mean the departure from Wilson's office of the man who, more than any other, is credited with promoting Wilson to leadership of the Labor party in February, 1963, and into the prime ministership in October, 1964.

Wigg uncovered Tory War Minister John Profumo's liaison with party girl Christine Keeler in the spring of 1963. This forced Profumo's resignation and seriously undermined public confidence in Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's government. The scandal was instrumental in ousting the Conservatives.

Postmen Return

TORONTO (CP)—Mail delivery in Hamilton and the Niagara Peninsula resumed Thursday following a government decision to reinstate a suspended St. Catharines mailman. More than 70 letter carriers in St. Catharines walked off the job Monday when Robert Embury, secretary of Local 17 of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada, was delaying mail while helping another mailman with a heavy load.

NO 'LIGHT PLEDGES' ON CREDIT

★ ★ ★

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow made the acceptance motion.

Ald. Ian Stewart asked for complete assurance that recent amendments to the letters patent gave Victoria taxpayers adequate protection against the possibility of being charged for anything but their own sewerage lines.

"It should be spelled out quite clearly that the credit of Victoria is not to be pledged lightly," Ald. Stewart said. "I am in favor of this project as long as I am assured by the regional board and this council that there is sufficient protection so that at some future date our taxpayers cannot be forced to pick up the tab for other areas."

★ ★ ★

Although the sewer program comes under Regional District jurisdiction each separate municipality is responsible for financing its own share of the cost.

Mayor Stephen insisted on the revised letters patent to avoid the possibility of Victoria taxpayers being charged for the development of sewers in sparsely populated areas.

Arthur Mayse

A while ago I happened to note here that our faithful old plywood 13-footer draws the occasional snicker from pilots of flossier craft. Quick as a weasel, a guy in the boat-purveying business sat down to his typewriter and banged out a letter.

"In the boat business," he writes in part, "except for museum purposes, vintage boats have not increased in value on the market as have automobiles.

"Be that as it may, we felt we could not lose this opportunity to suggest that we have many craft of all sizes, in both power and sail, and would take great pleasure in helping you confront your friends with something as modern as tomorrow and convenient as today, for your frequent fishing expeditions."

Well, L.M., yours is a kind and thoughtful letter, and I don't mind telling you that it far outclasses the usual sales pitch. But I am not sure that I would be happy in something modern as tomorrow and convenient as today.

My boat and I, it happens, have been friends so long that we are on easy terms with each other. It knows I will never purposely ask more than it can accomplish, and I know that if we happen to misjudge the weather, it will bring me home.

Further, those convenient as today boats are too darn self-sufficient. They never need an overhaul, a fact that would cheat me of a spring rite that I cherish. There's something therapeutic about painting a well-sanded hull, with a curse to each fly that mars the glistening finish.

Sooner or later, my veteran hull will quietly and apologetically dissolve under me, and if we don't end our fishing days together, I'll no doubt buy another boat.

But not one of those modern as tomorrow rigs. After all, who knows what shape tomorrow may take?

Granted that amateur meddling is hard for experts to take, I still wish that the extremely able curriculum revision committee had chosen to protest Education Minister Peterson's interference with one of their book choices by less sudden-death means than a group resignation.

Much better, I think to accept a silly ruling under protest, and continue to apply their special skills to the job of seeing that the student gets as close to full measure as they are permitted to give him.

The only echo of their academic hari-kari to reach my ears has been a triumphing call from a woman of baboon mentality who God-blessed the minister: a reaction which I'm sure was far from the committee's intent.

It has occurred to me more than once that Mr. Peterson could best serve education by immersing himself completely in his labor portfolio. But because the stream of knowledge runs muddy in spots, does it make sense to break the jug?

When dark falls early and lasts long, a traffic hazard that persists through all seasons becomes much more acute. This is the lightless bicycle; and though I have warned of it more than once here, it needs emphasizing again.

Typically, the bike that carries no light also carries no rear-fender reflector, or one so dirty that it is useless.

I doubt there's a driver who hasn't had at least one close miss in which only fast reflexes spared him from collision with one of these renegade bikes.

Unless the young rider happens to be wearing at least a scrap of light-colored clothing, he and his steed are all but invisible after dark. He rides in constant danger.

That's it, except to offer an unabashed plug for the Art Linklater secret-of-life special, "Where Did You Come From?" CJVI will repeat this 20-minute record at 11:10 a.m. Saturday and 11:05 a.m. Sunday for children over five and their parents. It's a splendid treatment of an oft-muffed subject.

SHE'S ONE OF SEVEN chosen from 275 applicants and enjoying every minute of her new job as teacher's aide. Mrs. Brenda Duncan, among many other duties, encourages young artist Stewart Noel and back-seat painter Ruth Gregory.

Whole New Breed Of Teacher's Pet Enters Classroom

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Many routine time-consuming jobs—handing out equipment, copying charts, drawing maps on the blackboard—are being done not by teachers but by a teacher's aide.

Mrs. Brenda Duncan of Lake Hill Elementary School is one of seven aides introduced into Victoria classrooms for the first time this year.

The project is still on an experimental basis in Victoria although it has already proved highly successful throughout the United States.

"We do no actual teaching or disciplining," says Mrs. Duncan. "Everything we do and all our ideas are initiated by the teacher.

"The role of the aide is to assist with routine, clerical jobs, relieving the teacher of some of the more mechanical tasks.

"It's very desirable to have teachers' aides in the schools," says Lake Hill principal David Jones. "It gives the teacher more opportunity to plan, teach, evaluate, diagnose, and prescribe remedial measures."

A typical day for Mrs. Duncan may include preparing stencils, printing cardboard charts, tabulating marks, assisting in art classes and helping the kindergarten teacher with her records.

She does no secretarial work or typing.

Qualifications required for a teacher's aide? Grade 12, some experience managing groups such as the boy scouts or girl guides and any particular talents, artistic or musical.

275 APPLICATIONS

A committee of five principals considered 275 applications for the positions, choosing 20 to attend a special three-day orientation program before picking the final seven.

Mrs. Duncan, a mother of four, says she applied because "I like working with children."

"I'm also very fond of all types of handicrafts—painting, ceramics, sewing. When I'm asked to help with anything, it's fun. I enjoy it."

TRIAL, ERROR

Mr. Jones feels that as time goes on many of Mrs. Duncan's responsibilities will expand. "It's still in the experimental stages; there's a lot of trial and error involved."

The seven teaching aides are now being evaluated by the school board. Questionnaires have been distributed asking teachers' opinions of the innovation.

"As I understand it, the policy is to extend the number of aides next year," says Mr. Jones. "This would be welcomed by all."

It certainly seems so. Mrs. Duncan is in great demand. As she says, "Ever since I got here, there hasn't been a spare moment."

Year's Probation For Giving Liquor To 13-Year-Old

His companion was remanded for another month to await sentence.

Magistrate William Ostler made no comment in remanding Wallace McCulloch, 4545 Pipeline.

In placing Edward Thomas, 2314 Bellamy, on a $250 bond he said he felt there was no ulterior motive in giving the boy liquor but it was a serious offence.

They were charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Work to Start On Test Station

Work will start immediately on the $325,000 motor-vehicle testing station in the Lakehill district of Saanich, the provincial public works department said today.

Contract for the work has been awarded to Burns and Dutton Construction (1962) of Richmond.

REGIONAL BOARD STUDIES ASSESSMENT-BASED FORMULA

Gains, Losses in New Library Proposal

Vancouver Island Regional Library has proposed a new method of assessing library costs for its book services.

The board is studying a plan to assess costs on property assessment rather than on a per capita basis.

North Saanich, Sidney, Sooke School district, as well as most other Vancouver Island communities and school districts, would be affected.

For some municipalities, like North Saanich, it will mean a higher library budget, for others a lower.

Fred White, head of the regional library, said the new method is on "ability to pay."

The proposed change, he said, was not designed to increase the budget for the purchase of new books. It would remain the same as last year—$100,000.

The board is expected to vote on the issue early next year.

The changes in budget costs for communities in the capital region are as follows:

Sooke school (64) district will pay $33,524 instead of $39,838. This represents a mill rate of 1.019 as compared to 1.21.

In North Saanich the library budget will rise from $7,654 to $9,427, while Sidney's will drop from $8,379 to $6,692.

Assessments are higher in North Saanich than in Sidney, though the latter has actually a larger population.

New Zone Due For Saanich Light Industry

'Good Deal More' Than 40 Acres

While planning is still in the tentative stages, municipal planner Tom Loney said today he thinks the zone will be "a good deal more" than 40 acres.

"We may do this in stages so while the eventual plan would show a fairly large acreage it will be in fairly digestible bites as we go along," he said.

"We will be proposing a light industrial area of some sort. We hoped to have this to council before this but we have been tied up. I can't tell you at the moment the exact area or too much about it."

Already approved by council is a $300,000 warehouse and retail store for the T. Eaton Company department store just south of the Royal Oak Shopping Centre.

Another company, Simpsons-Sears, has applied for rezoning on 10 acres to the south, opposite Douglas Golfland between Vanalman, Glanford and Douglas, for a wholesale, retail warehousing distribution centre. This is expected to be considered by council Nov. 20.

NEXT MEETING

"The Simpsons-Sears type of use would probably fit into it (light industrial zone) although this is something we really can't comment on too much until it gets to council which should be at the next meeting," said Mr. Loney.

There are only two light industrial zones in Saanich—along Douglas Street near the city boundary and the Quadra-McKenzie area in the Lake Hill district.

The Royal Oak plan, said Mr. Loney, should be ready by late spring.

Asked if Saanich might follow other municipalities into land ownership of commercial zones, Mr. Loney said it might be a combination of public and private ownership.

"We have not got to the point of deciding," he said. "We are still looking at federal legislation, the possibility of the municipality buying land. We have not examined all the possiblities. I wouldn't rule out the possibility."

Meeting Set On Kuper Is. Fund Surplus

A plan to provide awards to Indian students from the surplus of the Kuper Island Indian Band Expo Fund will be presented at a meeting of trustees and donors, this month.

Trustees of the fund announced today that the surplus is $5,800.

They propose to make an outright donation of between $800 and $900 to the Kuper Island Band for their exclusive use and to invest the balance and from the interest make school awards to Grade 7 Indian students from Victoria to Nanaimo.

Object of the meeting at S. J. Willis School at 8 p.m. Nov. 20, is to get approval of donors for the proposal.

New Clearing House Proposed on Rentals

'Big Help' To Welfare Department

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Victoria Real Estate Board is considering opening a clearing house to list all available low-rental housing in the city.

The proposal, already approved in principle by members of the executive, goes before the property management board next Tuesday.

If it passes that hurdle the Real Estate Board will make itself responsible for listing low rental housing as it comes on the market and informing the Victoria city welfare department of its availability.

The board agreed to look into the possibility of establishing the clearing house two weeks ago after Mayor Hugh Stephen was faced with the problem of locating accommodation for a mother and six children.

PUBLIC SERVICE

"I approached the president of the board, Gordon Fawcett, at the time and he was tremendously helpful and enthusiastic," the mayor said. "If they go ahead with the project it will be a fine public service to the community."

Mayor Stephen said the establishment of the clearing house would relieve one of the greatest headaches of welfare workers who are finding it increasingly difficult to find accommodation for low income families.

Ald. Ian Stewart, who several times in the past has expressed concern over the growing housing problem in Victoria, termed the proposal "excellent, a realistic step to restore the balance in this area.

"I sincerely hope the community will make use of the service if and when it is set up," he said.

"We look forward in the New Year to more housing starts to meet the demands. However, it is essential for the individual to realize that no level of government can solve this problem without the full co-operation of the private sector of the community."

Ogden Pt. Has Potential For Greatness—Shipper

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Lumber Pre-loading Needed at Dockside

By AB KENT
Times Business Editor

A leading shipper today said improvements at Ogden Point docks could make it the second-ranking seaport on Canada's Pacific Coast.

Only the port of Vancouver, with multiple terminal facilities, has such easy access for deepsea vessels combined with rail and truck access, dockside storage sheds and grain elevators.

Western Lumber Carriers Ltd., a principal user of Ogden Point docks, would use the port indefinitely if some improvements are carried out, said company manager Hector Campbell.

At present, there is a tendency away from Ogden Point as a lumber shipping facility in favor of more commodious upisland lumber assembly areas.

ONE OF BEST

Mr. Campbell said Ogden Point is one of the best deepsea terminals on the coast for its size.

It is capable of berthing five vessels at a time, has rail siding and truck access to dockside, may handle lumber from the dock or from scows; general cargo and grain, and is under a single control.

With improvements to enable pre-loading of lumber at the dockside, Ogden Point would continue to be used by Western Lumber "indefinitely. There is no question," Mr. Campbell said.

The port is known for quick turn-around of ships through efficient handling of cargoes by longshoremen.

Its chief drawback as far as Western Lumber is concerned is the lack of assembly space under cargo slings.

Sheds on "A" pier are generally sound and large enough to accommodate considerable general cargo, the volume of which has declined in recent years. Mr. Campbell feels there is no reason why this type of trade could not be restored.

These suggestions are expected to be made to Canadian National Railways, operator of the government-owned wharves, when a Victoria Chamber of Commerce delegation meets officials in Vancouver soon.

It is estimated unofficially that $250,000 spent on the docks would make them fully acceptable to both ship owners and shippers as a successful, modern deep-sea port for lumber handling and general purposes.

But at the moment, Mr. Campbell points out, it is impossible to place lumber so that it can be picked up directly by the ships that call.

Additional bulk storage area is not needed as badly as dockside storage, but the prospect of increasing both is suggested as a future use for premises soon to be vacated by Victoria Machinery Depot, adjacent to Ogden Point.

The former Rithet docks there would provide two more deepsea berths, and with demolition of sheds the desired dockside space for pre-loading would be created.

Access to the Rithet docks is easy, both from land and sea. Prior to the Second World War the trans-Pacific Empress fleet docked there without the aid of tugboats.

Police Vehicle In Collision

Gerald R. Hutchinson, 4892 Royal Oak, was treated for shock at Royal Jubilee Hospital after a car accident at Bay and Cedar Hill Road Thursday evening.

His car was involved in a crash with a police car driven by Const. Gerald R. Cox, of the city police department, 4010 Valley View Drive, who was uninjured.

Youth Made 100 Indecent Phone Calls

Psychiatric treatment today was recommended but not ordered by Magistrate William Ostler in suspending sentence on a 19-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to making indecent phone calls.

Kenneth George Sutton, 1535 Prospect Place, admitted making more than 100 such calls. He was charged on eight counts.

Magistrate Ostler ordering probation for two years on a $500 bond, called the action "contemptible" and said the matter was one to cause public indignation.

He said there are many complaints about such calls but cases rarely come to court.

"A deterrent is needed but this case calls for treatment."

Co-Op Manager Leaving Post

Mr. Rumley, who has served the growers co-operative for three years, will join the sales department of McDonald Bakery.

A. According to the attorney-general's department it is an offence for anyone to provide medicines or drugs for the purposes of contraception, unless it can be shown that the "public good" is served by it. According to a doctor, physicians do use their discretion and it is not against medical ethics but it may be against a doctor's religious ethics.

1,400 Pounds of Wire, Tubing Stolen

More than 1,400 pounds of copper wire and tubing was stolen overnight when thieves forced their way into Northern Junk premises on Tyee Road.

Loss is estimated at $400.

The padlock on the main gate was forced then a small window broken to gain access to the office.

One full 45-gallon drum of burned copper armature wire was taken along with another drum three quarters full.

Total weight was 1,400 pounds.

Also missing is between 45 and 50 pounds of three-eighths copper tubing cut into small lengths.

Thieves were busy elsewhere in the area.

A man smashed the window of Dr. J. H. Morrison's car, parked outside St. Joseph's Hospital, and stole a bag containing sedatives and aspirin. Value of the bag and contents was $125.

A car was broken into at the city parking lot on Yates street and a hat, blanket, flashlight and night glasses were taken.

Art Gallery Attractions

Four of the artists who will contribute to the success of Thursday's all-day sale lightheartedly joined in the Centennial year's search for posterity by posing for this very, very Victorian portrait. It seems to invite the obvious title of "Group of Four." Maxwell Bates occupies the seat of honor while behind him are Nita Forrest, Brian Travers-Smith and John Dobereiner.

The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria will be busier than ever during the next week as the Women's Committee sponsors two of the most ambitious projects to be launched by the group.

The first attraction on the program is an exciting preview of clothes that will be proudly worn on the party circuit this season. Titled, "Fashions by Eaton's," the show will be given twice on Monday with Mrs. Laszlo Gati being the guest of honor at the afternoon show and Mrs. Malcolm G. Taylor being similarily honored at the evening performance.

A Christmas shopping spree of monumental proportions will be held on Thursday from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Top artists across Canada, more than 90 of them, have contributed approximately 120 paintings. These will be on display for previewing on Wednesday evening from 7 to 9 p.m.

The skill that has brought many top awards to Victoria's potters and weavers will be well in evidence on Thursday as their creators contribute to the huge stock of outstanding artistry to be sold. Batick prints on imported French silk and Christmas cards, both traditional and in abstract design, will be special features. The Batick prints are the work of Mrs. Louise Page and the cards have been prepared by the silk screen section of the committee.

Unusual Christmas decorations, made by committee members led by Mrs. Alec Reid, will also be on sale. These include large baroque sticks, jewelled Magi, clad in velvets and furs; glittering banners and wall hangings.

Gourmets will be unable to resist the large selection of gift-wrapped foods, also made by the members. The selection will include Christmas cakes, shortbreads, jellies, jams, mincemeat, pickles and many other items.

Mrs. R. T. McKean heads the arts and crafts show committee while Mrs. R. S. Conn is in charge of the painting section. The festive food sale is being convened by Mrs. J. R. Meredith.

Many local craftsmen will contribute to the sale on Thursday, including Mrs. Eryl Cianci, 1291 Tattersal Drive, seen here with two of her sculptures. Mrs. Cianci studied in eastern Canada and at the Central School of Arts and Crafts in London, England.

Mrs. Jean Anderson, 1249 Union Road, is seen at her loom, preparing another piece of weaving for Thursday's show. She began weaving as a hobby eight years ago. She is one of four local weavers to have work in the coming show.

Mrs. Graham Harris (second from right) is convener of the two fashion shows, "Fashions by Eaton's" that will star the Gallery program on Monday at 1:30 and 7:30 p.m. She will also model. Seen with her are some of the other models. Left to right, they are Mrs. Leslie Wood, Mrs. Charles Lum, Mr. Barry Giles, Mrs. Alan Hoey and Mrs. George Fayad. Helen Beirnes will be commentator. Sherry and canapes will be served before each show under the convenership of Mrs. J. C. Mercer and Mrs. B. L. Rounding. Mrs. D. N. Wardell is in charge of tickets. These may be obtained at the door or from any member of the Women's Committee.

Mrs. Dorothy Hadland, 2521 Sinclair Road, was given some clay when she was Tawny Owl at a Brownie camp 10 years ago. The gift started her on a full-time career as a potter. Many of her casseroles, bottles, mugs, salad bowls, bird feeders and candleholders will be on sale this coming Thursday.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

Glamour is rampant at Miss Frith's . . .

You'd think we'd get a bit blase seeing all the clothes we do . . . but not a bit of it! . . . A visit to Miss Frith's seldom fails to excite us, and this week's was no exception . . . The mezzanine floor is positively a-glitter with new evening and party gowns . . . glamourous cocktail dresses . . . a wide selection of long and short skirts . . . and positively beautiful tops to team up with them for a versatile after-five wardrobe . . . There are all kinds of exciting materials, of course, but we noticed the evening trend seems to be towards flowing chiffons in warm, bright colors . . . hanging mainly from neckline or yoke . . . trimmed with twinkling beads and sequins . . . It's a graceful, opulent look we rather think is influenced by the fabulous gowns you see in TV color extravaganzas . . . Certainly it's an expensive look . . . so imagine our surprise when we learned that many of these formal evening dresses are tagged as low as $40 . . . while many elegantly simple cocktail dresses may be had for a mere $26! . . . There's no question in our mind that Miss Frith's have the biggest and most exciting collection of after-five dresses in town . . . and in sizes ranging from 5 to 20 . . . with a few half sizes to boot! . . . With the festive season upon us, you simply must visit . . . Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

High-rise stretch vinyl or synthetic leather boots pull on and off like gloves, and reach up to the hip.

Buy now . . . deliver later! . . .

You'd be surprised how many people are going to Wilson's these days and selecting gifts to be gift-wrapped and held until nearer Christmas, or mailed out of town . . . and very smart they are, too . . . because the things which are coming in now will be just about extinct if you wait too long to get around to shopping! Family and friends (female, that is) living on the prairies and in eastern Canada will bless you for a gift of the cute Jaeger wool and nylon pettipants just newly arrived . . . red, black or royal blue . . . with 3 rows of ruched white lace on the legs . . . Great under slacks for curling or skating right here too . . . There are some very nice new dressing gowns . . . long or short . . . in Vocama or brushed orlon . . . warm and snuggly . . . as well as real glamour-pusses in more exotic fabrics . . . Sweet bed jackets in lacy Shetland wool, lined with nylon chiffon . . . others made of plain or flower-sprigged Viyella . . . and a dainty bed jacket is something every woman covets . . . even if she only breakfasts in bed on her birthday! . . . A matching Jaeger sweater and skirt is a nice gift item for wife or daughter . . . New arrivals in grape or curry shades . . . soft lambswool pullover and Shetland skirt with three pleats each side of front . . . And if there are any left by the time you read this, we hope you'll look at the real leaves from England . . . covered with copper . . . to make quite unique pins . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 393-7177.

There's something about mobiles which seems to fascinate people of all ages . . . from infants in their cribs to types like ourselves who have weathered the storms of years . . . so naturally we were intrigued and delighted with the new crop of Danish mobiles now on display at Montague Bridgman's . . . Old favorites like The Ugly Duckling and Viking ships . . . plus marvellous new ones like the amusing leather monkey with long curling tail . . . and the equally perky cat in red or black cardboard . . . Then there are three-dimensional turquoise fishes . . . graceful Scandinavian swans, etc. . . . and a special note for the Christmas season . . . a group of adorable angels and another of Santa's elves . . . arms entwined and dancing an eternal ring-around-the-rosy as they're set in motion by every little whiff of air . . . Any one of these is a guaranteed conversation piece . . . especially intriguing when it's hung up close to a wall where it can cast realistic shadows . . . Prices for these mobiles start at $1.95 . . . and there's a wonderful array to choose from . . . One of the more amusing variety would make a very nice gift for a small child's room . . . In fact, mobiles are a fascinating addition to any room in the house! . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-0821.

If your lips appear drooped, cut all lipline curves with a straight line, brushing the color from the centre out to the lip corners.

Knits with an aura of glamour . . .

In line with our policy of keeping you posted on new arrivals at the Madam and Eve Shop which are eminently wearable by "Madam" . . . meaning those of us who'll never see twenty again . . . (the "Eve" types are constantly popping into M & E to see for themselves . . . and going out entranced with their findings) . . . we report enthusiastically today on the new Butte Knit dresses which are a division of the extremely popular Jonathan Logan . . . These are really smart double knits, styled with both youthfulness and sophistication . . . There's one honey of a cocktail dress in black knit whose short sleeves, Peter Pan collar and pockets are delicately outlined with three rows of petite rhinestones . . . understated elegance, in a size 10 . . . Another smart knit in winter navy has side fastening, low belt, and is trimmed with white grosgrain . . . just two of these, sizes 14 and 16 . . . definitely for Madam . . . Gordi's contribution to Christmas is a sophisticated grey flannel cocktail dress . . . sleeveless and low-necked . . . highlighted at the waist by a big rhinestone ornament which looks like a buckle . . . Grey flannel, we might add, is the big fashion news in Europe for cocktail dresses . . . this one in sizes 5 and 11 . . . but cut on the large side . . . Some pastel colored sleeveless polyester knits perfect for those of you going to warm climes for Christmas . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

What Danny saw . . .

House of Glamour's Danny Hajnal, as you may know, has just recently returned from England where he saw many of the world's best hair stylists demonstrate their art at the World Championship competitions . . . Naturally we wanted to know all about the latest European trends in hair styling so as to pass the news on to you . . . and here it is in a nutshell . . . Brown in all its variations . . .mixed with gold highlights . . . is the good word in hair color . . . there's quite a trend to red, too . . . but in lighter shades described as "Veronese" and "Burgundy" . . . Styles are divided into two categories . . . the first, very short and curly, following Vidal Sassoon . . . the second, following the Austrian and French line, is known as "intercurl" . . . very short at the nape and longer on the sides and crown of head . . . Both these lines were introduced in Europe, and require a permanent for body . . . Bangs are on their way out, and replacing them is side fullness . . . Exaggerated height is out . . . hair pieces are very much in fashion, with ringlets for evening wear . . . And, Danny added, skirts are very, very short, and eyes are very, very big . . . meaning lots of eye makeup! . . . All the H of G staff have been briefed on the new hair lines . . . so why not make an appointment for a smart new hairdo? . . . House of Glamour, 658 View St., 386-6188.

Christmas sewing ahead . . . and many of you lucky women who like to create your own custom-made clothes for the festive season . . . as well as whipping up delightful gift garments for family and friends . . . are doubtless on the look-out for lovely fabrics to serve as inspiration . . . Well, take our advice and go browse in Saba's fabric department . . . The other day we saw some gorgeous satin from France . . . white, mauve and turquoise . . . embroidered with nosegays of matching flowers, run through with lurex thread for a touch of restrained glitter . . . Lovely for formal evening gowns . . . and the white would be wonderful for a winter-time wedding gown . . . $9 a yard . . . For the same price, there's a delicately beautiful white and silver embroidered sheer . . . Another very pretty fabric is the stiffened Chantilly lace embroidered in silver, at just $4 for a 36" yard . . . And speaking of laces, Saba's have them in prices ranging from $1.79 to $20 . . . so you don't necessarily have to spend a fortune. Reversible quilted cottons, a different color each side, either plain or sprigged with flowers . . . would be sweet for dressing gowns or bed jackets . . . Pastels and also darker colors . . . $3 . . . For sewing inspiration, visit . . . Saba Bros. Limited, 1130 Douglas St., 384-0561.

A sweet Merry Christmas . . .

This seems like an appropriate time of year to remind you that Welch's ship their delicious candy to Europe, all over Canada and to every state in the U.S., including Hawaii . . . and now is the hour to get your orders in for Christmas giving to friends and loved ones in other climes . . . if you want to be sure they'll reach their destination in good time . . . Deadline for Britain, the post office tells us, is little more than a week away . . . so drop in to Welch's next week, or phone your order if that's easier . . . In fact you can do all your candy ordering in one fell swoop and Welch's will make sure they go out on the proper mailing dates in each case . . . Former Victorians no longer inhabiting this Blessed Isle, will doubly appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending them a taste of home . . . for nobody who's ever tasted Welch's chocolates can quite forget their unique goodness! . . . Welch's candies are expertly packed for mailing and arrive at their destination fresh and delicious . . . All you have to do is give the recipient's name and address . . . indicate the amount you're prepared to spend . . . and leave the rest to Welch's . . . Such a nice, easy, toothsome way to say "Merry Christmas!" . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St., 383-6422.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Fine Italian Cooking Begins in This Store

By Penny Saver

My family are all crazy about Italian food but I've been too timid to trust my hand at cooking my own. I made do with packages of spaghetti and pizza and whipped the group off to a restaurant whenever the budget would permit. However, when my son began to sing the praises of the woman down the street who not only prepared her own sauces but even had, on occasion, gone so far as to make her own pasta, I decided to take the plunge.

At my neighbor's suggestion I found myself in a store that bulges with imported foods and spices. One wall was lined with bins containing spaghetti and macaroni of every shape and size. The owner, Italian enough to satisfy my every wish, asked if he could help and I put my problem to him. He gave me a set of recipes for spaghetti, pizza and lasagne then began to show me around his shop.

He estimated that he stocked 43 kinds of spaghetti, from the small kinds used in soups to the large tubes that are boiled and then stuffed. He had a case full of different cheeses and another of salami.

My greatest surprise was his stock of fresh-frozen imported fish. There were two-pound packages of squid for $1.50, large sardines at two pounds for $1.10, and a fish he translated as small bream at 55 cents a pound. A yellow and black mass turned out to be Moray eel at 70 cents a pound while ordinary eels cost 65 cents a pound.

For the more timorous cooks there were frozen pizzas at $1.25 for the large size and 85 cents for the smaller size. The meat-filled squares for ravioli, needing only to be cooked and covered in sauce, were 90 cents a bag. There was a smaller ravioli that he assured me was delicious in chicken soup. It sells at 95 cents a bag.

Cans of spaghetti sauce began at 37 cents, the price rising as mushrooms or meat were added, and there was a sauce mix at 43 cents a package but the makings were there for the adventurous. Spices ranged from 65 cents a pound for pickling spice to $1.15 a pound for both hot and sweet paprikas and $1.35 a pound for powdered ginger. There was a special grade of olive oil at $4.95 a gallon.

If you are feeling adventurous and would like to try your hand at Italian dishes, call me at 382-3131 and I will tell you where this store may be found.

WHY GROW OLD?

Q. You're the only person I know to write to. I don't have a doctor because I am healthy. My parents would be horrified to know that this is bothering me. I am almost 15 and very thin. Most of the time you write to help people lose weight, but I hope you will help me out. My legs and my arms are skinny and I am flatfooted.

Lowman

Please give me some kind of help. I don't have much appetite. Please give me some exercises for my arms and legs. My legs are almost straight. Please give me some exercises to curve them. I would like to try out for cheerleading sometime, if I can get in the right shape.

A. To increase appetite indulge in mild exercise such as walking or swimming. Do not try to stuff yourself at meals. Instead eat five smaller meals. If you wish to stick to the three meals a day plan, then build up your calorie intake with snacks and something before going to sleep at night. Milk shakes made with ice cream will pile up the calories. Also, be sure to eat a well-balanced diet with plenty of vitamins and minerals.

The following exercise will build leg contour. Stand tall with your hands on your hips. Rise high on your toes. Take a step forward. Bend both knees into a half knee bend. Straighten legs. Take another step forward. Bend knees. Straighten. Continue walking forward, bending and straightening the legs with each step. Heels are off the floor throughout.

Q. I have been exercising faithfully for six weeks and have watched my diet but I have only lost two pounds in that time. What could be the reason? I drink quite a lot of tea. Would this be the cause?

A. Unless you are carefully counting your calorie intake watching your diet may not be enough. Many women fail to realize how many calories there are in seemingly innocent items of food. Exercise is a great aid when reducing but you will have to count your calories also.

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

Victoria may have earned herself a reputation for being the city of beautiful homes and gardens, but, for hundreds, it is a place of despair. These are the women who search in vain for a decent home in which to bring up their children.

Mrs. Donna Langstaff, president of the Victoria Low Income Group, cites 600 as the number of deserted wives and widows. Add to this families who have hit hard times and been forced to accept welfare help and you have a picture that would shake anyone out of complacency. Thousands are involved.

Since the new building restrictions came into effect early this year, the plight of such women has reached panic proportions in many cases. Landlords of many older homes have now found buyers since the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation can now advance money on such properties.

As the number of homes available for rent become less, landlords become greedy and demanding. Many sub-standard houses are rented out with a "take it or leave it" attitude.

Having talked with several women who are left to bring up their children alone, I can't help wondering at the fortitude which allows them to move from house to house, each time the landlord forces the rents up to a scale where they are no longer able to pay.

The odd mother strikes lucky. I met such a one this week. I'll call her Mary for the sake of her six children, aged three to 14. Mary's husband is an alcoholic and has left her for the 10th . . . and, Mary says, the last time.

She explains, "I married too young (she's 34) and I loved my husband. But, when the kids have to pay for their father's weakness, I must think about them. No child can keep on being thumped every time pay day rolls around and father's drunk."

Mary was forced to leave her home because her landlady wanted to move in. For weeks, she tried every source, but could find nothing within her price range.

As she says, "Nobody will take you in with six children. One house had four bedrooms but the landlady would only accept two children. What did she expect the other bedrooms to be used for, dogs and cats?

"Another woman said she'd let me move in with three of the children. What was I supposed to do, shoot the rest?

"Nobody wants to rent a home to a welfare case when there's no man around. They imagine wild parties going on and want to have a man in the house to fix things."

Mary struck lucky when a woman realtor, who had also been a deserted mother, took up her case. The solution came when one of the realtor's staff bought an old house as an investment and let Mary move in this week.

The previous owner had given eviction notice to the last tenant for non-payment of rent but Mary and her children had to sleep on the floor in her sister's home for five nights, waiting for the tenant to get out of the house.

Mary's rent is now $125, a price which I found being repeated over and over again as I checked into similar cases. But Mary feels that she's closer to happiness than she's been for a long time. She's allowed $105 for rent under welfare restrictions and must find the difference. As she says, "I can always go out scrubbing, I've done it a lot, and there's always the chance of taking in ironing Whatever happens, I always pay my rent first and scimp on food if I must.

"We're going to make out fine. We've never been used to much, none of us have ever worn new clothes, we shop at Goodwill and the Sally Ann. But I have the greatest children in the world and we're just happy to be together."

The experiences of her Good Samaritan follow a similar pattern to Mary's. "When I and my four children were deserted, I was forced to move from one rat-trap to another, with landlords upping rents as soon as you had the place cleaned.

"One of these dumps was in James Bay and, even in those years, it cost me $90. Slivers were coming out of every floor and each time I scrubbed the kitchen, part of the floor came away with the scrub brush.

"I never got the smell of cat out of that place, although I scrubbed from top to bottom. We lived there three months. After I'd cleaned as much as I could, painted and tried to make the place look a little like home, the landlady sold it from under me and we had to leave."

"I studied real estate and met the extra expenses by slinging hash at night. It was tough going, but we made it."

And, as Mary says, "If she can do it, so can I.

"I know I'll be able to earn that extra we need to stay here but I worry about my oldest daughter. When I scrubbed in a downtown building for six months of nightwork it was pretty hard for her. I'd get the supper and she'd be left to cope with dishes, and look after all the others, doing her homework in between. It hurts to think of the fun your child misses."

For Mary and her brood, the years of searching seem to be over and her spunkiness will preserve that family warmth you feel when you talk with her and her children.

But, she found friends, and most in her situation are without them. They face the bleak prospect of chasing a rent spiral that always rises above their reach, pushed up by a dwindling supply, owned, in too many cases, by people who are concerned only with the profit to be made in the housing market.

Where lies the solution? Talking to some Victorians who are concerned with this problem, I've stumbled across some of the answers. In my next column, I'll tell you about them.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert La Roche, Suite 310, 1021 Cook Street, announce the forthcoming marriage of their youngest daughter, Yvonne (Bonnie) Florence, to Mr. John Richard Joseph Scully, Comox, son of Mr. Richard Scully, Stellarton, N.S., and the late Mrs. Scully. The wedding will take place on Friday, November 24, at 7:30 p.m., in St. Andrew's Cathedral. Fr. Patrick Quigley will officiate. (Kandid Kamera Studio.)

CHURCH HOLDS BAZAAR

Proceeds of $1,504 were realized when the Queen of Peace Church held their parish bazaar recently.

Fr. M. J. McNamara and Mrs. M. Kokran, general convener and president of the Catholic Women's League, greeted the guests.

Special guests at the affair were Fr. L. McLellen, former pastor of the church; Fr. P. Mulcahy and Mrs. F. Wade, president of Esquimalt United Church Women.

Dozens of attractive handmade items were displayed at the needlework stall convened by Mrs. N. Hall and Mrs. P. J. Slaney, assisted by Mrs. M. Minter.

Another star attraction was the home baking stall convened by Mrs. A. Dickie, who was assisted by Mrs. N. Dickie and Mrs. A. Smith.

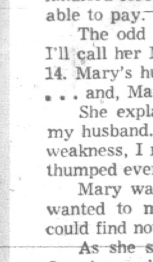

Hard-working conveners at the other stalls included Mrs. R. Stirling, assisted by Mrs. R. Armstrong and Mrs. B. Trottier, novelties; Mrs. H. Kallrath and Mrs. C. Praud, candy; Mrs. W. J. Sullivan, assisted by Mrs. E. Barnabe and Mrs. H. Jordens, Lucky Seven; Mrs. J. Comerford, Mrs. J. Warburton and Mrs. J. McLaughlin, white elephants; Mrs. W. J. Edgington, religious articles.

Mrs. C. D. Macklin was in charge of tickets for the raffle of a ham and Mrs. R. Stirling and Mrs. F. Blackley sold the tombola tickets.

During the afternoon, tea was served, convened by Mrs. J. Pryke, Mrs. H. Y. Wakelin and Mrs. E. L. De Costa. Mrs. J. Sharpe acted as hostess.

The Men's Club arranged the bingo games and refreshments which were served during the evening.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Girl, 13, Not A Facts Bureau

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 and people tell me I am very mature for my age. Abby, I know more about the facts of life and the course of nature than most kids, and I got it straight from my mother. She told me everything starting from the age of eight.

I don't know how I got the reputation, but girls from 10 to 16 come to me for information about the pill and that sort. Even boys come to me with questions.

Should I answer their questions, or tell them to ask their mothers or what?

"LITTLE ABBY."

DEAR "LITTLE ABBY": I don't know how you got the reputation of knowing so much, but it's not because you've kept it a secret. If a girl (between 10 and 16) asks a 13-year-old for information about "the pill and that sort," perhaps her mother should know she is seeking such information, so the best thing for you to do is to tell her to ask her mother. Your own mother appears to have pretty good sense, so ask her how much she thinks you should be telling the other kids.

DEAR ABBY: We are a family of five, plus one. The new addition is a basset hound. We got him when he was three weeks old. He was real cute then and everybody loved him.

Today he is eight months old and a regular pain-in-the-neck. When he eats, he slops all over. And when he drinks water, his ears get sopping wet. He drools and climbs up on the furniture and slobbers all over everybody and everything. And he's still not housebroken.

My husband can't stand him. He says he makes him sick. I put up with the dog because the children love him. My husband wants to get rid of him, but it would break the children's hearts.

The hound's name is "Snoopy," but we should have named him "Smelly." But that's another problem. What should we do?

DOG TIRED.

DEAR DOG TIRED: Its not the poor dog's fault that he wasn't properly trained to be a lovable, obedient, attractive pet. Dogs (not unlike children) can't be expected to know what they haven't been taught. It may be too late to train "Snoopy," but give it a try. Otherwise, I'm with Dad.

DEAR ABBY: This is for Cindy, whose husband asks her out with only an hour's notice:

God bless him for asking you and not one of the girls from the office. Let me tell you from experience, it's smart always to be ready. Have a long list of sitters you can call at the last minute. And some good "friends" in reserve in case you can't get a sitter. Do something with your hair during the daytime just in case that's the night your husband wants to take you out. And always have something ready to wear.

Me? I take no chances. All I need is five minutes notice and I can get ready for an audience with the Pope.

PREPARED.

Confidential to Hurt Wife: Tell your loving husband that a married man has no business wearing an ID bracelet given to him by an old flame, and if it doesn't "mean anything" he shouldn't mind putting it away. And until he does he shouldn't expect you to function properly as a loving wife.

How has the world been treating you? Unload your problems on Dear Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal, unpublished reply, enclose a self addressed, stamped envelope.

N. Viet Troops Force Long Duel

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. marines and army infantrymen clashed Thursday with dug-in North Vietnamese troops in separate fierce battles within five miles of each other south of Da Nang.

The two battles, one a marathon of 26 hours along the coastal lowlands in the northernmost 1st Corps area, left 14 Americans dead and 106 wounded, U.S. headquarters reported. Thirty-five North Vietnamese were reported slain, many of them by massive bombardment from U.S. artillery, tactical fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships armed with rockets.

The U.S. command also disclosed in its weekly summary of aircraft losses that three more American planes have been downed in combat over North Vietnam but were not announced at the time, bringing to 735 the total of U.S. combat planes officially reported lost in the air war against the North.

VC SINK BOAT

In the Mekong Delta, the Viet Cong sank a U.S. Navy river patrol boat with recoilless rifle fire. One U.S. soldier was killed and three navy men were wounded in the attack Thursday.

The week-long heavy fighting near Dak To in the central highlands died down and only light contact was reported today.

Along the coast farther south, South Korean troops reported they had killed 55 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in three days of fighting around Phu Loc hamlet, 230 miles northeast of Saigon. The Koreans said about 100 of the Communists, short of rice and other supplies, were trying to infiltrate the area south of Tuy Hoa.

Baird Expects 3,000 For City Walkathon

It is their novel way of raising funds for mobile classrooms for shipment to underdeveloped Commonwealth countries as a Centennial project.

The fund-raising is simple: Any youngster entering the walkathon will first seek a sponsor who will contribute a specified amount of cash to the mobile-classroom fund for every mile completed.

Mayor Hugh Stephen has already selected a 15-year-old student to walk under his colors with a pledge of $2 for every mile completed.

"As he's only 15 I fully expect to be charged the full $50," the mayor told city council Thursday.

The walk, scheduled to start from the Legislative Buildings, will be confined to the borders of Greater Victoria.

Ald. Robert Baird, co-ordinator for the walk, said he expected a minimum of 3,000 walkers to start the long hike.

He could be surprised, say some of the organizing students.

Little more than a week ago in Hamilton, Ont., 18,000 youngsters turned out to walk the 25-mile course.

Forms for sponsors will soon be available at all high schools

From then on its up to the youngsters to find a sponsor for a fixed sum and see how much he can raise by the mile.

Ald. Baird and Mayor Stephen will both join the walk — for the first "cardiac" mile if they can find sponsors.

And Mayor Stephen has invited Reeve Hugh Curtis of Saanich to stride that first long mile as his companion — if he too can find a sponsor.

"We expect to get some complaints for jamming the streets with walkers on a Saturday," said the mayor." But this is a tremendous cause and well worth a little inconvenience."

SPEAKER at a meeting of the Air Force Officers' Association Wednesday at 8 p.m. will be Lt.-Gen. L. C. Craigie, USAF (rtd), the first military pilot in the United States to fly a jet plane. General Craigie will discuss recent developments in aeronautics and aerospace and will show a film of the air show in Paris last May. The meeting will be held in the Canadian Scottish Officers' Mess, Bay Street Armories.

Long Distance College Run Slated Saturday

Thirty-seven cadets and six officers from the United States Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, are guests of the Canadian Services College, Royal Roads, this weekend.

At 11 a.m. Saturday, American and Canadian cadets and staff will attend a memorial service for those of all countries who died in the two world wars and the Korean War.

After the service, 20 cadets will meet in the annual 4.3 cross-country run, and the annual soccer game between the two colleges will be held at 3 p.m.

Purpose of the annual exchange visit is to foster friendship and provide competitive sport between cadets of the two colleges.

Industrial Fly Ash Problem Reduced in City

Ald. Robert Baird, chairman of the Victoria pollution committee, told city council Thursday the fly-ash problem in the city is still improving.

"We are now down by 37.5 per cent in industrial areas, 19.5 per cent in commercial areas, and 10 per cent in residential areas," he said.

"I think you will agree that this is an encouraging record."

In industrial areas present pollution charts are reading 13.4 as compared with the reading of 21.6 a year ago.

$150,000 for Bull

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The Armstrong Brothers of Brampton, Ont., Tuesday paid $150,000 for Oak Ridges Supreme Progress, an 11-year-old holstein bull. The price is believed to be a world record. The bull was owned by Claude F. Picket of nearby Georgetown and was sold at the annual all-Canadian holstein sale. The bid was the only one received.

A hundred years ago, a Prisoner in a Turkish fortress in the Holy Land announced a new Revelation of God. His name was Baha'u'llah. His Letters to the Kings" are, without doubt, the most remarkable documents in religious history. Several million people have now responded to His cail.
Local clergy of all faiths have just received an offer of Baha'u'llah's Message. We urge you to investigate it either through your clergyman, or by writing:

Cenotaph Service to Be Televised Across B.C.

Victoria's time-honored Remembrance Day service at the Cenotaph on Saturday at 10:45 a.m. will be televised across British Columbia by the CBC.

"This is in honor of Canada's Centennial Year," said CBC producer Bill Herbert. "We shall transmit the service from the capital of the province instead of, as formerly, from Vancouver."

Herbert and Ted Reynolds will provide the commentary.

Veterans of the two world wars, the Sough African War and the Korean War will march to the cenotaph with members of the armed forces and the cadet corps at 10:30 a.m.

The veterans' parade will be marshalled by David Huggins of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Mrs. William Gibb of 4103 Torquay Drive will represent the bereaved mothers of Canada at the wreath-laying ceremonies.

Her son, Sgt. Stanley Alexander Gibb, was killed in Italy on Oct. 22, 1944, while serving with the Royal Edmonton Regiment, then attached to the British Eighth Army.

Wreaths will be placed by Rear-Admiral J. A. Charles, Maritime Commander Pacific; Cmdr. David Groos, MP for Victoria, representing the government of Canada; and by Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston, representing the B.C. government.

Also paying their respects at the Cenotaph will be heads of the RCMP, the Red Cross, IODE, women's auxiliaries, the churches and the city and municipalities of Greater Victoria.

The service this year will be conducted by Very Rev. J. Lewis McLean, DD. The Canadian Forces Base Band, Esquimalt, will lead the singing of the humns O Valiant Hearts and The Silent Tribute.

Laurence Binyon's famous words, They shall grow not old as we that are left grow old, will be recited by Clem Gill of the Pro Patria branch, Royal Canadian Legion.

The lament, Flowers of the Forest, will be played by Pipe-Major Frank Knight and the pipe band of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's).

The two minutes' silence will begin with the firing of a gun on the last stroke of the 11th hour by the 5th (B.C.) Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery.

After the sounding of The Last Post and the singing of the National Anthem, Rear-Admiral Charles will take the salute at a march past the Empress Hotel.

The Canadian Scottish Regimental Association will hold its customary noon service in Pioneer Square adjoining Christ Church Cathedral, with Dr. McLean officiating.

The Black Watch Association, Pacific Coast branch, will parade at Humboldt and Wharf streets at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Blue bonnets and red hackle, with medals, will be worn by members in civilian dress. Those preferring uniform will wear ceremonial or No. 6A dress.

The Flags of Our Century Association and the Red Ensign and Union Jack Society will assemble at Humboldt and Government streets at 10:30 a.m. for the march to the cenotaph.

The two minutes' silence will be observed in St. John's Anglican Church, after which there will be a short service.

Services will be held at Esquimalt and Langford cenotaphs at 11 a.m.; Oak Bay War Memorial at 1 p.m., and Saanich Peace Memorial, Gore Park, at 2:30 p.m.

A memorial service was held in the rotunda of the Legislative Buildings this afternoon in honor of civil servants who died on war service.

'Rich Canadians A Real Asset'

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

When the RCAF took over the air base at Lahr, in Germany's Black Forest, a local newspaper jubilantly announced:

"The rich Canadians are coming—they will be a great asset to our town."

In terms of spending, of course.

The newspaper did not inquire if the Canadians would be happy in Lahr, or whether the people of Lahr would be happy with them. It was the influx of RCAF pay packets that mattered.

Men of the Salvation Army have a happy knack of smiling at such human frailties — and one of them is Brigadier Cecil Bonner, who returned to Victoria this week after two months of promoting Sally Ann services in Lahr and other parts of West Germany.

"There is always a mercenary element in human society," the brigadier said, "but when it comes to living with people, much more is involved.

"The RCAF and their families have really taken to Lahr, and the people of Lahr seem to have taken to them. The Canadians are much happier there than they were at the old French bases at Marville and Metz."

Brigadier Bonner estimates some 700 Canadian families have moved into Lahr since the RCAF took over from the French Tactical Air Force last September.

"We believe the Salvation Army does a big job in halping these families to adjust to local conditions," the brigadier said.

"But I think perhaps the single men need our services more than the married men. The tend to be unsettled by strange surroundings and are afraid of being out-of-place in a foreign environment.

"This may lead them to drink too much and then to assert themselves in a way that is unbecoming. The Salvation Army makes a specialty of helping servicemen everywhere."

Born at North Sydney, Nova Scotia, Brigadier Bonner was posted to Victoria in October, 1966, as superintendent of the men's social and rehabilitation centre at 525 Johnson Street.

From 1959 to 1962 he was in charge of Salvation Army service in various parts of West Germany, including Soest, Werl, Hemer and Iserlohn.

Former Sales Manager Taking Over Church

Rev. John Vickers will be inducted as rector of St. Philip's Anglican Church on Sunday, Nov. 19.

With a record of impressive leadership in his first parish at St. Columba, Strawberry Vale, and All Saints, View Royal, Mr. Vickers recognizes the many problems facing the parish church of today.

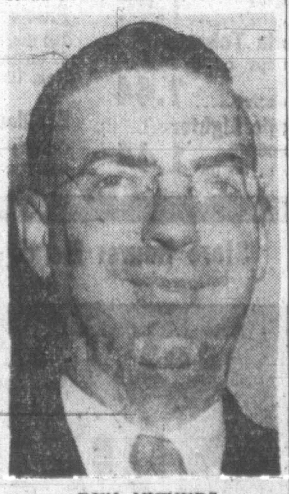

Born and raised in Winnipeg, the new rector of St. Philip's began his career as an office boy with the Canadian Johns Manville Company.

Later he became the company's sales manager for British Columbia, with headquarters in Vancouver, and then moved to Sidney Roofing and Paper as general sales manager.

He was ordained deacon at St. John's Anglican Church, Victoria, in 1962, and appointed assistant to Archdeacon J. W. Forth.

In April, 1963, he was ordained to the priesthood and appointed to All Saints and St. Columba.

Since taking his first service at St. Philip's on Sunday, Nov. 1, Mr. Vickers has been meeting with the church committee, which has plans for a new church building on Foul Bay Road above Lansdowne.

Special Day for UN?

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A priest assigned to the United Nations by the Holy See proposes that his church consider establishing a special UN Sunday on an annual basis.

Such a day, comparable to missionary Sunday celebrated Oct. 22, might raise more than $100,000,000 among the 500,000,000 Roman Catholics in the world, Msgr. Ettore de Filippo said in an interview.

In addition to raising money for UN humanitarian projects, he suggested, such a day would give priests an opportunity to explain the principles of the United Nations charter "and give us a universal mentality."

"Having a representative of the Holy See at the UN is not enough, but to have Catholics all over the world support the idea of the UN and work with it. . . ."

Msgr. de Filippo spent 11 years at sea as chaplain to ships' crews, commercial cruise passengers and immigrants from Europe to Australia and the Americas before joining his former language teacher, Msgr. Alberto Giovanetti, the Vatican Observer, in 1965.

"We are now working to get the Vatican move involved in the United Nations," he said.

The Vatican gives a token $5,000 annually to the UN for refugee reflief.

SOLOIST in Fairfield United Church Sunday at 11 a.m. will be Faith Webster. She will sing Righteous Are Thou, O Lord, and the choir will present the anthem, Christ of All My Hopes.

Poll Shows Johnson Slipping

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co. said Thursday that in a survey taken for NBC News by the Gallup Poll, 48 per cent of the persons surveyed said they had "little or no" confidence in President Johnson's ability to handle the war in Vietnam.

Only 20 per cent of those surveyed said they had "a lot of" confidence in his ability to conduct the war, and another 28 per cent said they had "some" confidence, NBC News said.

A network spokesman said the sampling was carried out in all parts of the U.S., with nearly 1,800 persons interviewed.

A similar lack of confidence was reported in the president's ability to handle race relations and riots. Fifty-one per cent of those surveyed said they had "little or no" confidence in his ability.

Band Clinic Set Next Week

Forty-one students of music at Oak Bay Senior Secondary School will attend a band clinic at the Canadian Forces School of Music at Esquimalt next Friday.

The students, members of the school band directed by David Dunnet, will be given demonstrations of various brass and woodwind instruments, following a tour of the facilities of the School of Music and an address of welcome by its chief instructor, Lieut.-Cdr. E. T. (Tudor) Jones.

Among the instructors who will be in charge of the music clinic are Staff Sergeant Jan Menting (flute); Petty Officer Paul Lother (French horn) and Warrant Officer Robert Thiel (clarinet).

Anglicans Try New Approach To Missions

TORONTO (CP)—Personal involvement is the key to the Anglican Church of Canada's new approach to national and world projects which it is hoped will revolutionize the man in the pew's response to the concept of total mission.

Behind the strategy is the belief that a church-goer's interest is revitalization by participation in a project system through which his givings are channelled into clearly designated activities at home and abroad.

The new approach had its genesis in Angican World Mission through which the Canadian church has contributed in four years nearly $2,500,000, over and above its regular budget, for urgent projects in churches of the world's developing countries.

As a first step to establish a unified strategy of mission, the church plans to integrate the Anglican World Mission Fund with diocesan apportionment revenue by which its various departments, including the department of missions, are operated. It is hoped the integrated budget will be effected by 1969.

PARISHES CAN CHOOSE

The diocese of Toronto, the most populous of the church's 28 dioceses, not only carried out the integration this year, but went a step further by including in a unified financing program all projects to be undertaken in its own area.

Support was promised for work requiring nearly $1,000,000 under the plan called Diocesan and World Outreach.

Apart from a fixed assessment levied to cover local administrative costs, parishes were given the opportunity of selecting from a diocesan project book local, national and world projects to which 50 per cent of their givings would be applied. A supervising diocesan committee handled the remainder to meet requirements of projects not assumed by individual parishes.

"Outreach is largely an educational process," says a diocesan report on the first year of the Toronto plan. "Every means at our disposal must be tried to help church members to know what they, through the church, are making possible and to arouse in them a desire to participate."

The Toronto experiment with the project system is being closely followed by other dioceses in the Canadian church. It is expected its ultimate success will lead to a new measure of interdependence throughout the church.

'Must Renew Body, Soul; Get Out of Rut:' Leger

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger is turning his back on the comforts of city life to face the harsh challenges of the leper colonies of Africa.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Montreal told a press conference Thursday that he was giving up "the position of command to become a simple missionary priest."

The press conference followed an announcement from the Vatican that Pope Paul had accepted the cardinal's resignation as archbishop and acceded to his request to work among the lepers.

Elected to the Sacred College of Cardinals in 1953, three years after being named Archbishop of Montreal, Cardinal Leger described the church as essentially "a missionary body," adding:

"The day when she ceases to go towards those who have not yet received the Gospel, she will have turned in on herself, she will have become a ghetto, and will have been unfaithful to her mission.

"But if the Gospel must be proclaimed to all men, it is directed first of all to the humble, to the poor in spirit for whom our Lord always showed a particular concern.

Cardinal Leger, 63, who plans to leave for Africa in mid-December, said he has "reached the age where a certain sclerosis of soul and body might set in."

RETURNS TO PRACTICE

"The spirit must be used to get out of the rut. . . .

"The confrontation with paganism may stimulate faith. Furthermore, it is good to return to the practice of obedience after having been placed in authority."

Regarded as one of the leading progressives in the hierarchy, the cardinal has been outspoken in his requests that the church shed some of its pomp, ceremony and aloofness and get closer to the people, with laity playing a greater and greater role.

He spoke on such things as birth control and urged a more liberal view by the church, saying marital love should be placed on an equal plane of importance with child-bearing.

Maurice Cardinal Roy, Archbishop of Quebec City, said it will be painful not to see "in our midst any more someone who has been for so many years such a worthy adviser and very dear friend."

The administrative council of the Canadian Catholic Conference—which includes all the Roman Catholic cardinals, archbishops and bishops in the country—said in Ottawa it was "amazed" to learn of the cardinal's move.

Bishop Kenneth R. Maguire, senior Anglican official in Montreal, said the archbishop had played a good role in ecumenical matters, and added:

"The news that Cardinal Leger will be leaving is a matter of real regret. He will be missed very much."

Rabbi Dr. Harry J. Stern of Temple Emanu-el said Cardinal Leger has been instrumental in helping eliminate anti-semitism throughout the world and that he "will personally miss him."

Cardinal Leger returned last week from the first synod of Roman Catholic bishops in Rome. Observers noted that he appeared physically tired.

Born in Valleyfield, Que., the son of a storekeeper, and educated in Valleyfield and Montreal, he was ordained a priest in 1929. He served for several years as a professor at a seminary at Issy, near Paris, and in 1933 was appointed to a mission at Fukuoka, Japan, where he remained until 1939.

He did parish work in Canada from 1939 to 1947 when he became rector of the Canadian College at Rome where he had frequent encounters with Pope Pius XII.

'Real Miracle' Saved Husband From Death

MONTREAL (CP)—When her husband was saved from execution in Nigeria with seconds to spare, Nancy Craig became a modern young woman believing in miracles.

She learned her husband David, a missionary in Nigeria, was saved by "a real miracle" from a firing squad in the city of Calabar in the troubled Biafra section of that African country.

The squad was awaiting orders to shoot when a Nigerian colonel's batman appeared with instructions to halt execution of the missionary, mistaken for a mercenary soldier.

Mrs. Craig, a native of Lennoxville, Que., staying with Montreal friends, said in an interview:

"His being saved is a real miracle. If that batman hadn't arrived at just that second, David wouldn't be alive today.

"More than ever I'm convinced that God readily takes care of his children—He saved David's life."

WAS IN BIAFRA

Mrs. Craig had been with her husband in Calabar until July when it became dangerous for her to stay. Biafra seceded from the Federation of Nigeria in March and fighting broke out.

"Weeks ago I heard that 14,000 Nigerian troops had arrived in Calabar and I just knew David didn't have a chance," she said.

"Unless a miracle happened I wouldn't see him again."

Mrs. Craig had stayed in Calabar, where she was a teacher and her husband a chaplain, as long as she could.

She returned to Montreal via Lagos and Switzerland.

Letters from her husband were sporadic during this time. He had to smuggle them out through The Cameroons.

Now her husband, a native of Guelph, Ont., is safe in Lagos where his mission has a church and Mrs. Craig hopes she will soon be able to join him.

'Like Moon Crater'

VANCOUVER (CP) — "This place is like a crater on the moon," thought Rev. Neil Macauley when he saw the impoverished city of Comas in Peru for the first time four years ago.

The 29-year-old Roman Catholic priest found dead landscape and appalling poverty when he arrived in Comas in October, 1963.

"It was like nothing on earth," he recalled in an interview. "It was all rocky, pock-marked desert. For miles around all you could see was dust and rock."

Father Macauley was interviewed while home on furlough from a mission operated by himself, four other priests and five sisters. Born in Vancouver, he is a graduate of Holy Rosary Scholasticate in Ottawa.

He said he was given a thorough grounding in Spanish and the customs and conditions of Peru, but nothing he learned here prepared him for the stark realities he encountered in the Latin American country.

Comas, he said, is a city of 180,000 crammed into three square miles 15 miles outside Lima, the Peruvian capital. Comas shares with Lima the dubious distinction of possessing —with the possible exception of Hong Kong—the worst slums in the world, Father Macauley said.

"Our West Coast Indians are rich by comparison," he said. "Homes in Comas are windowless hovels scarcely bigger than tool sheds.

"Most people sleep on the floor. There is no plumbing and a putrid stench hangs over the city day and night."

Father Macauley said the church now is building a "human development centre" in Comas containing facilities for medical and dental care, social assistance and family education.

Furnishings Part of Room To Give That 'Big' Look

By PAULINE GRAVES

The beauty of contemporary home design is that it pares and it simplifies so that lines are clean and uncluttered.

Materials used are part of the design, and they are planned to complement each other to best advantage, so that decoration as such is superfluous.

This is due not only to the architecture but also to the furnishings which are so architectural as to seem a part of the structure.

Just five pieces comprise the group, adequate for normal seating and maintaining an uncrowded open feeling.

The two extra-long small-scaled sofas hug the wall and a low partition—and the base of the wall sofa extends over the hearth to function as an end table. Ceiling lights, carefully located, eliminate the need for lamps.

The one departure from pure functionalism are outrigger beams which come out from the clerestory windows over the sofa and give the effect of a lowered ceiling.

This identifies and gives importance to the conversation area. Even though one wall on the other side of the room is all glass, additional light was needed in the conversation area and the clerestory windows placed high along the wall just below the ceiling provide this.

Imagination and Patience Virtues for Rock Gardener

By JACK BEASTALL

Outcrops of natural rock are a feature of our coastal areas and offshore islands, and if it were not for this rock the islands in particular would have disappeared into the sea years ago.

Jack

At first rock seems an unfriendly medium for gardening and yet some of our finest gardens have been built on properties composed almost entirely of this material.

Admittedly it has taken money and foresight to exploit the possibilities, but it is not beyond the means of anyone who seriously desires to make a mass of rock into a garden of outstanding charm.

Because every outcrop of rock has its own characteristics, no two gardens built on rock are alike. Each one is distinct, expressing the ingenuity of its designer.

Those who find beauty in simple lines and sharp contrasts will keep the plantings to a minimum, using one plant or a group of three to create a striking feature, repeating this motif with other kinds of plants wherever the right effect can be obtained.

In this way the natural landscape is exploited to the maximum while costs are kept to a minimum. To do this successfully one has to live on the property quite a while before the perfect combination can be envisioned.

One thing that must be remembered is that it takes time for plants to mature and produce the effects we desire, and in the meantime our satisfaction must come from anticipation as we watch the dream gradually develop into reality. This applies to any garden that is being constructed or remade.

With present construction materials and methods we are able to build a house in a few weeks; with the aid of credit we can be using furniture or a car within a few hours after deciding these are things we would like to possess; but a garden of living plants can only develop and become a reality over a period of time.

If there is one thing in this world that can bring out those desirable attributes of patience and tolerance, it is undoubtedly the making of a garden.

Getting back to our subject; while some gardeners will use a few plants, others prefer to cover large areas of the rock with cultivated plants. In this instance, striking effects are obtained by the use of large drifts of color at different levels.

Such plantings must be designed so that each section becomes the feature attraction at different periods of the year. This provides the constant change of interest which seems an essential of present-day living.

The use of water on properties where rock predominates is not exploited to any extent by home gardeners, yet rocks and water are a natural association requiring little labor for maintenance and a comparatively small initial outlay.

With the equipment available today in the form of specially designed pumps and easy-to-install plastic pipe that is not damaged by freezing, one can keep the plants to a minimum and capitalize on pools, fountains and natural waterfalls.

Although we speak of rock plants as if they were plants that grow on a rock, the only plants that will survive on the bare surfaces are mosses. When these have built up an inch or so of humus we find small native ferns and sedums beginning to flourish.

No cultivated plant will grow in less than 10 to 12 inches of soil, and this is the first requirement of gardening on rock. The soil has to contain large quantities of humus, most often in the form of rotted leaves, and sufficient grit to facilitate free drainage.

Any pocket in the rock that is to be used for plants must also have deep natural cracks for drainage and for the penetration of the roots of large shrubs and trees.

Where there are no natural cracks adequate artificial drainage has to be provided, otherwise the pocket would collect water over winter and the plants would die just as quickly as under water in the bathtub.

Early spring effects can be obtained with daffodils, tulips, and other spring-flowering bulbs. The creamy-white narcissus named Thalia, underplanted with a sea of blue forget-me-nots, is a time-honored planting that is perfect against the grey of rocks.

At the same time, small rhododendrons and azaleas will be starting to show color, and these coupled with massed plantings of polyanthus, the deep reds and purples of aubrieta, and the pinks of creeping phloxes, will long be remembered.

Going back to the beauty of simple lines and contrasts, an outstanding feature can be made by planting Picea abies pendula, a weeping spruce, on a high point so that its long branches of deep green foliage can cascade downwards like a waterfall, conforming to the shape of the rock.

Another conifer of great merit is Cedrus libani Sargenti, Sargent's weeping cedar, with much finer foliage of a lighter green. The dwarf conical Alberta spruce, Picea albertiana conica, planted in groups of three or five may contrast their compact formal cone shapes with the loose mounds of Cryptomeria japonica, the Japanese cedar, with a winter garb of reddish brown which leads many gardeners to think the plants are dying.

It is well worth the time, and the little higher initial cost, to obtain the more unusual plants with especially attractive characteristics when only a half-dozen or so are to be used to transform a bleak outcrop of rock into a picture that will delight and satisfy the year around.

Plan Needed To 'Stretch' Kitchen Space

EDMONTON (CP) — A perfect kitchen is a family room, says home economist Alice Summers. But it takes planning and ingenuity to stretch the kitchen space in most homes.

"A woman spends much of her time there and the children want to be with her," says Mrs. Summers, a lecturer in home management at the University of Alberta.

To set up a new kitchen or improve the efficiency of an old one, draw your working area accurately to scale on graph paper and plan your work sequence around a mixing centre, range-serve centre and sink.

Near the range should be all cooking equipment, canned foods, uncooked cereals and serving dishes for hot foods. Cleaning supplies and equipment used at the sink should be in the sink area.

The work triangle, or distance from refrigerator to stove to sink, should measure no more than 22 feet.

Then modify and innovate to suit your taste in details.

PARTITIONS HELP

"Cupboards can be fitted to improve their usefulness," Mrs. Summers says. "Partitions for trays and cookie sheets, step-shelves for spices, adjustable shelves, pull-out shelves, door racks, pegboards, cup hooks and lazy susans should all be considered for their space-saving qualities."

In her own kitchen, Mrs. Summers stores items most used in the top cupboards.

"But this would not suit someone else who prefers bending to reaching.

"I try to overcome trouble spots such as the cutting board built over a row of drawers. The first drawer holds the cutlery, and invariably something is needed from it when the board is in use.

"To avoid this I have an extra board I can use on top of the counter.

"I have a cupboard with pots and pans that Brian, 2, and Linda, 18 months, love. This is away from the stove to avoid accidents."

Mrs. Summers said women planning new kitchens can consider four basic shapes. The U-shape is the most efficient but has the drawback of two blind corners.

These can be used by lazy-susan shelves, or by doors on the far side of the cupboard if it forms a partition between kitchen and eating area.

She Likes Anything That's New

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (CP)—"I like men," said actress Carolyn Jones.

"I like the sound of their voices, the way they think.

"They're more sensitive than women. With a woman, everything is either this or that, black or white. But a man can see shades of grey. That's what I call being sensitive."

As a new step in her ever-widening career, Miss Jones has undertaken a seven-month tour as Ruth, central figure in Harold Pinter's controversial and murky play, Homecoming.

This is a lot of hard work for a lady who is still counting the loot she earned from her two-year stint in The Addams Family, a successful television series.

But "C.J.," as her friends call her, has always liked to do new and interesting things ever since she broke into show business in Amarillo, Tex., as a disc jockey at the age of 15. To her, life must have an accordion quality of expansion to avoid staleness.

LOVE EVERYTHING

"I'm in love with everything about show business," she said. "The only thing that ever came easy to me in my life has been acting. The theatre is a kind of international language, and I like it.

"But I have a practical bent of mind, too. In any other field I could make only about a tenth as much as I do acting.

"That's why I want to be a producer. It pays better and you have more control.

"As an actress your physical presence is required in anything you do. You live from day to day, from hand to mouth. An actress has only a limited time of productive work—say 15 to 18 years.

"But a producer isn't limited by his age or his looks. His physical presence isn't always required in everything he does. He can have half a dozen things going. I like that possibility of mobility."

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

This is time to plant lily bulbs, that is, the ones which belong to the genus lilium. Stem rooting kinds are set six to seven inches deep. Base rooting, only two inches below soil level.

If old manure is bought containing much bedding material, it may be spread around strong growing shrubs such as aucubas, hydrangeas, also fruit trees. If fresh, better layer it with garden refuse in a heap.

A little heat will be needed at night in greenhouse if any frost tender plants are being grown. Ventilate during day, and water, if necessary, in morning.

Late blooming chrysanthemums in pots under cover need plenty of water and air, but no frost.

Dwarf espaliered fruit trees are desirable in small garden. They are interesting to train, easy to prune, spray, and no ladders needed to gather fruits.

If carpentry is scheduled for garden structures, get plans made and make a start now.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. I have a tall plant with well colored leaves this fall and drooping clusters of dark red flowers. The stems are something like bamboo but that is the only resemblance. My neighbor calls it Granny's Curls, but I realize it must have another name by which to find it in my Wise Encyclopedia of Gardening which you recommended to me some years ago. Can you identify this for me? —J.T., Duncan.

A. Your plant could be Leycesteria formosa. It has many common names, such as Flowering Nutmeg, Himalaya Honeysuckle, hardy Shrimp-plant. Oddly enough it is not listed in Wise Encyclopedia, but it is a useful semishrub for damp rich soil, particularly if cut well back in April of each year.

Q. Some of my gourds fell from the vines and lost their stems. I put a little sulphur on the end to counteract any fungous development and the gourds seem quite hard and mature. Is there anything else I can do to keep them?—Mrs. F.M., Cobble Hill.

A. Some varieties of gourds always seem to lose their stems, but will remain in good condition for several months when dried in a warm place and lightly waxed with any good liquid wax.

Prices Won't Drop, So, Better Buy Now!

When is the best time to buy a new home? Today, according to spokesmen for the building industry.

This seems paradoxical when prices for land, labor, building materials and mortgage money have all gone up.

But builders say that it's inlikely prices of homes will drop any sooner than prices for food, clothing or automobiles. And while mortgage rates may decline, economists consider further increases more likely.

Since the supply of suitable land tracts large enough for development and close enough to urban centres is limited, land costs are expected to continue to rise. That portion of a home's sale price taken up by land alone has doubled in the past 20 years.

In addition to these cost trends that make a price drop unlikely, there is the fact that standards of comfort and convenience in the new homes being built today are much higher than in homes built 10 or 20 years ago.

New ideas and improvements have led to better designs and products. For example, Andersen Corporation, a window manufacturer, reports numerous improvements in window design—such as improved hardware, factory weatherstripping, welded insulating glass and vinyl-clad sash—have resulted in windows that offer better weather protection and the convenience of lower maintenance.

Builders contend today's new homes offer many other examples of new and improved products, including built-in automatic appliances and electronic conveniences, that make them a better value than older homes.

Add all this to the traditional soundness that home ownership offers as an investment and you have the answer why today is the best time to buy.

Just Turn a Handle

The use of casement windows over the kitchen sink and other hard-to-reach areas, is suggested by the Andersen Corporation. Casements can be opened and closed without stretching, simply by turning the roto-release operator handle.

SMART GALLERY

Select an object somewhere in the room. Point to it with your index finger. With both eyes open, line up the end of your finger with the object. Now shut one eye (either one). Note the distance the end of your finger appears to move to either right or left of the object. Now, open this eye and close the other, again noting finger movement.

Suggestion: Put your friends to this test. See how many right-handed persons among them are right-eyed.

WINNERS AND LOSERS

Each of the four teams in a local soccer league played 15 games this season. Team B won two more games than team D and 11 more games than team C. Team A won six more games than team C. How many games did each team win and lose?

Solution: Thirty games were won. A won 6 more than C; B, 11 more and D, 9 more. 6 plus 11 plus 9 is 26. Then 26 minus 26 or 4. Therefore C won 1 game and lost 14. A won 7 and lost 8. B won 12 and lost 3. D won 10 and lost 5.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

On Dec. 9 Tanzania will issue 14 colorful stamps comprising a new definitive issue. They feature some of the abundant fish species to be found in and around the coral reefs off the coast of Tanzania.

These species have some common characteristics: they are all to be found in shallow warm waters, darting among the coral reefs. They are also found, especially the young, in the weedy parts of estuaries.

Nearly all undergo various changes in color and shape with growth and the adult fish is often unidentifiable from the young of the species.

The fish do, however, differ diversely in their coloring, some vibrant oranges and yellows with black stripes or spots; whilst others have an illuminative lustre common to the greens and blues of tropical fish. They also vary in size from the four-inch sea-horse on the 20-cent, to the 40-inch red snapper featured on the 2-50-shilling stamp.

●

The curious collection of fish with many having distinctive habits include the Dowe or Rock Skipper on the 10-cent stamp, a most agile fish, jumping and skipping freely amongst the rocks and reefs.

Then there is the Tangu Domo with its tubular ~~snout~~ mouth adapted for nibbling at organisms in holes and crevices, again a most agile and illusive character.

The most spectacular of the group is the Chale or Devil fish featured on the 1-shilling stamp, whose spines are poisonous.

These curious fish are treated with great respect by some eastern peoples, who, when they catch them, bow and very reverently place them back in the sea.

Guyana's Christmas stamp features "Millie," the parrot, which was one of the attractions of the Guyana Pavilion at Expo 67. But she had to be withdrawn when she developed an unfortunate tendency to swear in both English and French!

SMART GALLERY

An elemental lesson in drawing is that a box can be formed by connecting two overlapping squares by diagonal lines. The drawing above is an example. It's an example, too, of how perspective can literally figure.

Can you arrange digits in the eight small circles so that the sum of the digits in the four corners of each of the squares is 15? You may use any digit as many times as necessary. See if you can do it in less than five minutes.

IN A JUBILEE

Now, what number if multiplied by 10; or divided by 10; has 10 added to it; or 10 subtracted from it, will produce each of the above? (The numbers are not listed in the correct order for these results.)

Solution: Two hundred and twenty is the number.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GILLAN — In loving memory of our dearest son, age 15 years, Douglas Gillan, who suddenly left us on Remembrance Day, Nov. 11, 1964.

In our hearts your memory we treasure,
Always tender, fond and true.
There's not a day, dear Douglas,
We do not think of you.
To a beautiful life, came a sudden end,
Just when your life was brightest,
Just when your years were tenderest.
You were called from a world of sorrow
To a Home of eternal rest.
How blessed the dead who die in the Lord.
"For their works do follow them," thus saith His Word.
This comforts our Hearts, though tears dim the eyes its true,
When the Master of our souls, will meet us on that Golden shore, Beyond the Blue.
—Always remembered Dad, Mom and Brother Paul.

GILLAN — In loving memory of our dearest grandson and nephew, Douglas Gillan, who suddenly left us on Remembrance Day, November 11, 1964.

Tied with a Golden Thread of Love,
Sprayed with a million tears,
A bouquet of cherished memories,
Our Rose unbudded faded away too soon.
No stain was on his young heart,
Sin had not entered there.
And innocence slept sweetly on;
On the pale white face so fair.
He was too pure for this cold earth,
Too beautiful to stay.
And so God's Holy Angels bore our dearest Douglas away.
Down here we mourn but not in vain,
For up in Heaven we will meet again.
—Always remembered. Grandma Grandpa and Aunt Marion.

To sit and talk with him awhile,
To be together in the same old way
Would be our dearest wish today.

Dear Lord forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that he were here.
Others are taken, yes we know;
But he was ours and we loved him so.
—Sadly missed by his wife Lillian, son Ken and daughter-in-law Pat, grandchildren Terri Gae, Steven Frank.

FLEETWOOD—In loving memory of my dear husband, Tom Fleetwood, who passed away Nov. 10, 1966, in Victoria, B.C.

—Sadly missed by his loving wife Isabel.

Outburst Shocks Library Board

Members of the Greater Victoria Public Library Board were shocked today by the reaction of Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow to a tentative five-year library growth plan.

The plan, drawn as a guideline for future development and prepared at the request of the municipalities, was termed as "too shocking for words" by Ald. Edgelow at Thursday's meeting of city council.

He was commenting on the fact that plan of development forecast a rise in per capita costs from $3.50 this year to $6.35 in 1971.

"I can't see any reason to blow this up into something big when it isn't," said Oak Bay Councillor Frances Elford, vice-chairman of the library board.

"This is not a budget nor even a preliminary budget. It is merely a projection of what costs could be if the library board is instructed to go ahead with the origninal inter-municipal plan to open branch libraries in Esquimalt, Oak Bay and other areas.

'INFORMATION ONLY'

"The library board, which by the way is made up of municipal representatives, was asked to work along these lines. All we did in the report to all municpalities was tell then what the costs would likely be if we adhered to the original time-table.

"It was forwarded to them as information only so that they could be kept well in the picture and would be well aware of what costs could be if we followed the time-table laid down."

In drawing up the plan the library finance committee and the board in full session were well aware of the sharp rise in costs, Coun. Elford said.

"Because we are all members of municipal councils we are quite budget conscious," she added. —"It was never our intention that this preliminary planning report should be taken as a hard and fast program we were demanding."

INCREASING COSTS

Coun. Elford said the figures used in the report for per capita costs were based on this year's population figures.

The estimated annual costs—$640,000 in 1968 increasing to $950,000 in 1971—were based on the steadily increasing cost and wages index.

"We gave the maximum figures based on branch libraries being open full time, or the same time as the main branch in Victoria," Coun. Elford said. "And it should be noted that we did not include any revenues in our planning estimate—again because this is not a budget, just an overall maximum plan."

Coun. Elford said it was obvious to the board long before Ald. Edgelow's criticism that the original five-year plan would have to be stretched over a longer period.

FOLLOWING REQUEST

"But we were requested to try and implement what is called the (Rose) Vainstein plan of development," she said. "That was a five-year plan. We have now informed the various municipalities, as I think we should, what that plan would cost. We are already working on a modified plan at less cost."

"I have never regarded the report as a definite plan of action or a request for the municipalities to support the program without question," he said. "We were asked to plan the opening of branch libraries in various areas and this was merely to show the municipalities what that program would cost.

"If they want branch libraries it will cost money, but that decision is up to the municipalities."

Annuities Office Here Will Close

Victoria office of the Canadian government annuity plan closes its door Nov. 30 after nearly 60 years of service.

Representative Bob Hogarth, who has held the position since he left the defence department in 1947, said future applications for government annuities must be forwarded directly to Ottawa.

It is believed the move is aimed at ultimate discontinuation of annuities as recommended by the Glassco royal commission on government organization.

Mr. Hogarth said there is still considerable preference for government annuities compared with private plans such as offered by insurance companies.

Although past retirement age himself—at 73—Mr. Hogarth said the closure order would mean the loss of employment for a number of young men in the annuities organization in other parts of the country.

Mr. Hogarth has become well known in his 20 years of service here, both in annuities and as local chairman of the Red Cross blood donor drive, which he intends to remain.

MIXED YEAR FOR TOURISTS

Nobody Knocks Expo But Some Resorts Hit

By CAROL ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Expo stood tall as a national project designed to publicize Canada's Centennial to the world, but it cast a shadow on resort owners in the Maritimes and some sections of Ontario.

While Quebec enjoyed its best tourist year ever, resort owners in other areas sang a muted blues, not wanting to criticize what they agreed was a magnificent achievement, yet hurt by a slowdown in their own business.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicated that business was slower than the previous year in most areas of Eastern Canada not located on or near a main route leading to Montreal.

The weather, although wet and cool for part of the season, played only a small part since it did not affect an increase in business at hotels, motels and restaurants on the roads pointing to Expo.

The survey showed by provinces:

Newfoundland was unaffected. Attendance at provincial parks was up about 42 per cent, and Ted Hendley, associate director of the tourist development office, said the province expects a 15-to-20-per-cent increase in over-all tourist income for the year.

Both Ways

In Nova Scotia, the weather was blamed as much as Expo for the reduction in the number of visitors.

R. H. Kitley, tourist association executive director, said Expo played a part in the reduction but it also had a good influence since many tourists from Western Canada travelled to Expo and then came farther east to holiday.

Business in Nova Scotia was down by about eight per cent, with about 900,000 visitors expected to spend $50,000,000.

In New Brunswick, Expo, the weather and bad road conditions combined to cause a 10-per-cent drop in business about the middle of August.

R. A. Tweedle, director of the New Brunswick travel bureau, said travellers from Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island resulted in some business but not nearly as much as in 1966. Most travelled straight through to Montreal.

Dr. M. Lorne Bonnell, minister of tourist development in Prince Edward Island, said tourist traffic was up 12 per cent from June to the end of September compared with last year, but added that travel to Expo by people in the Maritimes and New England seriously cut into potential tourist traffic. Large increases in the camper and trailer holidayers and in visitors from Western Canada and the United States are represented in the 1967 figure.

Slight Drop

Although Quebec benefitted most from Expo, resort owners in the outlying areas report a slight decrease in visitors.

And although Quebec City reported a 59-per-cent increase in the number of tourists visiting its offices, they spent less money and left the merchants dissatisfied.

Clement Shields, director of the Quebec City tourism office, attributes this to longer than planned stays at Expo which caused the 2,000,000 tourists to shorten their stops in Quebec City.

Marc Hardy, director of the Quebec provincial tourist bureau, said there was a 47.3-per-cent increase in the number of tourists around Quebec City but they spent only $25,000,000—the same amount as last year.

Ontario, however, reports two sides to the tourist story. In centres situated along the route to Expo, the tourist trade was improved, but in Northern Ontario, resort owners report a drop of about 20 per cent in the number of visitors. They attribute this drop to the cold, wet weather and then Expo.

William Cockman, manager of the Hamilton Visitors and Convention Bureau, reported a 20-per-cent sales increase over last year. There were more out-of-town people in the area, he said, but their stop-over was shorter.

Gerald Geldert, director of the Ottawa Tourist and Convention Bureau, said the impact of people travelling to and from Expo had increased Ottawa business by at least 50 per cent. He added that Expo had also brought large groups from Europe and other parts of the world to Ottawa for the first time.

Parks attendance in the nine southern provincial parks increased from 852,566 last year to 1,007,625 this year.

W. E. Organ, director of the tourist branch of the Manitoba government, said Expo increased the number of persons travelling across the province.

Harvey Dryden, director of the Saskatchewan tourist development branch, said Expo "cut into our U.S. markets quite a bit," but added that in the long run Expo's magnetic attraction may prove beneficial to the Saskatchewan tourist industry.

"The world is Canada conscious this year," he said, and Americans no longer think of Canada as that "frozen waste above the 49th parallel."

Confusing Year

For Alberta "it's been a confusing year," although "no one was hurt" said Doug Johnson, executive director of the Calgary Tourist and Convention Bureau.

As of July 1, tourist traffic was down 13 per cent, but by the end of August it was up five per cent. In view of "the awesome competition" from Expo and the Pan-American Games at Winnipeg, this is not considered bad, he said.

Many Americans cancelled late in the season when they realized Expo was more than just another world's fair, and decided to go to Montreal instead of travelling in other parts of Canada.

Arthur Clough of the Edmonton Tourist Bureau said tourist traffic was up 26 per cent over last year, but credited this to promotion in the Northwestern States and West Coast encouraging Expo-bound travellers to come by the Jasper National Park route.

Next Season

In Vancouver, Harold Merilees, general manager of the Greater Vancouver Tourist Bureau, said he feels the interest developed by Expo and centennial celebrations will be reflected in further increases in the tourist business in 1968-69.

"I'm sick and tired of people who say that Expo took away their business," he said. "I don't think we lost too many visitors through Expo. I think we drew just as many tourists from the Prairies as Expo did."

Dick Colby, director of the British Columbia travel bureau, says Canada will benefit "in the cumulative positive effect with the advertising spent in the U.S. in connection with the Centennial and Expo."

"We'll see them back again as a result of their first exposure," he said.

CANADA'S cost of living increase is second only to Japan. The United Kingdom, West Germany, Italy, the United States and France all had a lower cost of living increase over the last two years. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics lists Canada's increase at 8 per cent, beaten only by Japan, which recorded a 9.1 per cent increase over that time. (CP Wirephoto.)

Actress Found 'Near Death'

The shy, beautiful actress, found unconscious and not breathing, may have fallen about 100 feet, said Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies.

A deputy restored her breathing after performing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation for two or three minutes.

The deputies found her footprints winding down a 1,000-foot-long path to the surf and said they ended about 100 feet from where she was found.

Her stomach was pumped at the Malibu Hospital before she was taken to Mount Sinai. A sheriff's spokesman said Miss Jones, widow of producer David O. Selznick, is reported to have called her personal physician and said she was about to take some pills.

CONDITION UNKNOWN

Miss Jones won an Academy Award for her performance in her first film, Song of Bernadette. She was found just hours after the death of her co-star in that film, Charles Bickford.

Miss Jones, born Phylis Isley in Tulsa, Okla., married the late actor Robert Walker in 1939. The couple had two sons. She was divorced from Walker in 1941 and in 1949 married Selznick. They had one daughter.

In 1954 she made her stage debut in the Broadway play Portrait of a Lady, which she later confessed was a failure.

RELY ON MEMORY

Educator Criticizes Grade 12 Test Paper

Exam questions which ask students to match a list of dates with a list of literary works or poets with first lines from poems are fruitless, says a Victoria educator.

Dr. Geoffrey Mason of Uvic's education faculty said high school English teachers are forced into a narrow groove of instruction if memory work is going to mean more than reasoning power at exam time.

He was commenting on an article highly critical of the 1967 government English exam which he and Robert Kendrick, head of the English department at Oak Bay Senior High School, have written.

RELY ON MEMORY

They claim 90 per cent of the exam, for Grade 12 students in Literature, required memory work rather than facility to reason or write.

The November issue of a B.C. teachers journal contains their analysis of the regular departmental exam and also the Grade 12 English scholarship exam.

A similar analysis of the 1966 Grade 12 English exam by the authors shows almost 60 per cent of the questions called for answers based on memorization.

"It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the purpose of this examination for those who failed to get recommended was more punitive than educational," the authors write.

REAL OBJECTIVES

Dr. Mason said today teachers have been trying for a long time to get away from the matching type of question "because it has little to do with development of an appreciation of good literature."

In their article the authors say it is up to those responsible for setting the exams to see that real objectives and not trivia are tested.

A department spokesman said today that customary practice is to assign a practising teacher to set the exam and another to check it and act as critic.

The department acts as intermediary where the two disagree and is responsible for the final result, he added.

DECISION not to seek a fourth term as governor of Texas was announced today by Democrat John Connally. He was secretary of navy under John Kennedy and a key to President Johnson's campaign hopes in Texas. Connally was gravely wounded in 1963 when Kennedy was killed in Dallas.

Black Muslim Leader Jailed In Britain

READING, England (UPI)—Michael Malik, the self-proclaimed leader of Britain's Black Muslims, was found guilty Thursday on a charge of inciting race hatred.

He was sentenced to 12 months imprisonment.

Malik, 34, who calls himself Michael X, was accused of using threatening language likely to incite race hatred at a meeting in Reading last July. He was speaking in place of U.S. black power advocate Stokely Carmichael, who cancelled an appearance and left Britain under police investigation about statements made during a short visit.

The jury of 10 men and two women was told by Judge Robert Hutton to remember U.S. racial troubles while weighing evidence heard in a two-day trial.

Gallery Open Sunday

The Victoria Art Gallery will be closed Saturday, Remembrance Day, but will re-open Sunday.

Curator Colin Graham said today Sunday will be the last day for the exhibition Canadian paintings 1850-1950 and not Nov. 18 as reported.

More than 5,000 people have seen the show to date, he said.

Juniors Not Meeting

The regular meeting Saturday of the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society is cancelled because of the Remembrance Day holiday.

BOOK WEEK

'Something To Crow About'

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Young Canada's Book Week, commencing an annual engagement across the country on Wednesday, is a co-operative effort to bring better books to more and more children.

It made its debut some 20 years ago when the Canadian Association of Children's Librarians decided it must do something constructive to focus adult attention on the need for good reading amongst children.

Forbes

It has continued because of the tremendous interest shown to encourage the reading of such books at home, at school and at libraries.

Over the years, through community efforts during "the week," adults (and especially parents) have become increasingly aware of the important place good books have in a child's life.

Through these books children and young people find enjoyment and fun, knowledge and a true sense of values. They learn to understand themselves and their friends and playmates. With this understanding comes a widening of experience.

The week is marked from coast to coast by press, radio and television. Departments of education in every province endorse the event and it is sponsored by 32 national men's and women's organizations.

This year the slogan is "Something to Crow About." It's exemplified in posters and pamphlets by a brilliantly colored rooster standing proudly on a half-open book from which the numbers 1967 emerge. His head is raised, his comb erect and he is crowing mightily.

The inference is that in this year of 1967 there are any number of good books available for children and young people and that a good percentage of them are by Canadian authors.

★ ★ ★

In the Greater Victoria area, celebration of Young Canada's Book Week centres around the children's and young people's departments of the Victoria Public Library, its bookmobile and its outlets at Brentwood and in the Town and Country Plaza.

★ ★ ★

Librarian John Lort and children's department head Isabelle Goodwin are arranging a display of children's and young people's books that will be officially opened on Wednesday evening and remain open to anyone interested throughout the special week.

There will be lists of suggested reading available and Mrs. Goodwin and her assistant in the young people's department, Margaret Toakley, will be ready to answer questions and to give advice.

This department was opened on an experimental basis a year and a half ago, especially to interest Grade 8 boys and girls (and others who have opted out of school) in continuing good reading habits.

In its first year it circulated some 4,049 volumes from folk lore, ballet, music and travel, through history, exploration, science and technology, to mystery, fantasy, hot rod magazines and the classics.

Headlines in the news influence selections here, Mrs. Goodwin says. And it is not unusual to have requests for mind-expanding subjects such as hypnotism and extra sensory perception.

Boys and girls in this age group don't waste time on choosing books, Mrs. Toakley will tell you. They know the subject they wish to explore, they decide quickly and they read quickly.

They give their honest opinions, too. And if they don't like a book there is no hesitation in saying that it is "lousy."

Last year in the children's or juvenile department, (from pre-school to Grade 7) Mrs. Goodwin had 23,000 youngsters with library cards and she circulated 57,500 volumes.

In the first nine months of this year there are 24,495 card carriers.

Still more books are taken out on parents' card. For until a child can print its name, no card is issued.

These figures, in themselves, point to the precepts implied in Young Canada's Book Week. To the ever-increasing interest in good reading for children and young people and to the vital influence the public library plays in guiding good reading in these age brackets.

AT $466,000 A DAY

Long Walks Meant Hunger And Expo Cafes Cashed In

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

MONTREAL (CP) — Expo 67 may have been concerned primarily with the higher things of Man and His World but the figures show that man didn't exactly forget his stomach.

Fair-goers paid out an average of around $466,000 a day for food and drink during the 185-day exhibition.

"I think the majority of restaurants have made good money," says Maurice Novek, 44-year-old Montreal restaurateur who was head of Expo's restaurant division.

A collection of menus reads like a gourmet's fantasy—anything from Algeria's shish kebab to Venezuela's paella. But nothing went over bigger than the seafood served at the Atlantic provinces pavilion where patrons stood in line for hours to get a meal.

"The whole idea was to give as wide a variety of food experience as possible in as wide a variety of price ranges as possible," says Mr. Novek. "By and large we were able to achieve this.

"You didn't see a proliferation of hot dog and hamburger stands, even though they were the most popular items and did the greatest volume of business in snack bars."

There were 37 pavilions with food or beverage facilities or both, 49 restaurants in the same category, 76 snack bars, 45 food shops and 450 vending machines.

What did all this—plus the La Ronde fun fair—do to the Montreal restaurant and nightclub business?

Both sectors were hard hit early in the season. Restaurant business improved while nightclubs continued to suffer, one big operator reporting the slash as at least 25 per cent.

Andy Cobetto, co-proprietor of Casa Loma on St. Catherine East, said: "Expo knocked the stuffings out of every club in town. Lots of places folded during the summer. I geared myself for Expo by planning an international revue last year. If I hadn't done that I would have died."

One authority on Montreal's night life said club owners were incensed over the competition from "high-powered talent on a subsidized basis" brought in by Expo. Appearances of such artists as Maurice Chevalier, Jack Benny and Marlene Dietrich under the wing of the World Festival did nightclubs no good at all.

As an added boost to Expo concessionaires, the Quebec liquor law was amended to permit the fair to set opening and closing hours for liquor-serving establishments. This too irked nightclubs.

Eating places on the Montreal approaches to Expo did well, as did short-order places, but downtown restaurants didn't pick up until fair-goers began fleeing the queues.

Mr. Novek says Expo planned for a 21,000 seating capacity but had only 18,000 on opening day. "By early June we had raised it to 29,000 seats and were able to supply 350,000 meals and snacks a day, sufficient for demand."

Doing business in excess of $2,000,000 were the Canadian pavilion, with 1,346 seats, the Czech pavilion, 450 seats, the Soviet pavilion, 1,400, the German pavilion, 700, and the Bavarian beer garden, 1,500.

"One of the big things was that despite the volume no major outbreak of food contamination occurred. I think this is unique in a fair of this kind."

But there were problems involving staff and price. Of the 8,500 persons employed in food services, only one-third started out with proper qualifications.

There was early confusion and anger about 15-per-cent service charges being added to the bill without being noted on the menus but this was generally remedied in a week or so.

As for prices, Mr. Novek says:

"I have to accept that a commissioner-general of a particular nation knew full well what he was doing in assessing in advance what a price level was going to do to the image of his country.

"There was nothing in our regulations that said they couldn't charge $15 for a meal if all else was commensurate with that price. Our prime concern was a good mix based on estimated earnings of visitors. . . . We did not have a superabundance of $15-a-meal restaurants and no low-price places. I feel we had a very good mix."

CAMPAIGN PLANNED

Indian Women Vote, Seek Improvements

FT. QU'APPELLE, Sask. (CP) — Saskatchewan's Indian women are serving notice they are unhappy with the conditions of their lives and are determined to change them.

During four days of discussions at the first Saskatchewan conference of Indian women which ended today, 60 delegates discussed Indian problems.

"The purpose of this conference is to demonstrate to society Indians are not all sitting back on their reserves doing nothing," said a spokesman. "We are concerned, we have potential leaders and we are going to start moving."

The tone of the conference was set by Mrs. Ann Lavallee of Broadview, Sask.

"The Indian nation, as never before, needs the services, abilities, understanding, backbone and the tongues of its women," Mrs. Lavallee told the delegates. "The Indian nation, like a fish out of water, is floundering and gasping for air.

"We have only to check the figures of government reports to know that this is so. We have only to listen to radio and television to hear that Indians are in a tight spot: 90 per cent school dropout record, 39 per cent prison records and 24 per cent infant mortality rate.

"It is time for us to look around, to see things as they are, to face the truth, and it is time for us Indian women to loosen our tongues and give our children a new deal, a better break and a happier home life."

Feeling of Mystical Hope As Sydney Waits for Word

By DAL WARRINGTON

SYDNEY (CP) — Rust-colored smoke from the Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. plant drifted across this Cape Breton Island city Thursday as it has for 67 years. But many Sydney citizens wondered sadly if it would be billowing six months from now.

They might get an answer by next Wednesday. That is the deadline to which Nova Scotia's Premier G. I. Smith apparently is conducting his urgent negotiations to keep Nova Scotia's largest single industry going, at the taxpayers' expense if necessary.

That is the date by which Dosco says it must have an answer to conditions under which it will continue to buy Cape Breton steel for its Montreal plant after Dosco moves out of Sydney. Experts say Sydney must have this market if it is to survive under any management.

There is speculation the expected announcement might be held up until after a "save-the-steel plant" parade scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 19.

Promoters are striving for a turnout of thousands to strengthen the hands of solution-seekers.

If Mr. Smith succeeds, the 128,000 residents of Sydney and surrounding Cape Breton county can sigh with relief. If he does not? Well, no one wants to consider that prospect. Loss of the plant's $24,000,000 annual payroll will be felt throughout the province.

LIFE CONTINUES

Meanwhile, life in Sydney goes on with little outward sign that its citizens face a crisis. The 3,235 Dosco employees work regular shifts as if the company had never said it is through with steel-making here next April.

Street traffic is as heavy as ever. Motels and hotels are full or nearly so.

Harvey Webber, board of trade president, says the effect on business has been erratic. Sales of food, clothing and the like are good, better than normal in some stores. Discount stores particularly report good volume, part of it generated by price-cutting stimulated by opening of a new chain department store.

"It seems to reflect a feeling of confidence in the eventual outcome," he says, "or a feeling of mystical hope, if you want to call it that."

Real estate business has been hard hit, though. Dosco's bombshell plant-closing announcement of Friday, Oct. 13, brought chaos to the property market.

Real estate agent Ray Goodyear says no one knows what property is worth now. Only a long-range solution to the steel plant problem seems likely to settle the market.

Dealers in cars and large household appliances also report a slump. Many people are holding back, waiting for "something to happen," before they commit themselves to long-term credit purchases.

Mr. Webber said finance and mortgage companies' credit applications nosedived after the blow fell. Bill collections held steady, however.

"People are paying their bills well," he said.

James Nicholson, district director for the United Steelworkers of America, said the steel plant workers were encouraged by quick government action in the crisis. They awaited hopefully for a report from accountants and steel experts investigating the financial and economic status of the mill.

GIANT PARACHUTE USED

Plane 'Lands' Safely After Wings Jettisoned

LAKEHURST, N.J. (AP) — A veteran pilot deliberately blew the wings off a four-seat airplane Thursday and the craft then parachuted softly and safely to earth in the first airborne test of a novel experimental system designed to prevent plane crashes.

"It came off beautifully," said pilot Thomas Walker of New York City.

★ ★ ★

Designers of the system, Dario Manfredi and Angelo Raiti, smiled approvingly. They are the founders of the Aircraft Safety Release Corp. of New York.

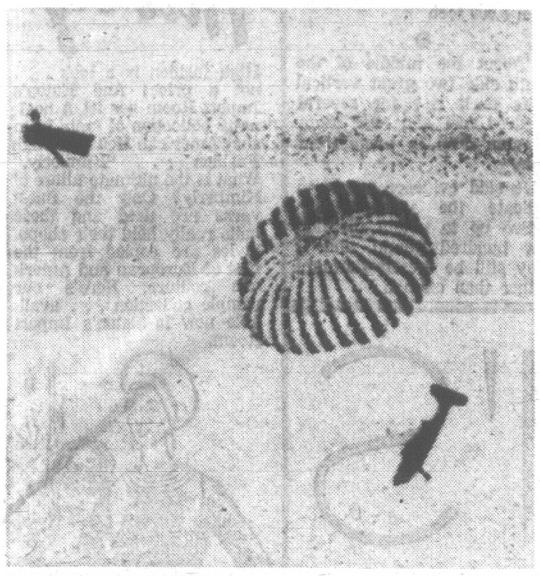

speed of 80 miles an hour he pulled a lever and three pins in each wing were blown out, separating the wings from the body.

The only hitch developed when the wing chutes became tangled and the wings crashed to the ground.

★ ★ ★

As the wings were blasted clear, the plane looped in a circle and a specially designed parachute 64 feet in diameter billowed forth.

Walker remained in the cockpit noting characteristics of the descent until the body of the craft was at an altitude of 1,500 feet. Then he, too, parachuted clear.

ECONOMIST'S VIEW OF DOLLAR

Beaver 'Not Worth a Buck'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's dollar should be called something else, the president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association said Thursday.

R. A. Engholm said in an interview that confusion is created because both the United States and Canada have the dollar as their monetary unit.

This makes people think the Canadian dollar is equal to the American dollar and that they should be making the same salaries as their American counterparts.

If the Canadian dollar were called a "Beaver," Mr. Engholm said, Canadians would realize that two different currencies are involved.

There is a difference not only in the exchange rate, he said, but also in what the unit of currency represents — the productivity level of the country. The Canadian worker produces about two-thirds of what the American produces for the same unit of capital.

Mr. Engholm, on a tour of CMA branches, said there can be no real equality of wages without equality of productivity.

"The situation is becoming extremely serious, but we only need to drop the inflationary trends by a point or two to bring the economy back into line."

Cuts in government spending would help to do this, he said, but not alone. Labor unions must reduce their demands for increased wages.

"We advocate good wages provided they are related to productivity. If they're not, this will seriously inhibit our ability to compete for exports."

Suspended Sentence For Doctor

A city doctor was given a suspended sentence Thursday after he was convicted of assault causing bodily harm.

Boudewyn is serving a two-month sentence for contempt of court for refusing to testify when the case came up Nov. 1.

Court was told Boudewyn went to the Evans residence on the evening of Oct. 8 and became involved in an argument with Dr. Evans.

Saanich police reported Dr. Evans said the argument got out of hand and he picked up a paring knife and slashed Boudewyn.

Dr. Evans, who had released his lawyer and was defending himself, called psychiatrist Dr. Charles Gregory as a witness.

Dr. Gregory, who said he has known Dr. Evans for 17 years, told the court "at the time (of the knifing) it was what you might call temporary insanity in that he literally could not control himself—quite literally."

But Magistrate Ostler ruled:

"He was not insane within the meaning of the Criminal Code. More force was used than was reasonably necessary and I must find the accused guilty."

Dr. Evans was placed on a good behavior bond for six months.

Pooled Coverage

TORONTO (CP) — CBC and CTV will provide pooled television coverage of the Confederation of Tomorrow conference in Toronto Nov. 27-30, it was learned Thursday.

Farmers Organize To Fight Hydro

DUNCAN—Farmers here will fight to the Supreme Court if necessary to protect their rights in expropriation negotiations with B.C. Hydro.

B.C. Hydro is putting transmission lines throughout the province from the Peace River power project and hundreds of farmers will be affected by power lines dividing their property.

She said the B.C. Federation of Agriculture is keenly interested in the association's plans.

Walkout Ends At Crofton Mill

CROFTON—A walkout by construction workers at the B.C. Forest Products pulp mill extension here ended Thursday, a union official said today.

No details of the settlement were available. About 250 men stopped work to protest the dismissal of a pipefitter for non-production. Union shop steward Tom Williams said the man was told earlier by the supervisor to slow down because of lack of work.

WHOLE COASTAL BELT IN 'CIRCLE OF FIRE'

Volcanic Eruption on V.I.? . . . It Could Just Happen

By HUMPHRY DAVY

●

Mount Redoubt, 155 miles from Anchorage, dormant for many years, began belching smoke and lava last week, and started speculation on the chances of a similar occurrence in British Columbia.

Scientific opinion is that volcanic activity could take place on any part of the island tomorrow or 20,000,000 years from now.

But don't be alarmed; the chances of an island mountain blowing its top is remote, according to B.C. department of mines geologist Dr. Athol Sutherland Brown who takes a special interest in the subject.

It's more likely to occur on the mainland where there are volcanic cones. The island and the whole of B.C.'s coastal belt are in the "circle of fire," otherwise known as the circumpacific volcanic zone.

●

The zone starts from Alaska, and moving clockwise takes in all of the coast belt of North America, Mexico, South America, Antarctic, New Zealand, Polynesia, Japan—right through to Kamchatka.

"The risk of a volcano on the coast is higher than anywhere else in Canada," Mr. Brown stated," but low compared to Alaska and the Aleutian Islands."

Vancouver Island has no volcanic cones like the mainland, but this doesn't rule out an eruption of some sort.

Submarine volcanoes could occur like they did 180,000,000 years ago to form parts of Vancouver Island.

A volcano could also arise from a fissure in the earth like the one at Paricutin in Mexico in 1943.

In the space of 24 hours, this volcano rose 25 feet high. A week late the cone was 500 feet high; after two months 970 feet; and at the end of two years it towered 1,500 feet above the plain and was more than three quarters of a mile in diameter.

●

Dr. Stuart Holland, head of the department of geology in his publication "Landforms of British Columbia," notes that lava flowed from a small cone near the head of Tseax River, south of the Nass River, about 300 years ago. It is so recent that the region is still largely devoid of vegetation.

Extending in a line norward from Mount Garibaldi to the head of the Bridge River are also numerous centres of recent volcanic activity, he said.

There are many others, near the B.C.-Alaskan panhandle.

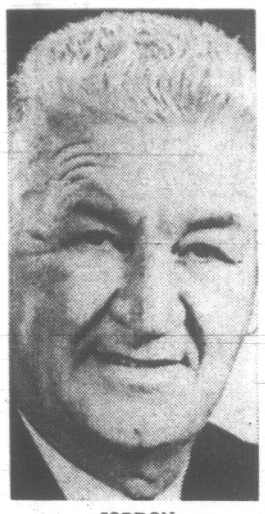

Perhaps the most interesting, according to Dr. Holland, is Hoodoo Mountain on the north side of the lower Iskut River in northern B.C.

He described it as one of the most magnificent mountains, with a crater now ice-filled, at an elevation of more than 6,500 feet.

●

"About the middle of the south side two great vertical cliffs each rise for several hundred feet and over them streams drop in magnificent falls."

He said evidence seems to indicate the volcano was active up to within the last few hundred years; and it may still be merely dormant rather than extinct.

JORDON

Former Mayor Tries Comeback

PORT ALBERNI—Added interest in an already promising mayoral race in the new city of Port Alberni has been sparked by the entry of Loran Jordon, former "Port" mayor.

Mr. Jordon, who retired in 1963 after 16 years as mayor, joins three others in the contest: Mayor Les Hammer, head of the interim council; Fred Bishop, former Alberni mayor, and George Dunbar, an accountant.

Mayor Hammer recently honored Mr. Jordon with the title of freeman of the new city in recognition of his long service.

Mr. Jordon, who sold his interest in a trucking firm last year, said the mayor's job is becoming a full-time project. He said he is completely recovered from a heart attack suffered 18 months ago.

Civic officials hope the Dec. 9 elections will show a reversal of the recent trend toward apathy among voters.

NEAR-DISASTER ON MIDNIGHT BOAT

Trio Started Wine Industry But Never Touched a Drop!

Three temperance men helped establish the loganberry wine industry in Saanich in the 1920s.

The unusual story of how the trio campaigned to establish the industry was told by Tom Michell, president of the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, at a dinner Thursday marking the 50th anniversary of the farmer's co-operative.

The association was founded Jan. 10, 1927, to promote the Saanich fruit industry.

But for the determination of the three teetotallers — all now dead — there might be no wine industry on the peninsula, Mr. Michell said.

He said the man who initiated the wine industry was Neil Lamont, a Central Saanich grower, but first he had to prove that a palatable wine could be made from logans. This was in the 1920s.

He made the wine in his cellar and then arranged for two other growers, Harry Tanner and Charles B. McCarthy — also non-drinkers — to take a few bottles to Vancouver to show businessmen that logans made good wine.

MICHELL
. . . tells the story

They left Victoria by CPR steamer, but during the all-night journey the bottles blew their tops, spilling into a suitcase.

The next day it was served to businessmen who agreed that "there was nothing like it."

From that day on the move to establish a wine industry grew and finally resulted in the founding in 1927 of Growers Wine Ltd., Mr. Michell said.

A birthday cake supplied by the Women's Auxiliary to St. Mary's Anglican Church was cut by John James Young, 82, who served 22 years as secretary and 11 years as manager of the co-operative.

Mr. Young, who resided on Central Saanich Road, started farming in 1910. After serving overseas in the First World War with the 48th Battalion, he specialized in strawberries.

Also present was Herbert Young, 76 (no relation), a former director of the association, now living in Brentwood. He operated a large strawberry farm on Oldfield Road.

"In my opinion 1928 was the worst year for strawberry growers due largely to competition from the mainland," he said. "Some growers were not getting more than 3½ cents a pound for berries."

Philip Benn, acting reeve of Central Saanich, congratulated the growers for the part they have played in the development of the municipality.

Others present included Norman Tanner, son of Harry Tanner, the first president of association, and Fred Sutton, son of the first secretary-manager, J. H. Sutton.

Magician Alex McCormick entertained.

Jury Cautioned On Word 'Rape'

NANAIMO — Mr. Justice J. G. Gould Thursday cautioned a jury against taking the word "raped" too literally during trial of Andrew Norman "Knobby" Bagley of Saanichton in Assize Court.

He told the jury the only witness in the case had "told you, in effect what the verdict is" when she accused the defendant of raping her near Duncan's Cowichan River while an Indian bone game was in progress.

Testifying she had engaged in intercourse earlier on the river bank with Kenneth George, the witness said she heard footsteps when later she was back at the river alone.

Attempting to run back to the bone game, she said she stumbled and was raped. Fire from the nearby area enabled her to identify her attacker, she said.

Mr. Justice Gould told jury members it was up to them to decide whether the case constituted rape.

Former Cadet C.O. Runs for Council

NORTH COWICHAN — Thomas A. Burge, of Mary Street, Duncan, has announced his candidacy for councillor in the Dec. 9 elections in North Cowichan.

Mr. Burge, an employee of the British Columbia Forest Products mill at Crofton, and a resident of the district for 10 years, is a former commanding officer of the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Regiment cadet corps.

BLINDED

He served in the Second World War as an officer of the Canadian Scottish, and was severaly wounded during the Allied advance into Germany. Blinded, (he lost one eye and has only partial sight in the other) he underwent treatment at English hospitals, including a course at famed St. Dunstan's for blind soldiers, before being invalided home.

Despite his disability, he refused to accept this as a crippling handicap and soon broke away from the usual occupations for the blind. He set up his own television business on Salt Spring Island and later moved to Duncan.

He is an ardent golfer and curler.

Are Sun Gods Down for Count?

By SHIRLEY HEWETT

You may have noticed those brilliant blue bumper stickers around town with their appeals to "Think Snow."

A more appropriate affirmation for the rest of us, particularly those who are still boating, would be to "Think Sun." Because any native of B.C. knows that it never rains when the sun is shining.

Their first organized activity on Oct. 23 was washed out. Rescheduled for Oct. 29, the three hour expedition saw 12 members explore Thetis Lakes.

The group's three kayaks and six canoes made the portage between the Upper and Lower Lakes through a drainage culvert six feet in diameter. All part of the fun, which also included lunch on an island.

Until next spring, however, the club will confine itself to indoor activities. Monthly meetings will feature informative programs: demonstrations on how to pack a canoe, slides of canoeing activities, lectures on the "how to" and "where to" aspects of the sport.

In short, the type of program where everyone can learn from another person's experiences, particularly where exploring is concerned.

Planning the 1968 activity program will be another major consideration.

●

A definite "must" is the perpetuation of the Gorge Race, which, after all, resulted in the club's formation. Other racing events will probably be scheduled several times a month.

In fact, kayak competition would be a logical addition to the Oak Bay Tea Party racing program.

This club, just in the exciting process of formation, welcomes inquiries from anyone who is interested in the sport. And certainly from non-boat owners.

They would also welcome the use of a meeting hall large enough to hold 50 people . . . and a canoe or kayak.

Phone numbers to call regarding either of the above are: 477-3062 (treasurer, Arthur Kinnis); 383-3090 (secretary, Pat Townsend) or 384-1320 (Anthony Wilkins).

●

SHORT TACKS: Canoe Club paddlers making the Thetis Lake excursion were Wilf and Kitsie Harper, Ron Steele, Harry Gregson, Dave Thompson, and the Wilkins family, Laurie, Christopher and Anthony . . . Chief officer of the Turkey Headers, R. V. James, makes his winter racing debut this Sunday at the second Oak Bay race. As crew on his 42-foot sloop Lalonga II, Dick will take Jack Smith, Ray Fisher, Bruce Malczewski, and Bill Stavdal. A reciprocal favor on Jack's part. He had Dick along last Sunday when Reality won the Sidney race by a convincing margin . . . Missing and missed from the lineup were Marjorie and Theo de la Mare. Their new Tandem II succeeds the Tandem, which won the 1965 trophy and placed third last year. The popular winter series was Theo's inspiration. He'll be back in action after Christmas . . . Also absent from last Sunday's race was Ned Ashe and the boat he skippered to the series trophy last winter. Ned's taking a well deserved holiday-from-the-helm in California. While Saga is sailing at Maple Bay with her new owner, John Roome, who crewed aboard the six-metre Juno II before she came "south" to Es. and Co.

B.C.'s Dynamic Growth Painted by Cabinet

By JOHN MIKA
Times Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO—A battery of B.C. government officials and businessmen showed the other side of the coin to businessmen here Thursday.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner said B.C.'s great need for the next dozen years is an enormous increase in capital investment and construction spending and he never even mentioned Premier Bennett's strictures to British Columbians to show restraint in order to curb the inflationary spiral.

And George B. McLean, president of Standard Oil Company in B.C., praised provincial labor unions as the most moderate in Canada.

And Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Loffmark pointed out some tax loopholes which would enable U.S. companies to write off part of the costs of any research programs conducted in B.C. as well as avoiding "the iniquitous capital gains tax" levied on them in their own country.

These were among the speeches delivered to about 50 members of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce who attended seminars on B.C.-California trade as city council officially proclaimed it British Columbia day here.

Mr. Bonner said that provincial projections made 10 years ago estimated B.C.'s needs for new annual capital investment would rise to about $2 billion by 1970 but already that has been exceeded.

He said this year and last some $2.5 billion a year has poured into provincial expansion and the current estimate is that B.C. will need a rate of $6 or $7 billion annually by 1980.

The province's population in the next dozen years should grow to about 2.8 million persons, adding the equivalent of two Vancouvers, and its gross provincial product should more than double to "between $15 and $18 billion."

Mr. McLean told the Americans that "despite the problems, B.C. has some definite attractions labor-wise. "While we think we've had some pretty radical union leadership in British Columbia, the record of work stoppages is lower than for the rest of Canada," he said.

B.C.'s 700,000-member labor force represents 9 per cent of the total in Canada yet it has only accounted for 6.7 per cent of the time lost in Canada last year through work stoppages.

"An average of only 1.7 per cent of the labor force in B.C. has been involved in these stoppages which compares with the 3 per cent national average."

He also said that B.C. wages are considerably lower than those in the San Francisco area in most cases and recently-signed working agreements provide relative smaller built-in cost increases.

Taking the construction industry as an example, he said the "wage differentials between B.C. and the (San Francisco) Bay area are very interesting."

Construction laborers are paid $3.24 an hour in B.C. and $4.17 here the spread is $4.14 an hour to $5.20 for carpenters and $3.99 to $6,861—"or 72 per cent"—for plumbers.

●

Mr. McClean said wage rates for tradesmen outside the construction industry are even lower and "don't forget the U.S. dollar is worth eight cents more than ours."

He also said it should not be overlooked that, with a few exceptions which are not expected to become the rule for some time, the standard work week in B.C. is 40 hours compared with 37½ here.

The day-long seminar saw several participants criticize a growing "backlash" in the U.S. Senate to neutralize reductions in tariffs resulting from the recent international Kennedy Round agreements.

Mr. Loffmark called for even lower tariffs to be negotiated which would permit more wood, agricultural and petroleum products to be exported to U.S. by B.C. and specialized manufacturing equipment to be imported.

●

If there is a curtain between us, it is an economic one and the sooner we can remove it the sooner we can both enjoy a kind of prosperity which at the moment we hardly dare hope for," he said.

A U.S. commerce department official from Washington, D.C., David Fellmen, said President Johnson recently blasted a proposal in the Senate which would impose quotas on Canadian exports to the U.S.

He said the proposal likely would not get to debate on the Senate floor this year because of time running out which would give a useful respite for a concentrated attack on the protectionist sentiment at the next session of Congress.

14% Increase Rejected By Guild

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild has rejected a wage settlement made by Pacific Press Ltd., printers of the Sun and Province newspapers.

Bill McLeman, executive secretary of the guild, said today Guild members at meetings Thursday overwhelmingly endorsed the action of their negotiators in rejecting the offer.

Pacific Press offered an increase of 14 per cent on existing minimum rates in a two-year contract. Present scale for senior reporters and their equivalent in other business departments is $147.75 a week.

The Guild, which represents about 600 Pacific Press employees, has voted to take strike action but a walkout date has not been set.

ECONOMIST'S VIEW OF DOLLAR

Beaver 'Not Worth a Buck'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's dollar should be called something else, the president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association said Thursday.

R. A. Engholm said in an interview that confusion is created because both the United States and Canada have the dollar as their monetary unit.

This makes people think the Canadian dollar is equal to the American dollar and that they should be making the same salaries as their American counterparts.

If the Canadian dollar were called a "Beaver," Mr. Engholm said, Canadians would realize that two different currencies are involved.

There is a difference not only in the exchange rate, he said, but also in what the unit of currency represents — the productivity level of the country. The Canadian worker produces about two-thirds of what the American produces for the same unit of capital.

Mr. Engholm, on a tour of CMA branches, said there can be no real equality of wages without equality of productivity.

"The situation is becoming extremely serious, but we only need to drop the inflationary trends by a point or two to bring the economy back into line."

Cuts in government spending would help to do this, he said, but not alone. Labor unions must reduce their demands for increased wages.

"We advocate good wages provided they are related to productivity. If they're not, this will seriously inhibit our ability to compete for exports."

Farmers Organize To Fight Hydro

DUNCAN—Farmers here will fight to the Supreme Court if necessary to protect their rights in expropriation negotiations with B.C. Hydro.

B.C. Hydro is putting transmission lines throughout the province from the Peace River power project and hundreds of farmers will be affected by power lines dividing their property.

She said the B.C. Federation of Agriculture is keenly interested in the association's plans.

Walkout Ends At Crofton Mill

No details of the settlement were available. About 250 men stopped work to protest the dismissal of a pipefitter for non-production. Union shop steward Tom Williams said the man was told earlier by the supervisor to slow down because of lack of work.

Suspended Sentence For Doctor

A city doctor was given a suspended sentence Thursday after he was convicted of assault causing bodily harm.

Boudewyn is serving a two-month sentence for contempt of court for refusing to testify when the case came up Nov. 1.

Court was told Boudewyn went to the Evans residence on the evening of Oct. 8 and became involved in an argument with Dr. Evans.

Saanich police reported Dr. Evans said the argument got out of hand and he picked up a paring knife and slashed Boudewyn.

Dr. Evans, who had released his lawyer and was defending himself, called psychiatrist Dr. Charles Gregory as a witness.

Dr. Gregory, who said he has known Dr. Evans for 17 years, told the court "at the time (of the knifing) it was what you might call temporary insanity in that he literally could not control himself—quite literally."

But Magistrate Ostler ruled:

"He was not insane within the meaning of the Criminal Code. More force was used than was reasonably necessary and I must find the accused guilty."

Dr. Evans was placed on a good behavior bond for six months.

WHEN was this picture of Douglas Street taken? If you guessed late afternoon or early evening you failed our weather test. It was at exactly 10:15 this morning. Clouds laden with that famous "liquid British Columbia sunshine" blackened the city before proceeding on to the Mainland. But, don't feel too sad, there is more "sunshine" (not the dry type) predicted for the weekend.

Inflation Check Temporary Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp announced today he will raise taxes temporarily later this month.

He told a surprised House of Commons the "new temporary tax measures" will be part of an integrated program to check the inflation of prices and costs.

He gave no hint of what kind of taxes he will increase, or the amount of it. But there was immediate speculation that he would raise personal income taxes, rather than corporation or sales taxes.

The Commons was in an uproar after the announcement, even bringing John Diefenbaker to his feet for the first time since his defeat in September as Progressive Conservative leader.

Opposition parties demanded a full-dress debate immediately. They said Mr. Sharp's announcement was unsettling to financial markets and the country generally.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled out the request, saying it was apparent there would be a "sufficiently early opportunity" for the matter to be raised in the Commons.

MUST HOLD DOWN COSTS

Mr. Sharp said the government is determined to hold its budgetary expenditures next year to $10,300,000,000. This will be a 4½-per-cent increase from this year's spending, less than half the increase which has been made annually in recent years.

The $10,300,000,000 figure does not include the writing-off of Expo deficits, or any provision for the start of medical care insurance next July 1 in those provinces willing to go ahead.

Mr. Sharp said that "to the extent that medicare proceeds next year," the government will introduce further taxes to meet the cost, or make reductions in other government spending programs.

"We will not increase our borrowings to finance it," he said.

Mr. Sharp also said the government will restrict its demands on the capital market to less than $750,000,000 in the fiscal year starting next April 1. This year, it has had to raise $1,500,000,000 in bond and other borrowing, and buy running

ASSAULT ON POLICE ALLEGED AT SIT-IN

MONTREAL (CP) — Two McGill University students were charged with assaulting police who moved in early today to forcibly evict about 30 demonstrating students from the office of Principal H. Rocke Robertson.

The students had forced their way into the office late Thursday in a continuation of around-the-clock sit-in at the main university administration building.

The sit-in has been in progress since Tuesday night as a protest against a university administration threat to take action against three staffers of the McGill Daily, the student daily newspaper, for printing an obscene article.

U.S. TWIN TRIUMPH

By MARY BUBB

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (Reuters) U.S. spacemen stood a giant step closer to the moon today after the successful test of an unmanned Apollo spacecraft and a perfect lunar landing by Surveyor VI.

The unmanned Surveyor touched down gently on the moon's surface at 8:01 p.m. EST Thursday and within an hour was sending pictures of a cliff which scientists described as "the most rugged feature we have yet seen on the moon."

The Apollo command module, in which Americans will eventually ride to the moon, splashed down in the Pacific eight hours, 36 minutes and 54 seconds after being launched Thursday on the maiden flight of a towering Saturn rocket.

The Apollo flight "clearly demonstrates that this team had the competence to take on a manned lunar landing program . . . and also any other program this country believes is worthwhile," said Robert Seamans, deputy administrator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dr. Werner von Braun, father of the giant Saturn V rocket, said he did not know of a single incident during the space mission that would have endangered astronauts if they had been aboard.

Flight director Glenn Lunney said first information from the recovery ship U.S.S. Bennington showed that the heat shield of the spacecraft was subjected to temperatures even higher than the 4,500 degrees fahrenheit expected on its 25,000-mile-an-hour plunge back into earth.

Officials said the craft landed 18,500 yards from the target area, 600 miles northwest of Hawaii.

RUGGED LAND MASS

Pitted with craters and strewn with rocks, this area apparently has a different structure than the smoother landing areas already explored and experts must know if its surface would bear the weight of a manned craft.

TRIAL SHELVED

Bomb Blast Injures Promoter

TORONTO (CP) — Police today said Mayer Rush, badly injured in the explosion of a time bomb in his hotel room, was revived in hospital at 11 a.m. after his heart had stopped beating.

Rush, a business man and promoter, was to have appeared in court at 9 a.m. today on $100,000,000 stock fraud charge.

He was reported in poor condition just after noon after undergoing an hours-long operation. Explosion of the bomb beneath his bed in a sixth-floor room of the Sutton Place Hotel left him with extensive injuries to his chest and face.

Seconds after the blast sent glass and debris flying into downtown Bay Street, firemen responded to alarm bells and broke down the door to Rush's blazing room.

It was the second time in less than a year that mob-like tactics have been used on Rush, 45, an occasional stock promoter.

Last Feb. 20 he was beaten with a baseball bat and needed 80 stitches for cuts.

The time bomb was placed under his mattress just about where his head would fall in sleep, police said. It was set to go off at 3:42 a.m.

●

Arson and bomb squad detectives said it appeared to be an alarm clock type wrapped in masking tape with two feet of wires leading to a detonator cap.

Rush had been living at the hotel, one of the newest and poshest apartment-hotels in Toronto, for several months.

Rush and lawyer Joseph Williams, 43, were charged last June 21 following investigations by the Ontario Securities Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission in the U.S.

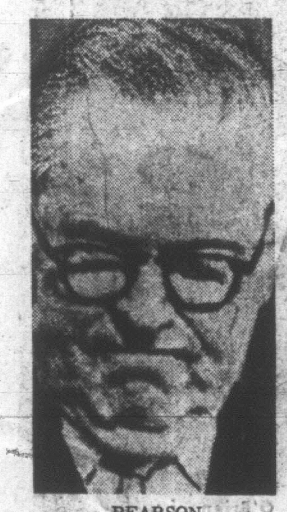

Manuel Britstone, 49, of Toronto also was charged as a preliminary hearing into the case came to a close.

Britstone pleaded guilty to the stock fraud charges and was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $10,000.

'Run Departments,' PM Tells Ministers

PEARSON . . . annoyed

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson has told would-be successors in his cabinet to stop their leadership campaigns as long as he is leader of the government, informed sources say.

The prime minister is reported to be greatly annoyed that some of his ministers have apparently been working harder for the Liberal leadership than in running their departments.

Sources said Thursday Mr. Pearson's instructions have resulted in quick cancellation of plans by Finance Minister Sharp, External Affairs Minister Martin and Transport Minister Hellyer to attend the Alberta Liberal convention in Edmonton this weekend.

Registrar-General Turner is understood to have cancelled out Wednesday before Mr. Pearson put his foot down on leadership campaigning by some of his cabinet ministers.

Mr. Pearson's crackdown is understood to apply particularly to Mr. Sharp, Mr. Hellyer and Mr. Martin.

HURRIED TALKS

There were reported to have been hurried talks between Mr. Sharp, Mr. Martin and Mr. Hellyer about what to do concerning their Edmonton invitation after Mr. Pearson's orders before all three cancelled their plans.

Last winter Mr. Sharp, Mr. Martin and Mr. Hellyer prepared to attend a Liberal convention in Quebec City—without invitations—to push their leadership aspirations.

They cancelled out when word of their plans reached Mr. Pearson.

The prime minister is said to feel that attention to government matters must prevail over any leadership activity by cabinet members.

A day or two after the Commons reconvened Sept. 25 he ticked off the cabinet in general for its poor attendance in the house.

EXPECTS 1968 RETIREMENT

No such announcement is expected until after the federal-provincial conference here in late January or early February —and only then if the conference goes well.

An informant said Mr. Pearson's instructions may backfire in that they might give the impression he is trying to hang on to power.

Others said, however, that Mr. Pearson had no intention of staying in office a moment longer than his party wishes.

Mr. Turner was in Vancouver Thursday. Mr. Hellyer left for Prince Edward Island soon after the cabinet meeting. Mr. Sharp and Mr. Martin did not comment on reports about the prime minister's action.

BORSTAL TO RESCUE

Lonely Parolee Finds a Friend

By KATHRINE THOMAS

The youth didn't know where to turn.

He had just served time at the New Haven Training School, a correctional institute for young offenders, for stealing.

Now he was afraid.

How could he face the problem of making his way anew in society?

He had to find a place to live, a job, and at the moment he didn't have enough money for a decent meal.

How could he hope to go "straight" when he had no one to whom he could turn for advice and encouragement?

Then he remembered a program given by the British Columbia Borstal Association to the young offenders at New Haven.

The speaker had explained the purpose of the association: to help parolees or those on probation find employment and living quarters, to lend funds to help ease the initial financial burden, to provide each boy with a sponsor who would encourage him in his new life and to give guidance counselling where needed.

All these worthwhile projects are made possible in part by public contribution to the united Appeal.

The association, since its inception in 1948, has helped more than 90 Greater Victoria boys.

In November 1966 the Dick Bell-Irving Home was opened to provide a kind of halfway house to help boys making the transition from a penal institute to the outside world.

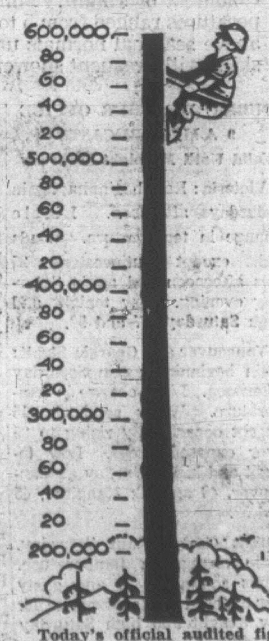

More than 60 lads passed through the program last year and 85 per cent successfully completed their paroles.

The estimated total local budget for the association during 1967 is $23,204. Last year the appeal raised $2,315 or .6 per cent of the total United Appeal drive.

Tax Boost Coming This Month

WHEN was this picture of Douglas Street taken? If you guessed late afternoon or early evening you failed our weather test. It was at exactly 10:15 this morning. Clouds laden with that famous "liquid British Columbia sunshine" blackened the city before proceeding on to the Mainland. But, don't feel too sad, there is more "sunshine" (not the dry type) predicted for the weekend.

Inflation Check Temporary Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp announced today he will raise taxes temporarily later this month.

He told a surprised House of Commons the "new temporary tax measures" will be part of an integrated program to check the inflation of prices and costs.

He gave no hint of what kind of taxes he will increase, or the amount of it. But there was immediate speculation that he would raise personal income taxes, rather than corporation or sales taxes.

The Commons was in an uproar after the announcement, even bringing John Diefenbaker to his feet for the first time since his defeat in September as Progressive Conservative leader.

Opposition parties demanded a full-dress debate immediately. They said Mr. Sharp's announcement was unsettling to financial markets and the country generally.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled out the request, saying it was apparent there would be a "sufficiently early opportunity" for the matter to be raised in the Commons.

MUST HOLD DOWN COSTS

Mr. Sharp said the government is determined to hold its budgetary expenditures next year to $10,300,000,000. This will be a 4½-per-cent increase from this year's spending, less than half the increase which has been made annually in recent years.

The $10,300,000,000 figure does not include the writing-off of Expo deficits, or any provision for the start of medical care insurance next July 1 in those provinces willing to go ahead.

Mr. Sharp said that "to the extent that medicare proceeds next year," the government will introduce further taxes to meet the cost, or make reductions in other government spending programs.

"We will not increase our borrowings to finance it," he said.

Mr. Sharp also said the government will restrict its demands on the capital market to less than $750,000,000 in the fiscal year starting next April 1. This year, it has had to raise $1,500,000,000 in bond and other borrowing, and buy running

Bomb Blast Injures Promoter

TORONTO (CP) — Police today said Mayer Rush, badly injured in the explosion of a time bomb in his hotel room, was revived in hospital at 11 a.m. after his heart had stopped beating.

Rush, a business man and promoter, was to have appeared in court at 9 a.m. today on $100,000,000 stock fraud charge.

He was reported in poor condition just after noon after undergoing an hours-long operation. Explosion of the bomb beneath his bed in a sixth-floor room of the Sutton Place Hotel left him with extensive injuries to his chest and face.

Seconds after the blast sent glass and debris flying into downtown Bay Street, firemen responded to alarm bells and broke down the door to Rush's blazing room.

It was the second time in less than a year that mob-like tactics have been used on Rush, 45, an occasional stock promoter.

Last Feb. 20 he was beaten with a baseball bat and needed 80 stitches for cuts.

The time bomb was placed under his mattress just about where his head would fall in sleep, police said. It was set to go off at 3:42 a.m.

●

Arson and bomb squad detectives said it appeared to be an alarm clock type wrapped in masking tape with two feet of wires leading to a detonator cap.

Rush had been living at the hotel, one of the newest and poshest apartment-hotels in Toronto, for several months.

Rush and lawyer Joseph Williams, 43, were charged last June 21 following investigations by the Ontario Securities Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission in the U.S.

Manuel Britstone, 49, of Toronto also was charged as a preliminary hearing into the case came to a close.

Britstone pleaded guilty to the stock fraud charges and was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $10,000.

The charges were laid in connection with activities in British Overseas Mutual Funds Corp. and Darien Co. S.A.

ASSAULT ON POLICE ALLEGED AT SIT-IN

MONTREAL (CP) — Two McGill University students were charged with assaulting police who moved in early today to forcibly evict about 30 demonstrating students from the office of Principal H. Rocke Robertson.

The students had forced their way into the office late Thursday in a continuation of around-the-clock sit-in at the main university administration building.

The sit-in has been in progress since Tuesday night as a protest against a university administration threat to take action against three staffers of the McGill Daily, the student daily newspaper, for printing an obscene article.

U.S. TWIN TRIUMPH

By MARY BUBB

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (Reuters) U.S. spacemen stood a giant step closer to the moon today after the successful test of an unmanned Apollo spacecraft and a perfect lunar landing by Surveyor VI.

The unmanned Surveyor touched down gently on the moon's surface at 8:01 p.m. EST Thursday and within an hour was sending pictures of a cliff which scientists described as "the most rugged feature we have yet seen on the moon."

The Apollo command module, in which Americans will eventually ride to the moon, splashed down in the Pacific eight hours, 36 minutes and 54 seconds after being launched Thursday on the maiden flight of a towering Saturn rocket.

The Apollo flight "clearly demonstrates that this team had the competence to take on a manned lunar landing program . . . and also any other program this country believes is worthwhile," said Robert Seamans, deputy administrator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dr. Werner von Braun, father of the giant Saturn V rocket, said he did not know of a single incident during the space mission that would have endangered astronauts if they had been aboard.

Flight director Glenn Lunney said first information from the recovery ship U.S.S. Bennington showed that the heat shield of the spacecraft was subjected to temperatures even higher than the 4,500 degrees fahrenheit expected on its 25,000-mile-an-hour plunge back into earth.

Officials said the craft landed 18,500 yards from the target area, 600 miles northwest of Hawaii.

RUGGED LAND MASS

Pitted with craters and strewn with rocks, this area apparently has a different structure than the smoother landing areas already explored and experts must know if its surface would bear the weight of a manned craft.

FAMILIAR RUMBLE

Dief Thunders Over Tax Plan

Silent since he lost the Conservative leadership in September, John Diefenbaker rose in the Commons after an unprecedented announcement by the government that will increase taxes later this month.

"The conduct of the government," he said, "would make a speechless member rise in his place."

He could remember no instance anywhere of a government announcing a tax increase during stock-market hours and without giving details.

Speaking to a Conservative motion for an emergency debate on Finance Minister Sharp's statement, Mr. Diefenbaker said the issue could not be left without immediate discussion.

"Something has occurred in the last few hours that has brought the government to its senses, but it refuses to say what.

"Silence now can only lead to uncertainty the like of which has not been seen in this country."

Glaring at a sober Liberal front bench that had applauded him as he stood to speak, Mr. Diefenbaker demanded: "Why don't you come clean? Why don't you give the facts?"

"There must be a debate today or the results will be damaging to the country to a degree unprecedented in proportion."

A wait of four or five days to hear details of Mr. Sharp's tax proposals would put Canada into turmoil, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Outside the Commons, television cameras focused on Mr. Diefenbaker and 13 reporters surrounded him. A few yards away two reporters chatted with his successor, Robert L. Stanfield.

"It's another Black Friday such as we had in 1956—the government running roughshod," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Text of Statement By Finance Minister

I should like to make a brief statement concerning the fiscal position of the government which I will be discussing with the finance ministers of the provinces next week.

The government has decided to introduce new fiscal measures including temporary tax measures later this month. The government proposes that the arrangements for introducing and debating these be the subject of consultation through the usual channels.

These tax measures will be part of an integrated program to chek the inflation of prices and costs now occurring in Canada, and to reduce excessive pressures on our capital markets. Higher taxes in the coming year will be a better and fairer means of covering our expenditures than attempting to increase our borrowings to levels that could only be reached by inflationary methods that would increase prices further. Prices and costs are rising at rates which clearly require some restraint through fiscal policy as well as by other means.

When our proposed tax increases are combined with restrictions on government spending programs, also to be announced later this month, and substantial reductions in our lending programs, the government will be able to hold its over-all net cash requirements and its consequent demands on the capital market to less than $750,000,000 in the next fiscal year, apart from unforeseen changes in our exchange reserves. This is less than half our cash requirements this year. The government has also decided that budgetary expenditures next year, apart from medicare and apart from the writing off in our accounts of Expo deficits, will be held to $10,300,000,000.

This means that we will limit the increase in expenditures to about 4 per cent between this year and next, a rate of increase less than half of those of recent years. To the extent that medicare proceeds next year, we will as already indicated introduce further taxes to meet the costs or make offsetting reductions in existing expenditure programs. We will not increase our borrowings to finance it.

down the government's cash balances.

The finance minister was peppered with opposition questions, asking why he made the announcement while financial markets were open. He said the government wanted to make clear its intentions and objectives before the federal-provincial meeting of finance ministers here Nov. 16.

Outside the House, an informant said Mr. Sharp did not believe his announcement would affect stock markets.

It was also learned the minister's statement was carefully examined by the whole cabinet Thursday and again Friday morning before the Commons met. But neither the minister nor the cabinet decided what taxes are to be raised, or by how much.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said Mr. Sharp's statement gave emphasis to the "very serious situation" in which the country found itself.

The proposed tax increase bore out the fear of opposition MPs and financial writers.

Mr. Lambert said the finance minister should have announced that a budget would be brought down at a certain date. Mr. Sharp asked him whether it would not be preferable to make such announcement after discussion among the House leaders.

HITS SHARP'S ACTION

The request for an emergency Commons debate on the development was moved by Michael Starr, interim Opposition leader. He said the minister's action in making the statement while the stock markets were open and without giving details could cause chaos.

"Is it that the government has got this country into bankruptcy?" he asked.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who has sat silent in the House ever since losing the Conservative leadership, said the government's action would "make a speechless member rise."

He accused the government of going from blunder to blunder.

Mr. Starr's motion was immediately seconded by New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas, who said the finance minister "has either said too much or too little."

The country is entitled to "a much fuller explanation," Mr. Douglas said.

The proposal also won Social Credit support. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke) said:

"The business before the House cannot compare in importance with the financial crisis suggested by the minister this morning."

DEBATE IMPLICIT

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste-Chapleau) said it is common knowledge that there is "nothing more permanent than temporary tax increases."

Solicitor-General Pennell said that an opportunity for debate is "clearly implicit" in Mr. Sharp's statement that the government intends to introduce measures later this month.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) immediately contested Mr. Pennell's contention. Mr. Knowles said the finance minister has actually "made it clear that he does not want the House, with Mr. Speaker in the chair, to debate this at all."

The finance minister's hope is that since the committee on ways and means is already in session, the matter will stay there, Mr. Knowles claimed.

Gilles Gregoire (Ind—Lapointe) said the prime minister requested all cabinet ministers to stay in Ottawa this weekend and this illustrated the urgency of the situation.

"What can we expect over the weekend?" the separatist Quebec MP asked. "The cabinet is going to sit over the weekend. Obviously some catastrophe is impending."

DETAILS LATER

To repeated questions by Mr. Douglas, the finance minister would only say he planned to announce details of the tax changes "later this month."

However, if House leaders of the opposition parties preferred to have the measures introduced by means of a full budget debate, he was agreeable.

The government was reluctant to propose this course "in view of other urgent business before the House. . . ." Opposition jeers drowned him out at this point.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary North) asked whether the minister would announce the results of the most recent Canada savings bond drive. Mr. Sharp said all figures are not yet available.

He said he planned to give a "complete account of the financial position of the government" when he introduces the tax measures.

Another indirect purpose behind his statement was to make mortgage money available for prospective home buyers at lower interest rates.

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Friday the government has further shaken the confidence of Canadians.

He made the comment to reporters after Finance Minister Sharp's announcement that taxes will be raised by an unspecified amount.

Mr. Stanfield said means must be taken to meet inflation but that it is "most regrettable to do this at the cost of the taxpayer."

Mr. Stanfield said the most charitable thing which could be said for the government was that it had allowed things "to get to this stage."

Pennell Flexible on Death Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Pennell pleaded with MPs Thursday to abolish at least partially the death penalty and authorize its use only for murderers of prison guards and police officers for a five-year trial period.

He directed a special plea to those who would do away with hanging in all cases:

"I believe that this bill will only be defeated in principle if there is an unhappy coalition between those who feel that the bill has not gone far enough and those who feel that it has gone too far."

He spoke as the Commons opened debate on his bill to limit the death penalty. Voting on the measure is to be free of party lines.

CONSIDER CHANGES

After second reading—approval in principle—Mr. Pennell said he would listen with "great interest and deep respect" to any amendments that might be moved.

An attentive Commons listened to 10 speeches—five favoring the bill, four against it and one undecided. The debate continues today with Prime Minister Pearson expected to be one of the speakers.

"There is an ancient expression . . . that half a loaf is better than no bread," said the Toronto lawyer. "It might be said by those who favor abolition that the present bill provides for 99-100 of the loaf and that it would be wrong to reject it."

Those who spoke against the bill laid heavy emphasis on the fact that Parliament, only 18 months ago, voted to retain hanging for all convicted murderers.

They also drew attention to the 27 commutations ordered by the cabinet since the Liberals took office in 1963. There have been no hangings in Canada since 1962 and so the country in effect already had done away with the death penalty, they argued.

Two speakers called on the cabinet to obey the will of Parliament and to hang those sentenced by the courts.

Mr. Pennell pointed too results of a study by a British royal commission that led to a U.S. bill ending hanging for a trial period.

He said most murderers are either insane, in the throes of violent passion or emotion or else calculating planners. In each case, the death penalty would not be a deterrent.

He quoted the British case of Timothy Evans, executed in 1950 for a killing later found to be the work of a prosecution witness, to point out possible miscarriages of justice.

He promised there would be no automatic parole of convicts given life imprisonment in lieu of the death penalty.

SOCIETY'S GUILLOTINE

Mr. Matheson said hanging is "cowardly" and while the bill is not perfect, it was a step in the right direction.

Mr. Stafford said society could be protected just as well by imposing life sentences on convicted murderers.

Philatelist Sought

BURNABY (CP)—RCMP are looking for the owner of an 1873 three-cent Canadian stamp, valued at $30. It was turned over to them by a stamp dealer who said three girls asked him to value it, then fled when he said he would have to check with police to see if it was stolen.

Not Quite Perfect

EDMONTON (CP)—A police cruiser, looking for a perfect driver to receive the Edmonton safety council's daily $10 award, pulled a car to the curb and congratulated the woman behind the wheel.

The driver burst into tears.

She was unable to produce a licence. In fact, she had never taken a driver's test.

The $10 went to another motorist.

A while ago I happened to note here that our faithful old plywood 13-footer draws the occasional snicker from pilots of flossier craft. Quick as a weasel, a guy in the boat - purveying business sat down to his typewriter and banged out a letter.

"In the boat business," he writes in part, "except for museum purposes, vintage boats have not increased in value on the market as have automobiles.

"Be that as it may, we felt we could not lose this opportunity to suggest that we have many craft of all sizes, in both power and sail, and would take great pleasure in helping you confront your friends with something as modern as tomorrow and convenient as today, for your frequent fishing expeditions."

Well, L.M., yours is a kind and thoughtful letter, and I don't mind telling you that it far outclasses the usual sales pitch. But I am not sure that I would be happy in something modern as tomorrow and convenient as today.

My boat and I, it happens, have been friends so long that we are on easy terms with each other. It knows I will never purposely ask more than it can accomplish, and I know that if we happen to misjudge the weather, it will bring me home.

Further, those convenient as today boats are too darn self-sufficient. They never need an overhaul, a fact that would cheat me of a spring rite that I cherish. There's something therapeutic about painting a well-sanded hull, with a curse fo each fly that mars the glistening finish.

Sooner or later, my veteran hull will quietly and apologetically dissolve under me, and if we don't end our fishing days together, I'll no doubt buy another boat.

But not one of those modern as tomorrow rigs. After all, who knows what shape tomorrow may take?

Granted that amateur meddling is hard for experts to take, I still wish that the extremely able curriculum revision committee had chosen to protest Education Minister Peterson's interference with one of their book choices by less sudden-death means than a group resignation.

Much better, I think to accept a silly ruling under protest, and continue to apply their special skills to the job of seeing that the student gets as close to full measure as they are permitted to give him.

The only echo of their academic hari-kari to reach my ears has been a triumphing call from a woman of baboon mentality who God-blessed the minister: a reaction which I'm sure was far from the committee's intent.

It has occurred to me more than once that Mr. Peterson could best serve education by immersing himself completely in his labor portfolio. But because the stream of knowledge runs muddy in spots, does it make sense to break the jug?

When dark falls early and lasts long, a traffic hazard that persists through all seasons becomes much more acute. This is the lightless bicycle; and though I have warned of it more than once here, it needs emphasizing again.

Typically, the bike that carries no light also carries no rear-fender reflector, or one so dirty that it is useless.

I doubt there's a driver who hasn't had at least one close miss in which only fast reflexes spared him from collision with one of these renegade bikes.

Unless the young rider happens to be wearing at least a scrap of light-colored clothing, he and his steed are all but invisible after dark. He rides in constant danger.

That's it, except to offer an unabashed plug for the Art Linklater secret-of-life special, "Where Did You Come From?" CJVI will repeat this 20-minute record at 11:10 a.m. Saturday and 11:05 a.m. Sunday for children over five and their parents. It's a splendid treatment of an oft-muffed subject.

Whole New Breed Of Teacher's Pet Enters Classroom

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Many routine time-consuming jobs—handing out equipment, copying charts, drawing maps on the blackboard—are being done not by teachers but by a teacher's aide.

The project is still on an experimental basis in Victoria although it has already proved highly successful throughout the United States.

"We do no actual teaching or disciplining," says Mrs. Duncan. "Everything we do and all our ideas are initiated by the teacher.

"The role of the aide is to assist with routine, clerical jobs, relieving the teacher of some of the more mechanical tasks.

"It's very desirable to have teachers' aides in the schools," says Lake Hill principal David Jones. "It gives the teacher more opportunity to plan, teach, evaluate, diagnose, and prescribe remedial measures."

A typical day for Mrs. Duncan may include preparing stencils, printing cardboard charts, tabulating marks, assisting in art classes and helping the kindergarten teacher with her records.

She does no secretarial work or typing.

Qualifications required for a teacher's aide? Grade 12, some experience managing groups such as the boy scouts or girl guides and any particular talents, artistic or musical.

275 APPLICATIONS

A committee of five principals considered 275 applications for the positions, choosing 20 to attend a special three-day orientation program before picking the final seven.

Mrs. Duncan, a mother of four, says she applied because "I like working with children."

"I'm also very fond of all types of handicrafts—painting, ceramics, sewing. When I'm asked to help with anything, it's fun. I enjoy it!"

TRIAL, ERROR

Mr. Jones feels that as time goes on many of Mrs. Duncan's responsibilities will expand. "It's still in the experimental stages; there's a lot of trial and error involved."

The seven teaching aides are now being evaluated by the school board. Questionnaires have been distributed asking teachers' opinions of the innovation.

"As I understand it, the policy is to extend the number of aides next year," says Mr. Jones. "This would be welcomed by all."

It certainly seems so. Mrs. Duncan is in great demand. As she says, "Ever since I got here, there hasn't been a spare moment."

Year's Probation For Giving Liquor To 13-Year-Old

His companion was remanded for another month to await sentence.

In placing Edward Thomas, 2314 Bellamy, on a $250 bond he said he felt there was no ulterior motive in giving the boy liquor but it was a serious offence.

They were charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Work to Start On Test Station

Work will start immediately on the $325,000 motor-vehicle testing station in the Lakehill district of Saanich, the provincial public works department said today.

Contract for the work has been awarded to Burns and Dutton Construction (1962) of Richmond.

Gains, Losses in New Library Proposal

Vancouver Island Regional Library has proposed a new method of assessing library costs for its book services.

The board is studying a plan to assess costs on property assessment rather than on a per capita basis.

North Saanich, Sidney, Sooke School district, as well as most other Vancouver Island communities and school districts, would be affected.

The proposed change, he said, was not designed to increase the budget for the purchase of new books. It would remain the same as last year—$100,000.

The changes in budget costs for communities in the capital region are as follows:

Sooke school (64) district will pay $33,524 instead of $39,838. This represents a mill rate of 1.019 as compared to 1.21.

In North Saanich the library budget will rise from $7,654 to $9,427, while Sidney's will drop from $8,379 to $6,692.

Assessments are higher in North Saanich than in Sidney, though the latter has actually a larger population.

New Zone Due For Saanich Light Industry

'Good Deal More' Than 40 Acres

While planning is still in the tentative stages, municipal planner Tom Loney said today he thinks the zone will be "a good deal more" than 40 acres.

"We may do this in stages so while the eventual plan would show a fairly large acreage it will be in fairly digestible bites as we go along," he said.

"We will be proposing a light industrial area of some sort. We hoped to have this to council before this but we have been tied up. I can't tell you at the moment the exact area or too much about it."

Already approved by council is a $300,000 warehouse and retail store for the T. Eaton Company department store just south of the Royal Oak Shopping Centre.

Another company, Simpsons-Sears, has applied for rezoning on 10 acres to the south, opposite Douglas Golfland between Vanalman, Glanford and Douglas, for a wholesale, retail warehousing distribution centre. This is expected to be considered by council Nov. 20.

NEXT MEETING

"The Simpsons-Sears type of use would probably fit into it (light industrial zone) although this is something we really can't comment on too much until it gets to council which should be at the next meeting," said Mr. Loney.

There are only two light industrial zones in Saanich—along Douglas Street near the city boundary and the Quadra-McKenzie area in the Lake Hill district.

The Royal Oak plan, said Mr. Loney, should be ready by late spring.

Asked if Saanich might follow other municipalities into land ownership of commercial zones, Mr. Loney said it might be a combination of public and private ownership.

"We have not got to the point of deciding," he said. "We are still looking at federal legislation, the possibility of the municipality buying land. We have not examined all the possiblities. I wouldn't rule out the possibility."

Meeting Set On Kuper Is. Fund Surplus

A plan to provide awards to Indian students from the surplus of the Kuper Island Indian Band Expo Fund will be presented at a meeting of trustees and donors, this month.

Trustees of the fund announced today that the surplus is $5,800.

They propose to make an outright donation of between $800 and $900 to the Kuper Island Band for their exclusive use and to invest the balance and from the interest make school awards to Grade 7 Indian students from Victoria to Nanaimo.

Object of the meeting at S. J. Willis School at 8 p.m. Nov. 20, is to get approval of donors for the proposal.

New Clearing House Proposed on Rentals

'Big Help' To Welfare Department

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Victoria Real Estate Board is considering opening a clearing house to list all available low - rental housing in the city.

The proposal, already approved in principle by members of the executive, goes before the property management board next Tuesday.

If it passes that hurdle the Real Estate Board will make itself responsible for listing low rental housing as it comes on the market and informing the Victoria city welfare department of its availability.

The board agreed to look into the possibility of establishing the clearing house two weeks ago after Mayor Hugh Stephen was faced with the problem of locating accommodation for a mother and six children.

PUBLIC SERVICE

"I approached the president of the board, Gordon Fawcett, at the time and he was tremendously helpful and enthusiastic," the mayor said. "If they go ahead with the project it will be a fine public service to the community."

Mayor Stephen said the establishment of the clearing house would relieve one of the greatest headaches of welfare workers who are finding it increasingly difficult to find accommodation for low income families.

Ald. Ian Stewart, who several times in the past has expressed concern over the growing housing problem in Victoria, termed the proposal "excellent, a realistic step to restore the balance in this area.

"I sincerely hope the community will make use of the service if and when it is set up," he said.

"We look forward in the New Year to more housing starts to meet the demands. However, it is essential for the individual to realize that no level of government can solve this problem without the full co-operation of the private sector of the community."

SHORT PASSAGE away from the Pacific Ocean, Victoria's Ogden Point docks at left are near the limit of maximum usefulness for lumber shipping. Persons concerned with the problem of keeping and augmenting this traffic suggest $¼ million in improvements could restore the port to efficient usefulness for years to come. Inclusion of VMD wharves at right could make for integrated facility with a total of seven deepsea berths.

Lumber Preloading Needed at Dockside

By AB KENT
Times Business Editor

A leading shipper today said improvements at Ogden Point docks could make it the second-ranking seaport on Canada's Pacific Coast.

Only the port of Vancouver, with multiple terminal facilities, has such easy access for deepsea vessels combined with rail and truck access, dockside storage sheds and grain elevators.

Western Lumber Carriers Ltd., a principal user of Ogden Point docks, would use the port indefinitely if some improvements are carried out, said company manager Hector Campbell.

At present, there is a tendency away from Ogden Point as a lumber shipping facility in favor of more commodious upisland lumber assembly areas.

ONE OF BEST

It is capable of berthing five vessels at a time, has rail siding and truck access to dockside, may handle lumber from the dock or from scows; general cargo and grain, and is under a single control.

With improvements to enable pre-loading of lumber at the dockside, Ogden Point would continue to be used by Western Lumber "indefinitely. There is no question," Mr. Campbell said.

The port is known for quick turn-around of ships through efficient handling of cargoes by longshoremen.

Its chief drawback as far as Western Lumber is concerned is the lack of assembly space under cargo slings.

Sheds on "A" pier are generally sound and large enough to accommodate considerable general cargo, the volume of which has declined in recent years. Mr. Campbell feels there is no reason why this type of trade could not be restored.

These suggestions are expected to be made to Canadian National Railways, operator of the government-owned wharves, when a Victoria Chamber of Commerce delegation meets officials in Vancouver soon.

It is estimated unofficially that $250,000 spent on the docks would make them fully acceptable to both ship owners and shippers as a successful, modern deep-sea port for lumber handling and general purposes.

But at the moment, Mr. Campbell points out, it is impossible to place lumber so that it can be picked up directly by the ships that call.

Additional bulk storage area is not needed as badly as dockside storage, but the prospect of increasing both is suggested as a future use for premises soon to be vacated by Victoria Machinery Depot, adjacent to Ogden Point.

The former Rithet docks there would provide two more deepsea berths, and with demolition of sheds the desired dockside space for pre-loading would be created.

Access to the Rithet docks is easy, both from land and sea. Prior to the Second World War the trans-Pacific Empress fleet docked there without the aid of tugboats.

Police Vehicle In Collision

Gerald R. Hutchinson, 4892 Royal Oak, was treated for shock at Royal Jubilee Hospital after a car accident at Bay and Cedar Hill Road Thursday evening.

His car was involved in a crash with a police car driven by Const. Gerald R. Cox, of the city police department, 4010 Valley View Drive, who was uninjured.

Youth Made 100 Indecent Phone Calls

Psychiatric treatment today was recommended but not ordered by Magistrate William Ostler in suspending sentence on a 19-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to making indecent phone calls.

Kenneth George Sutton, 1535 Prospect Place, admitted making more than 100 such calls. He was charged on eight counts.

Magistrate Ostler ordering probation for two years on a $500 bond, called the action "contemptible" and said the matter was one to cause public indignation.

He said there are many complaints about such calls but cases rarely come to court.

"A deterrent is needed but this case calls for treatment."

Co-Op Manager Leaving Post

Mr. Rumley, who has served the growers co-operative for three years, will join the sales department of McDonald Bakery.

1,400 Pounds of Wire, Tubing Stolen

More than 1,400 pounds of copper wire and tubing was stolen overnight when thieves forced their way into Northern Junk premises on Tyee Road.

Loss is estimated at $400.

The padlock on the main gate was forced then a small window broken to gain access to the office.

One full 45-gallon drum of burned copper armature wire was taken along with another drum three quarters full.

Total weight was 1,400 pounds.

Also missing is between 45 and 50 pounds of three-eighths copper tubing cut into small lengths.

Thieves were busy elsewhere in the area.

A man smashed the window of Dr. J. H. Morrison's car, parked outside St. Joseph's Hospital, and stole a bag containing sedatives and aspirin. Value of the bag and contents was $125.

Former MP Wins New Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal today ordered a new trial for Yvon Dupuis, former member of Parliament, who was convicted 18 months ago of influence-peddling in a move by a group to get a racetrack established in Quebec.

Convicted Man Loses Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP)—Herbert Henry Myers, 19, lost his appeal in British Columbia Court of Appeal today against a capital murder conviction.

Myers was convicted in June of shooting a taxi driver, James William Johnson, 45, near Cache Creek, 50 miles west of Kamloops.

The original trial, in Prince George, was told Myers admitted to a police officer that he shot and robbed Johnson, and wounded another taxi driver, all within 24 hours in January.

Myers is scheduled to be hanged January 23.

Ottawa Plans New Borrowing

OTTAWA (CP)—The government will seek $350,000,000 in new borrowing next Tuesday, Finance Minister Sharp announced in a statement today.

The government will offer $250,000,000 in long-term bonds and $100,000,000 in special 392-day treasury bills.

WHEN was this picture of Douglas Street taken? If you guessed late afternoon or early evening you failed our weather test. It was at exactly 10:15 this morning. Clouds laden with that famous "liquid British Columbia sunshine" blackened the city before proceeding on to the Mainland. But, don't feel too sad, there is more "sunshine" (not the dry type) predicted late Saturday.

Boost Coming This Month

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp announced today he will raise taxes temporarily later this month.

He told a surprised House of Commons the "new temporary tax measures" will be part of an integrated program to check the inflation of prices and costs.

He gave no hint of what kind of taxes he will increase, or the amount of it. But there was immediate speculation that he would raise personal income taxes, rather than corporation or sales taxes.

The Commons was in an uproar after the announcement, even bringing John Diefenbaker to his feet for the first time since his defeat in September as Progressive Conservative leader.

Opposition parties demanded a full-dress debate immediately. They said Mr. Sharp's announcement was unsettling to financial markets and the country generally.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled out the request, saying it was apparent there would be a "sufficiently early opportunity" for the matter to be raised in the Commons.

MUST HOLD DOWN COSTS

Mr. Sharp said the government is determined to hold its budgetary expenditures next year to $10,300,000,000. This will be a 4½-per-cent increase from this year's spending, less than half the increase which has been made annually in recent years.

The $10,300,000,000 figure does not include the writing-off of Expo deficits, or any provision for the start of medical care insurance next July 1 in those provinces willing to go ahead.

Mr. Sharp said that "to the extent that medicare proceeds next year," the government will introduce further taxes to meet the cost, or make reductions in other government spending programs.

"We will not increase our borrowings to finance it," he said.

Mr. Sharp also said the government will restrict its demands on the capital market to less than $750,000,000 in the fiscal year starting next April 1. This year, it has had to raise $1,500,000,000 in bond and other borrowing, and buy running

Bomb Blast Injures Promoter

TORONTO (CP) — Police today said Mayer Rush, badly injured in the explosion of a time bomb in his hotel room, was revived in hospital at 11 a.m. after his heart had stopped beating.

Rush, a business man and promoter, was to have appeared in court at 9 a.m. today on $100,000,000 stock fraud charge.

He was reported in poor condition just after noon after undergoing an hours-long operation. Explosion of the bomb beneath his bed in a sixth-floor room of the Sutton Place Hotel left him with extensive injuries to his chest and face.

Seconds after the blast sent glass and debris flying on to downtown Bay Street, firemen responded to alarm bells and broke down the door to Rush's blazing room.

It was the second time in less than a year that mob-like tactics have been used on Rush, 45, an occasional stock promoter.

Last Feb. 20 he was beaten with a baseball bat and needed 80 stitches for cuts.

The time bomb was placed under his mattress just about where his head would fall in sleep, police said. It was set to go off at 3:42 a.m.

●

Arson and bomb squad detectives said it appeared to be an alarm clock type wrapped in masking tape with two feet of wires leading to a detonator cap.

Rush had been living at the hotel, one of the newest and poshest apartment-hotels in Toronto, for several months.

Rush and lawyer Joseph Williams, 43, were charged last June 21 following investigations by the Ontario Securities Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission in the U.S.

Space Program Gets Big Lift

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (Reuters) U.S. spacemen stood a giant step closer to the moon today after the successful test of an unmanned Apollo spacecraft and a perfect lunar landing by Surveyor VI.

The unmanned Surveyor touched down gently on the moon's surface at 8:01 p.m. EST Thursday and within an hour was sending pictures of a cliff which scientists described as "the most rugged feature we have yet seen on the moon."

The Apollo command module, in which Americans will eventually ride to the moon, splashed down in the Pacific eight hours, 36 minutes and 54 seconds after being launched Thursday on the maiden flight of a towering Saturn rocket.

The Apollo flight "clearly demonstrates that this team had the competence to take on a manned lunar landing program . . . and also any other program this country believes is worthwhile," said Robert Seamans, deputy administrator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dr. Werner von Braun, father of the giant Saturn V rocket, said he did not know of a single incident during the space mission that would have endangered astronauts if they had been aboard.

Flight director Glenn Lunney said first information from the recovery ship U.S.S. Bennington showed that the heat shield of the spacecraft was subjected to temperatures even higher than the 4,500 degrees fahrenheit expected on its 25,000-mile-an-hour plunge back into earth.

Officials said the craft landed 18,500 yards from the target area, 600 miles northwest of Hawaii.

RUGGED LAND MASS

Pitted with craters and strewn with rocks, this area apparently has a different structure than the smoother landing areas already explored and experts must know if its surface would bear the weight of a manned craft.

LEADERSHIP BIDS HALTED

'Run Departments,' PM Tells Ministers

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson has told would-be successors in his cabinet to stop their leadership campaigns as long as he is leader of the government, informed sources say.

The prime minister is reported to be greatly annoyed that some of his ministers have apparently been working harder for the Liberal leadership than in running their departments.

Sources said Thursday Mr. Pearson's instructions have resulted in quick cancellation of plans by Finance Minister Sharp, External Affairs Minister Martin and Transport Minister Hellyer to attend the Alberta Liberal convention in Edmonton this weekend.

Registrar-General Turner is understood to have cancelled out Wednesday before Mr. Pearson put his foot down on leadership campaigning by some of his cabinet ministers.

Mr. Pearson's crackdown is understood to apply particularly to Mr. Sharp, Mr. Hellyer and Mr. Martin.

There were reported to have been hurried talks between Mr. Sharp, Mr. Martin and Mr. Hellyer about what to do concerning their Edmonton invitation after Mr. Pearson's orders before all three cancelled their plans.

The only Alberta Liberal MP is H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat) who deserted the Social Credit party in September.

Last winter Mr. Sharp, Mr. Martin and Mr. Hellyer prepared to attend a Liberal convention in Quebec City—without invitations—to push their leadership aspirations.

The prime minister is said to feel that attention to government matters must prevail over any leadership activity by cabinet members.

A day or two after the Commons reconvened Sept. 25 he ticked off the cabinet in general for its poor attendance in the house.

EXPECTS 1968 RETIREMENT

No such announcement is expected until after the federal-provincial conference here in late January or early February —and only then if the conference goes well.

An informant said Mr. Pearson's instructions may backfire in that they might give the impression he is trying to hang on to power.

Others said, however, that Mr. Pearson had no intention of staying in office a moment longer than his party wishes.

Mr. Turner was in Vancouver Thursday. Mr. Hellyer left for Prince Edward Island soon after the cabinet meeting. Mr. Sharp and Mr. Martin did not comment on reports about the prime minister's action.

BORSTAL TO RESCUE

Lonely Parolee Finds a Friend

By KATHRINE THOMAS

The youth didn't know where to turn.

He had just served time at the New Haven Training School, a correctional institute for young offenders, for stealing.

Now he was afraid.

How could he face the problem of making his way anew in society?

He had to find a place to live, a job, and at the moment he didn't have enough money for a decent meal.

How could he hope to go "straight" when he had no one to whom he could turn for advice and encouragement?

Then he remembered a program given by the British Columbia Borstal Association to the young offenders at New Haven.

The speaker had explained the purpose of the association: to help parolees or those on probation find employment and living quarters, to lend funds to help ease the initial financial burden, to provide each boy with a sponsor who would encourage him in his new life and to give guidance counselling where needed.

All these worthwhile projects are made possible in part by public contribution to the united Appeal.

The association, since its inception in 1948, has helped more than 90 Greater Victoria boys.

In November 1966 the Dick Bell-Irving Home was opened to provide a kind of halfway house to help boys making the transition from a penal institute to the outside world.

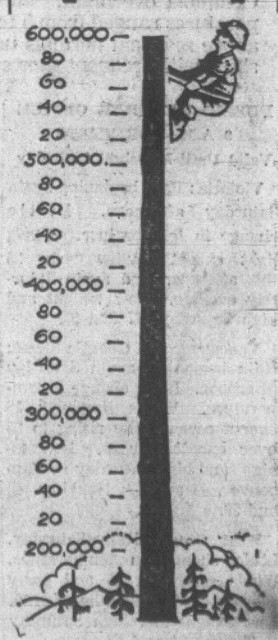

More than 60 lads passed through the program last year and 85 per cent successfully completed their paroles.

The estimated total local budget for the association during 1967 is $23,204. Last year the appeal raised $2,315 or .6 per cent of the total United Appeal drive.

Put Him Up On Top

Today's official audited figures for the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal stood at $511,050, or about 85 per cent of the appeal target of $600,000.

FAMILIAR RUMBLE

Dief Thunders Over Tax Plan

Silent since he lost the Conservative leadership in September, John Diefenbaker rose in the Commons after an unprecedented announcement by the government that will increase taxes later this month.

"The conduct of the government," he said, "would make a speechless member rise in his place."

He could remember no instance anywhere of a government announcing a tax increase during stock-market hours and without giving details.

Speaking to a Conservative motion for an emergency debate on Finance Minister Sharp's statement, Mr. Diefenbaker said the issue could not be left without immediate discussion.

"Something has occurred in the last few hours that has brought the government to its senses, but it refuses to say what.

"Silence now can only lead to uncertainty the like of which has not been seen in this country."

Glaring at a sober Liberal front bench that had applauded him as he stood to speak, Mr. Diefenbaker demanded: "Why don't you come clean? Why don't you give the facts?"

"There must be a debate today or the results will be damaging to the country to a degree unprecedented in proportion."

A wait of four or five days to hear details of Mr. Sharp's tax proposals would put Canada into turmoil, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Outside the Commons, television cameras focused on Mr. Diefenbaker and 13 reporters surrounded him. A few yards away two reporters chatted with his successor, Robert L. Stanfield.

"It's another Black Friday such as we had in 1956—the government running roughshod," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

. . . TAXES

down the government's cash balances.

The finance minister was peppered with opposition questions, asking why he made the announcement while financial markets were open. He said the government wanted to make clear its intentions and objectives before the federal-provincial meeting of finance ministers here Nov. 16.

Outside the House, an informant said Mr. Sharp did not believe his announcement would affect stock markets.

It was also learned the minister's statement was carefully examined by the whole cabinet Thursday and again Friday morning before the Commons met. But neither the minister nor the cabinet decided what taxes are to be raised, or by how much.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said Mr. Sharp's statement gave emphasis to the "very serious situation" in which the country found itself.

The proposed tax increase bore out the fear of opposition MPs and financial writers.

Mr. Lambert said the finance minister should have announced that a budget would be brought down at a certain date. Mr. Sharp asked him whether it would not be preferable to make such announcement after discussion among the House leaders.

HITS SHARP'S ACTION

The request for an emergency Commons debate on the development was moved by Michael Starr, interim Opposition leader. He said the minister's action in making the statement while the stock markets were open and without giving details could cause chaos.

"Is it that the government has got this country into bankruptcy?" he asked.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who has sat silent in the House ever since losing the Conservative leadership, said the government's action would "make a speechless member rise."

He accused the government of going from blunder to blunder.

Mr. Starr's motion was immediately seconded by New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas, who said the finance minister "has either said too much or too little."

The country is entitled to "a much fuller explanation," Mr. Douglas said.

The proposal also won Social Credit support. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke) said:

"The business before the House cannot compare in importance with the financial crisis suggested by the minister this morning."

DEBATE IMPLICIT

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste-Chapleau) said it is common knowledge that there is "nothing more permanent than temporary tax increases."

Solicitor-General Pennell said that an opportunity for debate is "clearly implicit" in Mr. Sharp's statement that the government intends to introduce measures later this month.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) immediately contested Mr. Pennell's contention. Mr. Knowles said the finance minister has actually "made it clear that he does not want the House, with Mr. Speaker in the chair, to debate this at all."

The finance minister's hope is that since the committee on ways and means is already in session, the matter will stay there, Mr. Knowles claimed.

Gilles Gregoire (Ind—Lapointe) said the prime minister requested all cabinet ministers to stay in Ottawa this weekend and this illustrated the urgency of the situation.

"What can we expect over the weekend?" the separatist Quebec MP asked. "The cabinet is going to sit over the weekend. Obviously some catastrophe is impending."

DETAILS LATER

To repeated questions by Mr. Douglas, the finance minister would only say he planned to announce details of the tax changes "later this month."

However, if House leaders of the opposition parties preferred to have the measures introduced by means of a full budget debate, he was agreeable.

The government was reluctant to propose this course "in view of other urgent business before the House. . . ." Opposition jeers drowned him out at this point.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary North) asked whether the minister would announce the results of the most recent Canada savings bond drive. Mr. Sharp said all figures are not yet available.

He said he planned to give a "complete account of the financial position of the government" when he introduces the tax measures.

Another indirect purpose behind his statement was to make mortgage money available for prospective home buyers at lower interest rates.

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Friday the government has further shaken the confidence of Canadians.

He made the comment to reporters after Finance Minister Sharp's announcement that taxes will be raised by an unspecified amount.

Mr. Stanfield said means must be taken to meet inflation but that it is "most regrettable to do this at the cost of the taxpayer."

Mr. Stanfield said the most charitable thing which could be said for the government was that it had allowed things "to get to this stage."

Pennell Flexible on Death Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Pennell pleaded with MPs Thursday to abolish at least partially the death penalty and authorize its use only for murderers of prison guards and police officers for a five-year trial period.

He directed a special plea to those who would do away with hanging in all cases:

"I believe that this bill will only be defeated in principle if there is an unhappy coalition between those who feel that the bill has not gone far enough and those who feel that it has gone too far."

He spoke as the Commons opened debate on his bill to limit the death penalty. Voting on the measure is to be free of party lines.

CONSIDER CHANGES

After second reading—approval in principle—Mr. Pennell said he would listen with "great interest and deep respect" to any amendments that might be moved.

An attentive Commons listened to 10 speeches—five favoring the bill, four against it and one undecided. The debate continues today with Prime Minister Pearson expected to be one of the speakers.

"There is an ancient expression . . . that half a loaf is better than no bread," said the Toronto lawyer. "It might be said by those who favor abolition that the present bill provides for 99-100 of the loaf and that it would be wrong to reject it."

Those who spoke against the bill laid heavy emphasis on the fact that Parliament, only 18 months ago, voted to retain hanging for all convicted murderers.

They also drew attention to the 27 commutations ordered by the cabinet since the Liberals took office in 1963. There have been no hangings in Canada since 1962 and so the country in effect already had done away with the death penalty, they argued.

Two speakers called on the cabinet to obey the will of Parliament and to hang those sentenced by the courts.

Mr. Pennell pointed too results of a study by a British royal commission that led to a U.S. bill ending hanging for a trial period.

He said most murderers are either insane, in the throes of violent passion or emotion or else calculating planners. In each case, the death penalty would not be a deterrent.

He quoted the British case of Timothy Evans, executed in 1950 for a killing later found to be the work of a prosecution witness, to point out possible miscarriages of justice.

He promised there would be no automatic parole of convicts given life imprisonment in lieu of the death penalty.

SOCIETY'S GUILLOTINE

Mr. Matheson said hanging is "cowardly" and while the bill is not perfect, it was a step in the right direction.

Mr. Stafford said society could be protected just as well by imposing life sentences on convicted murderers.

. . . BOMB

Toronto also was charged as a preliminary hearing into the case came to a close.

Britstone pleaded guilty to the stock fraud charges and was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $10,000.

Not Quite Perfect

EDMONTON (CP)—A police cruiser, looking for a perfect driver to receive the Edmonton safety council's daily $10 award, pulled a car to the curb and congratulated the woman behind the wheel.

The driver burst into tears.

She was unable to produce a licence. In fact, she had never taken a driver's test.

The $10 went to another motorist.

Arthur Mayse

A while ago I happened to note here that our faithful old plywood 13-footer draws the occasional snicker from pilots of flossier craft. Quick as a weasel, a guy in the boat - purveying business sat down to his typewriter and banged out a letter.

"In the boat business," he writes in part, "except for museum purposes, vintage boats have not increased in value on the market as have automobiles.

"Be that as it may, we felt we could not lose this opportunity to suggest that we have many craft of all sizes, in both power and sail, and would take great pleasure in helping you confront your friends with something as modern as tomorrow and convenient as today, for your frequent fishing expeditions."

Well, L.M., yours is a kind and thoughtful letter, and I don't mind telling you that it far outclasses the usual sales pitch. But I am not sure that I would be happy in something modern as tomorrow and convenient as today.

My boat and I, it happens, have been friends so long that we are on easy terms with each other. It knows I will never purposely ask more than it can accomplish, and I know that if we happen to misjudge the weather, it will bring me home.

Further, those convenient as today boats are too darn self-sufficient. They never need an overhaul, a fact that would cheat me of a spring rite that I cherish. There's something therapeutic about painting a well-sanded hull, with a curse fo each fly that mars the glistening finish.

Sooner or later, my veteran hull will quietly and apologetically dissolve under me, and if we don't end our fishing days together, I'll no doubt buy another boat.

But not one of those modern as tomorrow rigs. After all, who knows what shape tomorrow may take?

Granted that amateur meddling is hard for experts to take, I still wish that the extremely able curriculum revision committee had chosen to protest Education Minister Peterson's interference with one of their book choices by less sudden-death means than a group resignation.

Much better, I think to accept a silly ruling under protest, and continue to apply their special skills to the job of seeing that the student gets as close to full measure as they are permitted to give him.

The only echo of their academic hari-kari to reach my ears has been a triumphing call from a woman of baboon mentality who God-blessed the minister: a reaction which I'm sure was far from the committee's intent.

It has occurred to me more than once that Mr. Peterson could best serve education by immersing himself completely in his labor portfolio. But because the stream of knowledge runs muddy in spots, does it make sense to break the jug?

When dark falls early and lasts long, a traffic hazard that persists through all seasons becomes much more acute. This is the lightless bicycle; and though I have warned of it more than once here, it needs emphasizing again.

Typically, the bike that carries no light also carries no rear-fender reflector, or one so dirty that it is useless.

I doubt there's a driver who hasn't had at least one close miss in which only fast reflexes spared him from collision with one of these renegade bikes.

Unless the young rider happens to be wearing at least a scrap of light-colored clothing, he and his steed are all but invisible after dark. He rides in constant danger.

That's it, except to offer an unabashed plug for the Art Linklater secret-of-life special, "Where Did You Come From?" CJVI will repeat this 20-minute record at 11:10 a.m. Saturday and 11:05 a.m. Sunday for children over five and their parents. It's a splendid treatment of an oft-muffed subject.

Whole New Breed Of Teacher's Pet Enters Classroom

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Many routine time-consuming jobs—handing out equipment, copying charts, drawing maps on the blackboard—are being done not by teachers but by a teacher's aide.

The project is still on an experimental basis in Victoria although it has already proved highly successful throughout the United States.

"We do no actual teaching or disciplining," says Mrs. Duncan. "Everything we do and all our ideas are initiated by the teacher.

"The role of the aide is to assist with routine, clerical jobs, relieving the teacher of some of the more mechanical tasks.

"It's very desirable to have teachers' aides in the schools," says Lake Hill principal David Jones. "It gives the teacher more opportunity to plan, teach, evaluate, diagnose, and prescribe remedial measures."

A typical day for Mrs. Duncan may include preparing stencils, printing cardboard charts, tabulating marks, assisting in art classes and helping the kindergarten teacher with her records.

She does no secretarial work or typing.

Qualifications required for a teacher's aide? Grade 12, some experience managing groups such as the boy scouts or girl guides and any particular talents, artistic or musical.

275 APPLICATIONS

A committee of five principals considered 275 applications for the positions, choosing 20 to attend a special three-day orientation program before picking the final seven.

Mrs. Duncan, a mother of four, says she applied because "I like working with children."

"I'm also very fond of all types of handicrafts—painting, ceramics, sewing. When I'm asked to help with anything, it's fun. I enjoy it."

TRIAL, ERROR

Mr. Jones feels that as time goes on many of Mrs. Duncan's responsibilities will expand. "It's still in the experimental stages; there's a lot of trial and error involved."

The seven teaching aides are now being evaluated by the school board. Questionnaires have been distributed asking teachers' opinions of the innovation.

"As I understand it, the policy is to extend the number of aides next year," says Mr. Jones. "This would be welcomed by all."

It certainly seems so. Mrs. Duncan is in great demand. As she says, "Ever since I got here, there hasn't been a spare moment."

Year's Probation For Giving Liquor To 13-Year-Old

His companion was remanded for another month to await sentence.

In placing Edward Thomas, 2314 Bellamy, on a $250 bond he said he felt there was no ulterior motive in giving the boy liquor but it was a serious offence.

They were charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Work to Start On Test Station

Work will start immediately on the $325,000 motor-vehicle testing station in the Lakehill district of Saanich, the provincial public works department said today.

Contract for the work has been awarded to Burns and Dutton Construction (1962) of Richmond.

Gains, Losses in New Library Proposal

Vancouver Island Regional Library has proposed a new method of assessing library costs for its book services.

The board is studying a plan to assess costs on property assessment rather than on a per capita basis.

North Saanich, Sidney, Sooke School district, as well as most other Vancouver Island communities and school districts, would be affected.

For some municipalities, like North Saanich, it will mean a higher library budget, for others a lower.

Fred White, head of the regional library, said the new method is on "ability to pay."

The proposed change, he said, was not designed to increase the budget for the purchase of new books. It would remain the same as last year—$100,000.

The board is expected to vote on the issue early next year.

The changes in budget costs for communities in the capital region are as follows:

Sooke school (64) district will pay $33,524 instead of $39,838. This represents a mill rate of 1.019 as compared to 1.21.

In North Saanich the library budget will rise from $7,654 to $9,427, while Sidney's will drop from $8,379 to $6,692.

Assessments are higher in North Saanich than in Sidney, though the latter has actually a larger population.

New Zone Due For Saanich Light Industry

'Good Deal More' Than 40 Acres

While planning is still in the tentative stages, municipal planner Tom Loney said today he thinks the zone will be "a good deal more" than 40 acres.

"We may do this in stages so while the eventual plan would show a fairly large acreage it will be in fairly digestible bites as we go along," he said.

"We will be proposing a light industrial area of some sort. We hoped to have this to council before this but we have been tied up. I can't tell you at the moment the exact area or too much about it."

Already approved by council is a $300,000 warehouse and retail store for the T. Eaton Company department store just south of the Royal Oak Shopping Centre.

Another company, Simpsons-Sears, has applied for rezoning on 10 acres to the south, opposite Douglas Golfland between Vanalman, Glanford and Douglas, for a wholesale, retail warehousing distribution centre. This is expected to be considered by council Nov. 20.

NEXT MEETING

"The Simpsons-Sears type of use would probably fit into it (light industrial zone) although this is something we really can't comment on too much until it gets to council which should be at the next meeting," said Mr. Loney.

There are only two light industrial zones in Saanich—along Douglas Street near the city boundary and the Quadra-McKenzie area in the Lake Hill district.

The Royal Oak plan, said Mr. Loney, should be ready by late spring.

Asked if Saanich might follow other municipalities into land ownership of commercial zones, Mr. Loney said it might be a combination of public and private ownership.

"We have not got to the point of deciding," he said. "We are still looking at federal legislation, the possibility of the municipality buying land. We have not examined all the possiblities. I wouldn't rule out the possibility."

SHORT PASSAGE away from the Pacific Ocean, Victoria's Ogden Point docks at left are near the limit of maximum usefulness for lumber shipping. Persons concerned with the problem of keeping and augmenting this traffic suggest $¼ million in improvements could restore the port to efficient usefulness for years to come. Inclusion of VMD wharves at right could make for integrated facility with a total of seven deepsea berths.

Lumber Pre-loading Needed at Dockside

By AB KENT
Times Business Editor

A leading shipper today said improvements at Ogden Point docks could make it the second-ranking seaport on Canada's Pacific Coast.

Only the port of Vancouver, with multiple terminal facilities, has such easy access for deapsea vessels combined with rail and truck access, dockside storage sheds and grain elevators.

Western Lumber Carriers Ltd., a principal user of Ogden Point docks, would use the port indefinitely if some improvements are carried out, said company manager Hector Campbell.

At present, there is a tendency away from Ogden Point as a lumber shipping facility in favor of more commodious up-island lumber assembly areas.

ONE OF BEST

Mr. Campbell said Ogden Point is one of the best deepsea terminals on the coast for its size.

It is capable of berthing five vessels at a time, has rail siding and truck access to dockside, may handle lumber from the dock or from scows; general cargo and grain, and is under a single control.

With improvements to enable pre-loading of lumber at the dockside, Ogden Point would continue to be used by Western Lumber "indefinitely. There is no question," Mr. Campbell said.

The port is known for quick turn-around of ships through efficient handling of cargoes by longshoremen.

Its chief drawback as far as Western Lumber is concerned is the lack of assembly space under cargo slings.

Such space could be achieved easily with removal of a condemned shed on south "B" pier adjoining Victoria Elevator Co.

Sheds on "A" pier are generally sound and large enough to accommodate considerable general cargo, the volume of which has declined in recent years. Mr. Campbell feels there is no reason why this type of trade could not be restored.

These suggestions are expected to be made to Canadian National Railways, operator of the government-owned wharves, when a Victoria Chamber of Commerce delegation meets officials in Vancouver soon.

It is estimated unofficially that $250,000 spent on the docks would make them fully acceptable to both ship owners and shippers as a successful, modern deep-sea port for lumber handling and general purposes.

But at the moment, Mr. Campbell points out, it is impossible to place lumber so that it can be picked up directly by the ships that call.

Additional bulk storage area is not needed as badly as dockside storage, but the prospect of increasing both is suggested as a future use for premises soon to be vacated by Victoria Machinery Depot, adjacent to Ogden Point.

The former Rithet docks there would provide two more deepsea berths, and with demolition of sheds the desired dockside space for pre-loading would be created.

Access to the Rithet docks is easy, both from land and sea. Prior to the Second World War the trans-Pacific Empress fleet docked there without the aid of tugboats.

Police Vehicle In Collision

Gerald R. Hutchinson, 4892 Royal Oak, was treated for shock at Royal Jubilee Hospital after a car accident at Bay and Cedar Hill Road Thursday evening.

His car was involved in a crash with a police car driven by Const. Gerald R. Cox, of the city police department, 4010 Valley View Drive, who was uninjured.

Youth Made 100 Indecent Phone Calls

Psychiatric treatment today was recommended but not ordered by Magistrate William Ostler in suspending sentence on a 19-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to making indecent phone calls.

Kenneth George Sutton, 1535 Prospect Place, admitted making more than 100 such calls. He was charged on eight counts.

Magistrate Ostler ordering probation for two years on a $500 bond, called the action "contemptible" and said the matter was one to cause public indignation.

He said there are many complaints about such calls but cases rarely come to court.

"A deterrent is needed but this case calls for treatment."

'Big Help' To Welfare Department

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Victoria Real Estate Board is considering opening a clearing house to list all available low - rental housing in the city.

The proposal, already approved in principle by members of the executive, goes before the property management board next Tuesday.

If it passes that hurdle the Real Estate Board will make itself responsible for listing low rental housing as it comes on the market and informing the Victoria city welfare department of its availability.

The board agreed to look into the possibility of establishing the clearing house two weeks ago after Mayor Hugh Stephen was faced with the problem of locating accommodation for a mother and six children.

PUBLIC SERVICE

"I approached the president of the board, Gordon Fawcett, at the time and he was tremendously helpful and enthusiastic," the mayor said. "If they go ahead with the project it will be a fine public service to the community."

Mayor Stephen said the establishment of the clearing house would relieve one of the greatest headaches of welfare workers who are finding it increasingly difficult to find accommodation for low income families.

Ald. Ian Stewart, who several times in the past has expressed concern over the growing housing problem in Victoria, termed the proposal "excellent, a realistic step to restore the balance in this area.

"I sincerely hope the community will make use of the service if and when it is set up," he said.

"We look forward in the New Year to more housing starts to meet the demands. However, it is essential for the individual to realize that no level of government can solve this problem without the full co-operation of the private sector of the community."
